This map, provided by the Labor Day Task Force Office, shows what sections of Virginia Beach's resort area will be closed during Labor Day weekend. This map is subject to change.

Laborfest Traffic Plan Unveiled

The 1990 Labor Day Task Force traffic plan restricts most traffic, east of Birdneck Road, to local residents, employees and business owners. It also restricts traffic on Atlantic Avenue from the Loop to 42nd Street. Atlantic Avenue will be used for a festival area and will be crowded with pedestrians, but will still open to trolleys and authorized vehicles going to and from specific points.

Pacific Avenue will be used as a feeder route to Atlantic Avenue. All traffic going to Atlantic Avenue will use Pacific Avenue to reach the area, then go over to Atlantic Avenue via special entry points left open for that purpose.

All residents on and east of Pacific Avenue, employees, hotel guests and others so authorized, will have to be issued a pass that will allow them access into the restricted area, depending upon their needs and the city's guidelines for entry to the area.

Hotel guest passes will be for a one-time entry and will be collected upon hotel registration. Deliver and service vehicles that are obviously marked as such will only be allowed free access into the restricted areas based upon the conditions existing at the time and place that access is requested.

Tidewater Regional Transit will provide bus service to two parking areas and to Redwing Park. There will be a "mass transit lane" established on Route 44, from Lynnhaven Parkway to 21st Street and Atlantic Avenue.

All traffic eastbound on Route 44 will be instructed by signs that there is no parking at the Oceanfront. Directional signs will lead them off of the expressway to the satellite parking lots. Mass transit vehicles and those vehicles with "passports" will be allowed to exit the expressway at 21st Street and will be directed to their destination. All others will be returned to the expressway on 22nd Street and sent west. Directional signs will then lead them to the proper parking areas.

The city's Labor Day traffic map and Labor Day-related information is subject to change.

Laborfest Questions And Answers

Will the city release publicity after this event? Will there be a complete accounting of the weekend?

All information relating to Laborfest '90 is public information, except certain police data. Under the Freedom of Information Act, anyone can request to see city materials. The Labor Day Task Force Office will be providing a report to the city manager, documenting the process that went into coordinating the weekend. This, too, is public information.

What changes in ordinances have been proposed allowing residents of Virginia Beach to use city parks after dark?

No city ordinances have been changed to allow residents to use city parks after dark. City council was able to approve the issuance of a permit for Redwing Park because the existing ordinance referencing the park's use specifically states that the city manager cannot issue a permit.

Will Labor Day Community Coordination Committee members actively participate in "activities" that weekend?

The Labor Day Community Coordination Committee will be actively involved during Laborfest '90 as volunteers, and several committee members belong to non-profit groups sponsoring events.

Will each city council member be actively participating in "activities" that weekend?

The committee cannot speak for the individual council members. City officials hope that they will be present to demonstrate their support, and volunteer to assist in some capacity.

The city attorney has announced cutbacks in case loads in the city's courts, due to lack of funding and/or staff. With a crowd of this magnitude, ordinance infractions will be taking place. With "100,000 visitors," a one percent ticketing and/or arrest rate would mean 1,000 persons. Will the city attorney make an effort to make sure these persons are handled properly, or will minor infractions be overlooked?

First, some clarification is needed. The commonwealth's attorney is the one who has indicated he would cut back on caseloads, not the city attorney. Secondly, city ordinances will be enforced, as they are all year round, during the Labor Day weekend. Whether or not it is in the best interest of the state to prosecute certain infractions is entirely up to the commonwealth's attorney and not the Virginia Beach Police Department. Individuals who make reservations for the Laborfest weekend will be provided with a brochure which welcomes them to Virginia Beach and outlines local laws.

What is the projected cost to the city for the weekend (overtime, printing, consultants, etc.)?

The city is currently not projecting any costs for the Labor Day weekend. This isn't to say that some overtime won't be required or approved. The details for the weekend have not been completed and until they are, no estimates as to the number of personnel involved can be given. The Community Coordination Committee anticipates a large number of volunteers will be used during the weekend.

The printing costs which have already occurred are being reimbursed to the city by donations. The city's print shop did the initial printing, because it needed to be done as quickly and efficiently as possible. Any future printing requirements will be handled with outside funding or services donated.

No consultant has been hired for the weekend, and one probably will not be hired. The national public relations firm that is currently assisting with some Labor Day issues was hired to assist the city in an overall public relations effort. In 1989, the city experienced a season of no growth in tourism. This resulted from bad weather, increased competition and, in part, from Labor Day in 1989. This firm was hired by the city's local advertising firm to help restore the city's reputation as a nice place to visit and live.

Has there been a change made to allow restaurant owners or bar owners to determine if they may selectively serve alcoholic beverages?

According to the Virginia Alcoholic Beverage Control Board, owners of restaurants and bars have the authority to refuse to serve someone who they feel has had too much to drink or who is abusive and/or disorderly.

Since the name has changed from "Greekfest" to "Laborfest," this obviously is no longer an event primarily for the black college students. Was information also sent to predominantly white colleges? If not, why not?

Information regarding Laborfest '90 was sent to predominantly black colleges and universities and schools that had a significant registration of African-American students. The Labor Day weekend has historically attracted only black students. In addition, Virginia Beach does not want to market itself as a college resort. Since the city knew the majority of people coming are of African-American heritage, that was the audience targeted.

Where can I make a contribution? Virginia Beach Foundation, Post Office Box 4629, Virginia Beach, VA, 23454.

Checks should be made payable to: Virginia Beach Foundation for Laborfest '90.

Security: If the park is not fenced, how will the crowd be handled?

Some of the most appealing qualities about Redwing Park are its natural features, which provide excellent crowd management and security advantages. Norfolk State University will add fencing to certain sections of the park as the site prepared.

Will there be drug and alcohol control? If so, who will administer it?

Yes, all law enforcement agencies working in the area, including security personnel within the park, will administer such control.

How many police personnel are going to be assigned to the General Booth corridor and Redwing Park, and what security will be in or around the neighborhoods closest to Red Wing Park?

Forty-eight officers per day will be used, in addition to the normal zone patrols within the area. At least four of these officers will be on motorcycles, and will patrol General Booth Boulevard and the neighborhoods.

How many Norfolk State University personnel are going to be assigned to Redwing Park?

Such assignment will depend on the permit application. How many Virginia Beach officers are there? Six hundred.

How are emergency services going to be handled? The same as now. An emergency services plan is being developed to accommodate any special needs that arise due to the park's use.

Programs:

What entertainment will be featured at Redwing Park? Activities at Redwing will include a swimsuit contest, music, games, picnics, concerts and a step show. Norfolk State University is responsible for these events and will be announcing the talent to be featured, once final arrangements are made.

Revising Election Process Receives Plenty Of Support

Council Members And Civic Leagues Say Time Has Come For Reapportionment; Final Date For Public Comment Is Aug. 15

By Eliza Kay
Staff Writer

This is the second of two articles on reapportionment.

The recent Virginia Beach mayoral decision to appoint a Committee on Reapportionment has been greeted with resounding approval, according to informal telephone interviews conducted by The Virginia Beach Sun.

The reapportionment issue resurfaced after last spring's city council election. The current system has been in effect since the old city of Virginia Beach and Princess Anne County merged in 1963. Since then, the population has increased from 85,000 to 400,000.

Currently, the Blackwater Borough has only 1,035 citizens, while the Kempsville Borough has a population of 145,161. There is one councilmember representing each area. The issue is being analyzed by an 11-member committee to determine the fairest representation among districts.

Past and present councilmembers and several civic league representatives agree that the Virginia Beach election process needs revision.

"I think there has to be a change, but what I don't know," said Heather Malaby, Red Mill Farms Civic League president and Princess Anne Borough resident. "I'm not sure of the best way."

"I'm glad we're taking a look at it," said recently defeated councilman Al Balko, who in the May election won by more than 1,000 votes in the Lynnhaven Borough, but lost the election by approximately 700 votes citywide; thereby losing his seat on council. Balko said that he is glad to see "that I was a catalyst for change."

At-large councilman William Sessions said that although the issue has come up several times in the past, he is anxious to see what will happen this time. "I hope it won't be something we just look at. I hope this time some action will be taken," he said.

5K Run For The Arts To Attract 350 To 375 Runners

The Virginia Beach Center For The Arts Race Has A New, Scenic Route

By Karen Dalrymple
Staff Writer

The race is on. If things go as planned, that is, with no interference from Mother Nature, the sixth annual 5K Run for the Arts is expected to draw a record field of 350 to 375 on Saturday, August 11.

The 3-mile race, hosted by the Virginia Beach Center for the Arts, is "part of a fundraising strategy to create different events to reach different people," said the center's development director, Peter Lawrence.

Last year, $2,000 was raised, despite the rainy weather. Lawrence said he expects to raise about $3,500 this year.

"It's still not a huge amount of money, but it has doubled from previous years," he said.

The race was begun, by then

"It's a chance to get 250 people, the majority of whom haven't been here before, to check out the arts center." - Peter Lawrence.

center director Michael Marks, in 1984. Until two years ago, the race was run on the boardwalk. To increase awareness, Lawrence said, the course was changed.

"I was looking for a real fast course that people could really scout on, with not many turns," said R.P. Kale, designer of the new course. "Anything is an improvement."

Two Hundred Express Interest In Great Neck AARP Chapter

By Karen Dalrymple
Staff Writer

Their motto is: "To serve, not to be served."

They're not the Army, Navy or police force; they're the American Association of Retired Persons, a club for retired people aged 50 or older. Because of an increasing interest in the Great Neck area, a fourth AARP chapter will soon be established here.

"There are many people in this area in that age bracket that would love the chance to meet, but they don't want to drive across town," said Jim Ramborger, vice-president of the Bow Creek AARP chapter, and the man is responsible for forming the Great Neck chapter steering committee.

Ramborger, a Laurel Cove resident, saw a need for a chapter in his area. He assembled a small group of people in the community to act as a steering committee to get the idea off the ground. Each member of the committee accepted interim assignments as officers and/or chairpersons of standing committees.

The steering committee has been meeting for the past three or four months, Ramborger said, in an effort to expedite the club's formation.

"With the opening of the recreation center here, it offered a prime location for us to meet," said Ramborger, who is 72 years old.

William Whitehurst, director of the city's Department of Parks and Recreation, and steering committee member, made the arrangements for the committee to meet at the Great Neck Recreation Center.

"It's a way to get together and for older people to meet and have special activities," said the committee's publicity chairman, Maury Bailey.

Bailey, who lives near the intersection of Great Neck Road and Shore Drive, said the group must

Folk Arts Fest

Not Like Other Festivals

There are many festivals held in Virginia Beach each year - the Pungo Strawberry Festival, the Neptune Festival, the Knotts Island Peach Festival, and, the Virginia Beach Folk Arts Festival.

The first two festivals mentioned are always well-attended, drawing hundreds of thousands of people each year. The peach festival is only in its first year, so its success has not yet been determined. The folk arts festival, however, has been held for the past 16 years and is still going strong.

Some people have the attitude that if you've been to one festival, you've been to them all. That's not necessarily so. Sure, festivals usually consist of food, drinks, games and entertainment, but each one has its own certain style. Take the folk arts festival, for example. In addition to the many types of food, there will be an overabundance of entertainers.

It's a folk festival, like the name depicts, so of course there will be folk entertainment and crafts galore. Featured entertainers are the Old Dominion Cloggers, the Greater Metropolitan Pungo String Band and the Virginia Beach Highlanders. In addition, puppets, magicians and storytellers will be on hand to entertain the children.

Traditional handicrafts, needlework, jewelry, pottery, baskets, wood and stained glass will be on exhibit and demonstrations will be conducted. Strolling musicians will add a festive air to the event.

Many of the exhibitors and entertainers are residents of the community. This is your chance to see what kind of local talent Virginia Beach has. The festival will be held at Princess Anne Park; weather permitting. Bring the whole family; there's something for everybody! - K.L.D.

New AARP Chapter

Great Neck Residents Interested

Great Neck area senior citizens may have something to look forward to in a few months. An AARP (American Association of Retired Persons) chapter will soon be formed in their local community.

AARP is an organization that allows seniors the chance to meet new people, make lifelong friends, and travel with people with whom they have something in common. The group takes trips to Washington D.C. and other interesting sightseeing spots.

But, travelling is not all the organization does. AARP's main purpose is to help provide medical benefits to its seniors, regardless of their age or income. It also provides tax assistance and driving lessons. The group's goal is to help other seniors later on in life, when they may not be able to get around easily, or are housebound.

There are currently about 200 people in the Great Neck area who have expressed interest in the new chapter. Many of these people have lived in the area for many years and already know each other. This organization will give them a chance to become even better friends. It will also give them the chance to voice their opinions as a group. The seniors' voices do still count, so don't for a moment think they're not heard.

Any older adults who are interested in joining the chapter should do so. It's a great way to stay active and keep abreast of what's going on around you - K.L.D.

Run For The Arts

Race Is Scenic, Controlled

With a fitness craze running rampant through Virginia Beach these days, it only seems fit that the annual 5K Run for the Arts attract a lot of participants.

It's not the Boston Marathon, but it is a 3-mile competitive race. Diehard runners take a race like this seriously. Their final time at the end of the race sets a precedent for future races. They know what time they have to beat in a longer race.

The Run for the Arts, surprisingly enough, hasn't attracted too many people over the past few years. It rained last year, and the number of preregistered runners was already low. The race should attract a big crowd. The course travels through the scenic, tree-lined streets at the Oceanfront, with police officers maintaining traffic control.

Race proceeds go towards implementing more cultural programs at the Virginia Beach Center for the Arts. The race also attracts many people who have never before been to the center. This includes tourists as well as locals. There is much to see and do at the center, so a visit would be worthwhile and interesting.

For those who are not overly serious about the sport of running, the race is still a great way to keep in shape, be competitive and support a worthy cause. First-time racers may finally find their niche and make running a more important part of their lives. - K.L.D.

Reapportionment

Exercise Your Freedom

Virginia Beach Mayor Meyera E. Oberdorf was right on target with her decision to appoint a Committee on Reapportionment. Although many citizens do not seem to be aware of the issue, some city officials and community activists have many ideas on how to improve the city's election process.

There are so many ways that the process can be amended that the issue needs to be fully researched and designed to suit the Virginia Beach lifestyle. The citizens need to get involved and let the government know what they want for their city. All possibilities need to be exhausted before any decisions are made.

It took an incident like the defeat of former Lynnhaven Borough Councilman Al Balko to call the city's attention to the issue. However, at least it is now getting the attention it deserves.

When the time arrives for the citizens of Virginia Beach to decide which election system works for them, it is imperative that each and every individual stand up for their democratic belief and vote on the issue of reapportionment.

Don't let your freedom pass you by! - E.K.K.

Commentary

Streamline The Budget

The Citizens Action Coalition is a six-year-old, non-partisan, 300-member civic activist group which monitors local city government.

The Citizens Action Coalition, Inc., has for a good many years been a student of the city budget. We have never accepted the idea that the budget is always lean. A budget is only a plan, with many hundreds of contributors, and it is a fact that people are always prone to budget on the high side. If their requests are cut, they will get about what they wanted in the first place.

City Councilman Harold Heischler is now telling the community that the current budget is inadequate, and he is making overtures for another tax increase in January. We believe that he is premature in his approach and that the budget should be subjected to a critical mid-year review, with the hope of identifying and eliminating some of the fat that exists in the plan.

We would like to state, for openers, that for many years it has been the city's policy to give employees a paid lunch hour, either a single one-hour period or a half-hour period, with two 15-minute breaks. Although of such long standing that the practice is almost a tradition, it is not defensible. The Coalition recognizes the importance of high morale for city employees, but everyone must recognize there is a limit to taxation. It is often necessary to remind public administrations that they are working for the taxpaying public.

A few years ago, when the Coalition analyzed the city budget, it was concluded that the paid lunch hour was costing the city 1,300,000 work hours a year. This translates into millions of dollars in the budget. A review of the work schedules and work hours, on which much of the budget is based, might well be in order. Is it unrealistic to assume that the taxpaying employers of the city expect a fair day's work for a fair day's pay?

Another area that needs critical review is the city's purchasing practices. The history of Virginia Beach is rife with waste and outlandish expenditures, such as $600 for park benches, which is on par with the Defense Department's spending $200 for bolts and $600 for hammers. Some of the land deals in which the city has been involved would have caused people in the private sector to be fired. Unlike their counterparts in the private sector, many pro-business members of city council take these matters very lightly and allow the perpetrators to go merrily on their way with a pat on the head.

If the new city council members cut only half of the money that they pointed out was being wasted on consultants, there should be no difficulty in substantially cutting the budget.

There is no question that the city has many problems, or that its infrastructure needs are skyrocketing, as the Coalition predicted in 1985. But, before the council incumbents start reaching into the taxpayers' flat (not fat) wallets, they should sit down, examine the budget and come up with a viable plan to meet the city's needs, without creating additional taxes.

Reentering Old Europe

This article is written by Eric Shaffer, a columnist of The Chesapeake Post, a sister publication of The Virginia Beach Sun.

Someone, once said, "the more things change, the more they stay the same," and looking at the situation in Europe, I have to agree. We see the wave of revolutionary change sweeping Europe and the dismantling of old barriers. We applaud these events and take comfort from them because they are new. But should we?

What many see as change, I see as a return to the old; a time when Europe was a conglomerate of diverse cultures and countries. A place where clinic violence was the rule rather than the exception, and the spider web of treaties and alliances made diplomacy seem more like black magic than intercourse between civilized nations. It was also a place where the jingoism of "have not" nations led to adventurism that permitted governments to turn their citizens' attention from their failures to the promise of riches, at the expense of some less fortunate neighbor.

It was a place where small-minded leaders blamed misfortune on their more powerful nations and were believed. It was a place where history itself was distorted to justify national goals.

World War II and its aftermath changed that and gave us two major power blocks, who in spite of their mistrust, at least had some idea of what each side would do. But now we are returning to a Europe that will be made up of "have" and "have not" nations, each seeking their own place in the economic world and in seeking this place, will make those arrangements that are advantageous to them. In earlier times, the term "indorbos of Europe" was used to refer to the Balkans, the have nots of Europe and the have nots now. They chafed under the rule of the old empires, and eventually exploded, fanning the flames of World War I, engulfing even the new world in its searing heat. It was from these smoldering embers of discontent that World War II found its beginnings.

I find it hard to believe that they will not chafe under the "new empires" of a united Germany and Europe. It is even harder to imagine that either of these

Backyard Bonanza

This article is written by Phyllis Carr Johnson, a columnist of The Chesapeake Post, a sister publication of The Virginia Beach Sun.

Who says produce has to come from a grocery store? You can cultivate a green thumb and grow a bonanza in your own backyard. Here's a list to help you get started.

Tomatoes - These things are like math whizzes. Boy, can they multiply! Cherry tomatoes are fun to pick, and before you know it, there are 1,000 of the little suckers sitting in the bottom of your refrigerator.

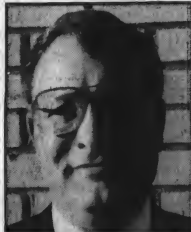

Solution - Get a wooden tub, two kids, and make ketchup, Lucy-style. Cucumbers - These are good in salads. Get the burpless kind, or after harvest, your fridge will be a noisy and vulgar place.

Eggplant - This is a colorful garden addition. For a matched set, get bacon plants to grow, also.

"Zoochini" - This is fun to eat, but hard to spell. You can make bread out of it at home, or you can sell it, and still make bread. It can be interwoven into polyester, and it is what all the fashionable animals are wearing to the beach this year.

Strawberries - Yum Yum. These red delights are good, but how did they

Laborfest '90 Draws Near

The weeks are getting fewer . . . the pace is getting quicker . . . and the mood is getting more festive as Laborfest '90 draws near. After all these months of planning for a positive and enjoyable event, the anticipation and excitement are building. People are beginning to realize that this event is a festival!

The Labor Day Task Force office reports an increase in offers of assistance and calls of encouragement. The volunteer list has grown and plans are underway for hundreds of volunteers in the resort area to greet visitors and help with events. Private sector fund raising has been successful and donations are still arriving.

Hats off to the Jewish Mother restaurant on Pacific Avenue between 31st and 32nd Streets! General Manager Scotty Miller tells me that the Jewish Mother will welcome visiting students with special entertainment, including a blues band and jazz combo. The Regular Education Initiative

Virginia Beach educators have become accustomed to living with change. We have watched the pendulum swing from one new educational concept to another. So, it is not surprising to see that along with curriculum and tracking, we are now seeing possible changes in the classroom structure of special education. This new concept that we are seeing nationally is called the Regular Education Initiative (REI).

The relationship between regular and special education has been an interesting one. Recent research presented by the National Education Association executive committee indicated that approximately eleven percent of the population, aged birth to 20, is classified as eligible to receive special education services. Of that population, approximately 2,000,000 children have been identified as "learning disabled." While considerable variation in the identification of these children exists, much discussion has taken place concerning their proper educational environment. Though we have fought to provide the most appropriate and least restrictive learning environment for children with special needs, discussion now indicates that perhaps some of these children have been placed in environments which have isolated them from the regular education population.

Neptune Festival Art Show Set

The Virginia Beach Center for the Arts will sponsor the Neptune Festival art and crafts show taking September 28 to 30.

The show will be held in conjunction with the 17th Annual Neptune Festival, a two-week long city-wide affair that includes performing arts, sandcastle building competitions, sports events, a medieval street fair and more.

More than 300,000 people are expected to attend the festival.

The show is limited to 350 artists and craftsmen who will display their work along the Virginia Beach boardwalk from 18th to 30th Streets. Many of the exhibitors who were present at the Boardwalk Art Show are expected to return for this show.

For the second year, the Neptune Festival art and craft show will be juried. Eligibility is broadly defined as to category, but all work must be original and created by the exhibitor.

There will be $2,000 in cash prizes awarded, with first prize taking $750. The 1989 first prize winners were Jan and Mel Fleck, for their entry in the graphics category entitled "Fishing and Fowling."

This year's judge, Rob Hawkes, is a Tidewater Community College drawing instructor and for 13 years taught in the painting and printmaking, communications arts and design, and the foundations areas of the Virginia Commonwealth University Art Department.

Applicants must submit a $5 non-refundable entry fee and an $85 space fee, along with slides or photographs of their work. Interested artists and craftsmen should apply early.

For further information or to receive an application, contact the Virginia Beach Center for the Arts at 425-0000.

Leeds Speaks At Arts Center

The Virginia Beach Center for the Arts will host art historian and curator Valerie Leeds on Sunday, August 5 at 4 p.m. She will present a slide program titled At the Water's Edge.

Leeds organized At the Water's Edge: 19th and 20th Century American Beach Scenes while she was curator of exhibitions at the Tampa Museum of Art, a position she held from 1987 to early 1990.

She will address the importance of artists she selected for the exhibition, with particular emphasis on how societal changes in fashion, travel, literature and consumerism of the times influenced artists.

Leeds' talk will be held in the Center's Price Auditorium and is free and open to the public. This lecture is partially funded by the Affiliate Program of the Virginia Museum of Fine Arts, and the Virginia Beach Arts and Humanities Commission.

The Virginia Beach Center for the Arts is located at the corner of 22nd Street and Park Avenue, across from the Pavilion Convention Center.

Police Seek Christie's Murderer

Sometime during the night of Friday, July 15, 1988, 83-year-old Anastasia N. Christie was murdered.

Virginia Beach Crime Solvers would like the community's help and is offering a cash reward of up to $1,000 for information that will lead to an arrest. An additional $10,000 reward is being offered by her family and friends.

Christie was found by her son in her home in the 300 block of 25th Street at the Oceanfront about 12:30 p.m. the next day. She had been sexually assaulted and died as a result of being beaten. The man responsible for the murder is believed to have entered the house through a window and attacked Christie as she slept.

Anyone with information about this murder should call Crime Solvers at 427-0000. Both rewards

Amburns Win Cavalier Golf Tourney

Local golfers, Ed and Mary Alice Amburn, recently won the Dewar's Scotch Foursome golf tournament held at the Cavalier Golf and Yacht Club.

The couple had a low score of 63. They are now eligible to advance to a regional tournament, along with Cavalier club pro, Charles Leibner.

All three have the opportunity to win an expense-paid golfing vacation to Scotland.

Upchurch and Russell

Upchurch, Russell Are Engaged

Miss Sharon Louise Upchurch of Virginia Beach and Mr. Jeffrey Todd Russell of Chesapeake have announced their engagement.

Upchurch is the stepdaughter of Mrs. Julie M. Upchurch of Chesapeake and the daughter of the late Mr. Everett L. Upchurch and the late Mrs. Marcia Upchurch.

Russell is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Travis L. Russell of Chesapeake. Upchurch graduated from Indian River High School and Virginia Tech. Russell graduated from Great Bridge High School and Virginia Tech.

The wedding will take place Saturday, Sept. 15 at the First Baptist Church of Norfolk. The couple plan to make their home in Chesapeake.

Southeastern Jewelry Exhibit Set

The Virginia Beach Center for the Arts will sponsor the southeastern jewelry design exhibition and sale, a juried jewelry show, on December 8 and 9.

The show is limited to 40 exhibitors, who will display jewelry of their own design and execution. The jurying process will emphasize originality of design and quality of craftsmanship in its selection of jewelers.

Based on applications in the jewelry category to the Boardwalk Art Show and the Neptune Festival art and crafts show, there is expected to be plenty of styles and a wide variety of materials, from paper and found items to 14-karat gold and precious gems.

All original jewelry designers or crafters are invited to apply. For more information or to receive an application, call the Virginia Beach Center for the Arts at 425-0000.

75-Piece Exhibit At VBCEA

The Virginia Beach Center for the Arts will present a group of emerging artists, in a show entitled At the Feet of the Masters, on Wednesday, August 1 at 6 p.m.

The approximately 75-piece exhibition will feature works by students of artist Renata Keep. None of the artists, ages 17 to 70, have had more than two years experience. Keep lays the foundation for future masterpieces after the brush strokes of such greats as Rembrandt, Millet, Monet or Seurat. Each student will display a work patterned after one of the masters, with personal touches of their own.

The exhibition will be on view through the month of August. The center is located on the corner of 22nd Street and Park Avenue.

Miller Addresses Geographic Society

Cox High School geography teacher Gary Miller held a two-day workshop during a recently conducted National Geographic Society conference for social studies teachers.

Miller's workshop was part of a five-day field trip through Virginia. It focused on environmental tensions stemming from land use for recreational purposes. A trip to Back Bay National Wildlife Refuge allowed participants to examine the impact land development has had on marsh life.

Miller, 17-year Virginia Beach teaching veteran, attended the society's 1987 conference and was asked to join the society's faculty the following year.

Reading Club Party Scheduled

The Great Neck Library will host a party for all Summer Reading Club participants and their families on Thursday, Aug. 9 at 7 p.m. on the library's lawn.

Petty Officer 3rd Class Thomas S. Mullins, son of Thomas E. Mullins of Virginia Beach, is serving aboard the cruiser USS Leahy, one of three U.S. ships this week hosting ships of the Soviet Pacific Fleet during an unprecedented five-day visit to San Diego beginning July 31.

Local Sailor To Meet Soviets

By Rachel J. Steele
Special To The Virginia Beach Sun

In 1939, Winston Churchill described the Soviet Union as a "riddle, wrapped in a mystery inside an enigma." Today, in the spirit of glasnost and perestroika, people-to-people exchanges are helping to unravel many of the mysteries.

Thomas S. Mullins, son of Thomas E. Mullins of Virginia Beach, will soon make history in one such exchange. Mullins, a sailor aboard the cruiser USS Leahy, will participate in the first Soviet Navy ship visit to the West Coast.

"I think the Soviet ship visit is great," said Mullins. "I am honored that the Leahy was chosen to be a host ship."

Two Soviet destroyers, the General Vinogradov and Boyevoy, and the oiler Argun, are now visiting San Diego for the unprecedented five-day visit. Along with 800 sailors, the ships will carry a group of 145 Soviets, including officials, band members, a soccer and volleyball team, and a song and dance troupe.

"This visit is important because it shows that East-West tensions are easing," said Mullins, a 20-year-old Navy sonar technician and a 1987 J.J. Kelly High School graduate. "It is also important because we will actually meet and talk with our Soviet counterparts."

The visit was part of a military exchange program established with the Soviets by Adm. William Crowe, former chairman of the U.S. Joint Chiefs of Staff. Last July, three Soviet Navy ships visited Norfolk. The U.S. Navy visited Sevastopol in the Crimea last September and will visit Vladivostok in the Soviet Far East this September.

The Leahy has been part of history between the two countries before. In 1972, the cruiser became the first U.S. Navy ship since World War II to visit the Soviet Union.

American and Soviet sailors will meet face-to-face to learn more about each other's Navy and how their jobs and lifestyles compare. While the Soviets are in San Diego, they will visit the fleet and naval training centers, fire fighting and damage control schools, and attend a wreath-laying ceremony. Visits to the San Diego and Sea World are also on the agenda, along with a beach party and western-style rodeo and barbecue.

"I am hoping to learn much about their Navy and their country," said Mullins, a petty officer third class. "Some of the things I would like to learn is how their Navy is set up, the ranks of officers and enlisted servicemen, how much they get paid and their basic naval traditions."

Although Mullins expects to learn things about the Soviet Navy, he also hopes to show the Soviet sailors something about the pride, professionalism and quality of life of the American sailor.

"I hope they learn that America is a peaceful nation, made up of many different races," said Mullins. "I want them to understand how our government and our economy works. Most of all, I hope they understand we would like to be friends."

broadening the scope of services available to the special education students, the availability of services to the regular education student would also be enhanced. What it was not meant to do was to keep children out of special education programs, nor was it meant to prematurely remove children from programs.

In order to ensure that the students' needs are being adequately met, it would appear that people who are most directly involved with the student, such as parents and teachers within the student's school, should have input into what would be in the child's best interests. Further, schools would be better served where site-based decision-making was a part of the daily flow of activities. In situations where the special education teachers services were more consultative, their expertise should be used to benefit all children. Direct service delivery could also be included.

Sensitivity to children's needs should be a top priority. Class size continues to be an issue, which becomes a critical in a situation where the REI is being implemented. Classrooms with many children clamoring for the teacher's individual attention become doomed to failure in a situation where there are children with special needs who also need considerable attention. Smaller classes and/or situations where the students are "weighted" according to their specific need provide a better learning and teaching environment.

As we begin to see REI's implementation, we see the immense challenge which it provides us all. Issues, such as availability of materials and class size, continue to be issues which will be present in any successful bid for educational change.

political and economic organizations will be any more successful in restraining ethnic jealousies than the League of Nations or the United Nations were or have been. Even the dissolution of the Soviet Union bears a chilling similarity to the breakup of czarist Russia.

While I do not support a system, communism, that so totally ignored the well being of its people that it collapsed, I did take a certain comfort in dealing with a devil that we had come to understand. This understanding provided a certain sense of security, a sense that is rapidly diminishing as Europe reorders itself along the old divisions.

History has shown us that even the black magic of diplomacy was unable to forestall either of the world wars because of the jingoism and self-serving policies of a Europe divided along national lines. Regardless of my views on the benefits of a simple east-west antagonism, we are reentering the more complex world of old Europe.

I just hope that our leaders realize what this will mean.

Watermelon - I sure beats paying $4 for one at the store. It takes a lot of patience to watch these grow in the backyard, and kids are tempted to pick them and use them for footballs. If they don't get thumped to death first, a watermelon feast could be in order.

Squash - These are another bright garden addition. After drying, squash can be used as musical instruments. If fresh, they can be prepared in many different ways and then eaten. Don't wait until they are too ripe, or they will live up to their name.

Judy Connors, Water Oaks Condo Association secretary, was one of the 15 Virginia Beach citizens who attended the July 18 public hearing of the matter. "There seems to be a need for a better way of doing it," she said. "We're all concerned about it." Connors is a Bayside Borough resident, which is home to approximately 67,774 citizens.

Although the demand for reapportionment in Virginia Beach appears obvious, the solution to the problem is not. There are many suggestions as to how the process should be amended.

Robert Fentress, Virginia Beach Vice-mayor, had one solution. "It appears to me," he said, "that with the number of people living in Virginia Beach, it would be better to leave 11 councilmembers and reapportion the city into 10 fairly equal boroughs or districts."

"However, when I say fairly, we must give consideration to how to redistrict the Pungo and Blackwater Boroughs because they are totally different areas. Also, the Virginia Beach Borough, which is my borough, has the largest amount of commercial property, so it should be looked at differently."

"Kempsville is big enough to be a city by itself. I think that the mayor should be directly elected and each of the remaining 10 council seats should be assigned a borough to represent. The election should remain at-large," Fentress said.

Fentress added that the three at-large positions could easily be used in the three largest boroughs. "The bottom line is that I do believe in equal representation," he said. Fentress also said that a totally borough election would have too many pitfalls, but that it may be a good idea to reduce the city to nine boroughs.

Connors' main suggestion was that the city should equal out the representation in the boroughs. "What (Senator) Clancy Holland proposed at the public hearing had a lot of merit," she said. "I do not think the best interest will be served by having a strictly borough election."

Balko, who tried to get the reapportionment issue changed prior to the last election, fell prey to the system's flaws. "Two years ago I brought the issue up to council because I think the numbers are wrong," he said. "The system was good for 25 years, but the city has grown in population so much that it is time for a change. If you take 400,000 people and divide by 10, there should ideally be 10 districts with 40,000 people in each one. The population rolls over every three to five years anyway."

"If you are a state representative, you have a precinct or borough that you represent and the voters do not vote at-large. I'd like to see the election system become a totally borough election with the mayor elected at-large," Balko said. He added that he has no problem with the size of the council.

Malaby said that she was concerned about the issue because she didn't think that it was fair that the "rest of us can tell Lynnhaven who will represent them," referring to the unprecedented Balko incident.

"I think we should take a look at what other places do that has worked and give the public several options to vote on," she said. "Maybe we should have two less at-large candidates so that it would encourage more competition in the neighborhoods. I'm not real sure what the at-large seats are good for."

Malaby added that the reason public opinion is dormant is because no one wants to think about it in mid-July. "No one will care until September or October," she said.

Sessoms said that he had "fairly strong thoughts on the issue."

"I think the size of council should be reduced. I'd like to see it down to seven, but realistically it will probably be better at nine," he said. "There should be seven equal boroughs with everyone elected at-large. If we have nine councilmembers, there should be two at-large councilmembers. I think that a new process will increase efficiency," Sessoms said.

There are many ways to amend the election process in Virginia Beach. Several, but not all, have been presented in this article in an attempt to heighten public awareness of the options confronting all Virginia Beach residents, not just city leaders and civic activists.

The final date for public comment is Wednesday, August 15. To make a suggestion or comment or the reapportionment issue write to: Robert Matthias, intergovernmental relations coordinator, Room 333, City Hall Building, Virginia Beach, 23456.

Laborfest

What is the full schedule of events?

Outside of Redwing Park, the following activities are scheduled: an opening and closing ceremony, volleyball games and various beach activities, a parade, basketball, a job fair at the Pavilion, a football game at Foreman Field, a step show and a dance show. In addition, there will be other activities, not sanctioned by the Community Coordination Committee, taking place at Towne Point Park, Scope and perhaps the Hampton Coliseum.

Can local residents attend events? If so, do they need to buy tickets?

All events, including ticketed ones, are open to anyone who desires to attend. Certain events will require that a ticket be purchased. This is necessary to pay for the cost of the entertainment and the facility.

Who's going to pay for lights, buses and fences around parks, if they are going to be provided?

The event's sponsor is responsible for upgrading the park, including lighting, additional utilities, fences, etc. The ticket cost for Redwing may include a portion for the transportation. That is one of the details that still needs to be worked out.

Who is paying for events for Labor Day?

Public funds will not be used to entertain visitors on Labor Day. Instead, as Daytona Beach and other resort areas have done, the city's seeking private funds and corporate sponsors to help provide activities. This is the task of the private sector subcommittee.

How many tickets for the events be purchased?

This is one of the details that is currently being discussed. When detailed planning for the events has been completed, ticket information will be available.

Logistics:

How will city residents gain access to the Oceanfront if Atlantic and Pacific Avenues are closed?

City residents living within the immediate Beach Borough area, particularly those residing east of Birdneck Road, will be provided with some form of identification to facilitate their movement into and from their homes. Citywide, residents from other areas may experience difficulty entering the Beach Borough, proper. This is based on the assumption that there will be full occupancy loading of all available facilities and that the crowd density is at its maximum. Satellite parking could be utilized with residents riding the bus into the Beach Borough.

What streets, other than Atlantic Avenue and Pacific Avenue, are going to be closed or have a change in traffic patterns?

Five major entrance and exit points into the Beach Borough will have some form of directed traffic pattern, assuming the initial planning model is utilized. Atlantic Avenue, from 9th and 42nd Streets, and Pacific Avenue, from 9th and 31st Streets, will be definite closures.

What Expressway exits are going to be affected?

Three major Expressway exits that should be affected by traffic patterns will be Birdneck Road, First Colonial Road and Lynnhaven Parkway. At the peak transit times associated with this event, it is logical to assume that these east bound facilities will be heavily utilized.

Will pedestrian traffic be allowed into Redwing Park? Surrounding communities have been told that they may attend, so walking would not be out of the question.

During the events Norfolk State University sponsors, pedestrian traffic will not be permitted. Only those guests arriving by means of provided transportation and buses which are properly ticketed for the event will be allowed entry. Residents may catch a bus in the area of 25th Street; however, a ticket will be necessary.

How many Tidewater Regional Transit buses will be used?

Tentative projections indicate at least 100 buses will be utilized.

How many people does each bus hold?

Each bus holds approximately 60 people.

What is the projected time from Redwing Park to parking and/or Oceanfront?

Projected time from Redwing Park to the parking areas or the oceanfront ranges from 10 to 20 minutes.

What are the hours that Tidewater Regional Transit expects to be running buses?

TRT has not determined its exact schedule at this point, but it will maintain bus service for all approved and scheduled events.

Are all residents employed by businesses on the oceanfront required to also use satellite parking and TRT?

At the moment, it is envisioned that residents who work at businesses along the Oceanfront will be provided entry passes in order to move within the general area; however, it is conceivable that they, too, could be directed to satellite parking (possibly the lot at 1st Street and another at the North End) under certain conditions, and required to ride the bus into the beach area. This particular logistic function is still under review and there are several options to weigh and evaluate.

Where exactly is the satellite parking?

Projected satellite parking will be located along: 1) Potters Road and Oceana Air Field (the old Acey Ducey Club area) and 2) off of Lynnhaven Parkway in vacant land near the Industrial Park and Toll Road (directly across from Lillian Vernon Company on International Parkway).

How are passes going to be distributed to residents and guests?

This still needs to be determined.

Where will all checkpoints be located?

Traffic control points will be determined by the city's Traffic Engineering Department and the Virginia Beach Police Department, using several different models. Those control points could conceivably range from eight to 20 different locations, depending upon the model utilized.

How many persons are allowed in the park at one time?

The events at Redwing are being planned to accommodate 25,000 to 30,000 people.

Concerning using Atlantic Avenue and Pacific Avenue traffic for church on Sunday. Will residents have to pay to park and ride a bus?

This is a consideration still not finalized. A number of suggestions have been offered, including allowing churchgoers access to the church parking lots.

Many locals go to the beach on 78th Street. They usually use Pacific Avenue. How are they going to get there?

Going north of 42nd Street for local traffic other than residents of the Beach Borough area, it may be necessary for other city residents to access north Virginia Beach via Route 60 from Great Neck Road.

Have the following locations been addressed: Pavilion, Dome, Mount Trashmore, Camp Pendleton, Seashore State Park and Met Park?

Reception Held For New City Council Members

Mayor Meyera Oberdorf addresses the council members and guests.

The Kempsville High School String Ensemble performed on the lawn prior to the ceremony and inside the house during the reception.

Charles R. Burke, the house's Board of Governors chairman, welcomes the guests.

Lee Lively, as "Captain Land," and Mayor Meyera Oberdorf present Councilman James Brazier with a key to the Francis Land House.

The Francis Land House Board of Governors recently hosted a reception, to which the public was invited, honoring the 1990-1992 Virginia Beach City Council. In welcoming the guests, Charles R. Burke, chairman of the board, noted that a forward-looking city council in the 1980s determined that the best use of the house was to keep it as an historic site and open to the public. One of its primary uses was to be a place for official receptions and meetings.

Council members, accompanied by family members, arrived at the Francis Land House aboard a Tidewater Regional Transit trolley. Each member was escorted to his or her seat by costumed volunteers.

Mayor Meyera Oberdorf addressed the council members and guests, and cited the challenges facing Virginia Beach in the immediate future, as well as the next decade.

Congressman Owen B. Pickett congratulated the newly elected council members and pledged his personal support to the entire council as it leads the city into the decade of the '90s.

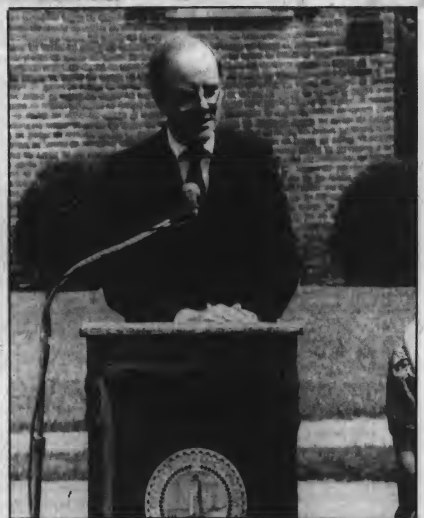

"Captain Francis Land," impersonated by Lee Lively, greeted those gathered on the lawn of his family home, noting that the task of public service is often avoided by all but the most selfless and dedicated members of the community. He further stated that having had the duty of representing this locality on that elective body known as the House of Burgesses, he had a deep understanding and respect for the difficult responsibilities the council members undertake.

Assisted by Oberdorf, Captain Land presented each council member a symbolic key to the Francis Land House. Upon invitation of Captain Land, guests were received by the council inside the house and were served refreshments by costumed volunteer docents.

Variety Of Entertainment At Folk Arts Festival

The Virginia Chapter of Sweet Adelines, a chorus of 40 women, will entertain with their barber shop harmony.

Harold Wood will juggle his way through the crowds at the festival.

The 16th Annual Virginia Beach Folk Arts Festival will be held on Saturday, August 4, and Sunday, August 5 from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. at Princess Anne Park, at the corner of Princess Anne and Landstown Roads.

A variety of entertainment is scheduled, including the Old Dominion Cloggers, the Greater Metropolitan Pungo String Band and the Virginia Beach Highlanders. In addition, magicians, puppets and storytellers will be on hand to entertain the children.

Traditional handcrafts, needlework, jewelry, pottery, baskets, wood and stained glass will be on exhibit, and demonstrations will be conducted. Strolling musicians will add a festive air to the occasion. Refreshments will be available.

Admission and parking are free. In case of rain, the festival will be held at the Virginia Beach Community Recreation Center - Kempsville.

For additional information, call 471-5884.

Track and Dreda McCreary, of "Everkleer," have an unusual sound of music.

Pam Goss will feature wheat weavings.

Ted Davis, Mike McMasters and John Ickes, of "Chesapeake," will perform at the festival.

AARP

soon decide when it will regularly meet.

"Most chapters meet in the daytime because of the large number of elderly people," said Rambarger.

The steering committee met recently to elect officers, determine an official name for the chapter, and select a meeting day. All this information must be turned into the national AARP headquarters, Rambarger said. It should take two to three months before the chapter is officially formed.

There are currently 200 people in the Great Neck area who have expressed interest in joining the chapter. All of those 200 people are already national AARP members, but very few are members of other local AARP chapters, although a person can belong to as many chapters as he likes.

Bailey said there is a demand for such a club in Great Neck. The 200 prospective members came forward before the committee even began publicizing the new chapter. Bailey recently distributed flyers to area churches, synagogues, retirement homes and high rise facilities located primarily in the 23451 and 23454 zip code areas. But, those who are interested in joining the chapter don't necessarily have to live in the Great Neck area.

The AARP's purpose is "to establish benefits and be a voice in the government for elderly people from a medical standpoint," according to Rambarger.

"It's a joint effort in promoting the welfare of persons beyond the age of 50," he added.

AARP also provides tax assistance and driving lessons, but its main focus is medical benefits.

"Everybody gets sick," Rambarger said. "They have a strong voice in the legislation that may benefit the elderly."

"It's a way to give input to the national organization and feed them some of our thoughts," said the 64-year-old Bailey.

The chapter will also plan trips to such places as Washington, D.C., or New York City, and hosts speakers to talk about subjects directly related to the elderly. At the recent meeting, a speaker addressed the group about people who try to "rip off" the elderly.

Rambarger said many AARP members are well educated and members don't have to have a minimum income to belong.

"It's a time of fellowship and camaraderie and a time when they can take advantage of benefits," he said. "It's a matter of support. If it weren't for this organization, many people would be sitting around waiting for the morician."

Chapter members will also receive a subscription to Maturity, a magazine for the elderly, and discounts on prescriptions.

"I think it's going to be very successful," said Bailey. "We seniors are getting organized. We're going to take over the world."

ment from the boardwalk."

The current course begins at the center, travels up Old Virginia Beach Boulevard to Birdneck Road, north to Laskin Road, and then east on Laskin to the boardwalk. The course then heads south to 22nd Street, and west to the center's finish line.

"It's a great runners' course. The runners loved the race," said Lawrence.

He said the tree-lined, scenic course is pleasing to most runners. He added that last year, the city handled the traffic control very well. "We think if we do a little extra each year, it could really turn into a big race," said Lawrence.

The race, which begins at 7 a.m., is divided into eight men's and five women's divisions. The race is open to men ages 12 and under; 13 to 19; 20 to 29; 30 to 34; 35 to 39; 40 to 49; 50 to 59; and 60 and over.

Women's categories are: 19 and under; 20 to 29; 30 to 39; 40 to 49; and 50 and over.

Mark Lamb, 26, entered the race for the first time last year. He didn't win, but he didn't do too badly either.

"It rained and that was the tough thing. I think I did like 24 minutes or something," said Lamb, a sales manager for a local transportation company.

The winning times last year, Lawrence said, were 15:08 for the men, and 18:04 for the women.

"It's a good group of people. It's not that competitive. You recognize a lot of people," said Lamb. "I guess if I was a great runner, I'd have a different point of view."

Kale, who has been a Tidewater Striders member since 1986, had originally registered to run in this year's race, but his involvement in coordinating the race takes up too much of his time, he said. The Striders sanction the race each year, and also help out planning it, and on race day.

All first, second, and third place winners of each category will be awarded trophies, Lawrence said. The first 250 runners will receive an official race t-shirt, designed by local artist Mark Atkins.

Bill Ellsworth, another local artist, has created a watercolor painting for the men's and women's first place winners.

"It's a contribution he makes every year to the center," said Lawrence.

The event will also feature giveaways, where each runner's shirt number is put into a hat and chosen for discounts to area hotels, restaurants and free memberships to the center.

The cost to enter the race is $10, through August 6, and $12 every day after, including race day. Preregistration for the race is at 6 a.m.

"It's a chance to get 250 people, the majority of whom haven't been here before, to check out the arts center," said Lawrence.

Hog, Deer Hunt Set At Back Bay

Back Bay National Wildlife Refuge will hold a seven-day deer hunt for white-tailed deer and feral hogs from Oct. 6 to Oct. 13.

The hunt's first day will be limited to bow hunting. The remaining six days will be open to gun hunting. No hunting will take place on Sunday, Oct. 7.

Refuge manager, Anthony D. Leger, stated that the refuge hunts, which have been held annually since 1986, are designed to reduce over-populated herds. Hunting will once again take place on 2,007 acres of refuge lands, contained within several predetermined zones. Habitat to be hunted will include marsh, forestlands and fields. All hunting will be in accordance with state regulations and bag limits, and is subject to additional refuge-specific regulations.

A total of 62 hunters per day will be issued hunting permits. Reservations for hunt days and zones will be on a computer lottery basis. Hunters must submit an application form postmarked no later than Sept. 7 to be eligible for the lottery. The lottery will be held on Sept. 17 at the refuge headquarters and will be open to the public. A list will be posted at the Visitor Contact Station and all selected hunters will be notified by mail. Each selected hunter will be charged a $10 cost recovery fee.

Nearly 560 applications were received for the 434 hunting slots available in 1989. During the seven-day event, hunters harvested 38 deer - 23 does and 15 bucks. The overall success was 10 percent.

According to Leger, the hunt provides an opportunity to manage wildlife populations, as well as providing wildlife-oriented recreational opportunities in the Virginia Beach area. Currently, the refuge provides opportunities for bird watching, photography, hiking, bicycling, fishing, nature study and for participation in educational programs.

The hunt serves a wildlife-oriented public that has traditionally supported the management of National Wildlife refuges and other public lands. The refuge will be closed to all other uses during the hunting period.

Individuals interested in participation in the Back Bay hunt should contact the refuge at 804-721-2412 to receive a hunter information packet. Written requests should be made to the refuge manager, Back Bay National Wildlife Refuge, P.O. Box 6286, Virginia Beach, VA 23456-0286.

Bayside Kiwanis Set Old-Fashioned Barbecue

The Bayside Kiwanis Club will hold an old-fashioned barbecue on Saturday, Sept. 8 from 1 to 6 p.m. at the Holiday Trav-L-Park on General Booth Boulevard.

The barbecue will feature pork barbecue, hush puppies, cole slaw and baked beans.

Door prizes, based on random drawings of tickets presented at the barbecue, will be held throughout the afternoon.

Despite Negative Stories, Beach Tourists Coming Back

Sun Survey Says Tourists Like Boardwalk, Clean Beach And Seafood

Stories by Kerry L. Hoffheimer Staff Writer

Tourists visiting Virginia Beach last weekend told The Virginia Beach Sun that they had heard stories about last year's Labor Day weekend uproar, which would deter them from coming here during the Labor Day weekend, but they also said that these tales did not affect their overall positive view of the city.

"I don't think last year's Labor Day fiasco reflects on the city. It reflects on a handful of people out looking for trouble, who just happened to be in Virginia Beach at the time," said 39-year-old John Blancher, a disc jockey from Washington, D.C.

Blancher said, though, that he would not come to Virginia Beach during Labor Day, "to avoid trouble."

Of the 30 tourists interviewed in a beach and boardwalk survey last Saturday afternoon and Sunday morning, many said that the city is still a fine vacation spot.

"I've got two teenage kids and this is a place where the whole family can come and have fun. I've been coming here for 15 years and I don't intend to stop just because some young people caused a ruckus here last Labor Day," said 39-year-old Tom Griest, an accounting manager from Pittsburg, Pa.

Favorite Virginia Beach attractions the tourists mentioned included the beach; the boardwalk; fresh seafood, surf shops; attractive females (and, respectively, males); and various restaurants and bars.

Favorite city qualities to which the tourists referred included cleanliness, residents' friendliness, close proximity of shops and restaurants, and "things to do" for all age groups, such as peaceful dinners and dancing, for the older folks; and "cruising the strip" and "hanging out" on the boardwalk, for the younger crowd.

"This beach is nicer than other beaches I've been to," said 28-year-old Kevin Greenwell, a bartender from Evansville, Ind. "I heard there was a bunch of looting last Labor Day. I'm glad I missed it... everything seems

Business At Oceanfront Parking Lots Slow; Some Prices Lowered

There are many indicators that business is slower at the oceanfront than usual this year.

One such index is the lack of business at many oceanfront parking lots, which has led some owners and managers to drop prices.

"There are fewer people here this summer, and they're not willing to pay as much to park their cars," said Robert Baroddy, an attendant at the beach parking lot on 10th Street and Atlantic, behind Il Giardino restaurant. "Last year we charged $5 for the day and this year we have to wrestle for $5."

John West, the attendant at the lot across the street, on Atlantic, had similar remarks. "Weekdays here are pretty slow. Weekends aren't a whole lot better."

Tommy Pope, who works an Atlantic Avenue lot, said he did not work a beach lot before this summer, but "people tell me last year there were more people and more cars here last year," he said.

The smaller lots up and down the beach were relatively empty last Saturday and Sunday.

Tommy Dennis, an attendant at a 5th Street and Atlantic lot, said "It's been real quiet here lately. There haven't been too many cars." Dennis said his lot is charging comparatively low rates, "so we can try and fill up. It costs $5 to park here all day and $3 for the night."

Despite such complaints, a few lots are not only attracting a steadier business flow, but also charging higher rates.

The lot in front of the fishing pier, between 14 and 15 Streets and Atlantic, was charging $8 last weekend for all-day parking, and manager Bob Lachman said, "Business is pretty much the same as last year. In the past five years, business has become increasingly better."

Ralph Cannon said his lot on 21st Street and Pacific has been doing "about the same" as last year.

"Our business hasn't decreased, since we're the first lot people see when they come off the interstate," said Cannon, who charges $10 for all-day parking. "I know some other lots that haven't had any business lately, but here we get pretty packed."

Cannon said he thinks the lack of business in many beach lots reflects a decline in the city's tourism, since "hotels only allow one car per room. If there were more tourists, there'd be more cars around, to fill up these other lots."

Council Democrats Request To Alter Fest Traffic Plan

By Lee Cahill City Council Reporter

City council Tuesday turned down a request of the Labor Day Community Coordination Committee to change the traffic plan approved by council a little more than a month ago.

Dr. Harrison B. Wilson and Andrew S. Fine, co-chairman of the Labor Day Committee, asked that the professionals in the field be allowed to decide on whether to use a more or less restrictive plan, depending on the apparent needs to provide greater flexibility.

The plan, adopted by council on July 2 on the recommendation of the committee, would close to traffic the Old Beach area from Laskin Road to Rudee Inlet. Fine said that this plan probably may be too restrictive for the residents and may make the beach appear to be an armed camp to the rest of the world. He asked that the professionals be allowed to determine whether to use the more restrictive plan, or an alternate which also was considered, that would close Atlantic and Pacific Avenues from Laskin Road to 12th Street.

He pointed out that the city does not know how many visitors will attend Laborfest and that if only 30,000 come here, the more restrictive plan would be a "terrible inconvenience" for residents and visitors.

Under the committee's recommendation, the less restrictive traffic plan might be used on Friday and Saturday morning, with the more restrictive plan going into place when the crowds are greater. He said that the professionals working with the committee suggested the flexible plan when they were asked specifically by the chairman to express their opinions

Water, Sewer Rates May Rise $3.89 In Two Years

By Lee Cahill City Council Reporter

In less than two years, the average Virginia Beach water and sewer customer may be paying $3.89 more a month in utility bills.

The increased cost is modest, however, according to Public Utilities Director Clarence Warnstaff, compared to what lies ahead.

Warnstaff, with the recommendation of the city's consulting engineers, Alvord Burdick and Howson, Tuesday recommended water and sewer rate increases on Oct. 1 of this year and July 1 of 1991 and 1992.

Addressing city council at a work session, Warnstaff said that the city has enjoyed having an abundance of water at a low price, "but I feel the situation will change." He cited their increased cost in meeting water quality level standards.

Monday, Warnstaff recommended water rate increases from the current $2.69 per 1,000 gallons of water to $2.77 on Oct. 1; $2.91 on July 1, 1991; and $3.01 on July 1, 1992.

Recommended increases in the sewer rate, which have not been increased since 1983, are from the current $9.46 a month to $9.65 on Oct. 1, 1990; $10.58 on July 1, 1991.

Reapportionment Issue Still Hot, Strong

By Elsa Kay Staff Writer

The issue of reapportionment is still a hot one in Virginia Beach. The final day for public comment is Wednesday, August 15.

Reapportionment committee members, chosen recently by Mayor Meyera Oberndorf, will be faced with the decision of how to proceed in a matter of a few short weeks. The deadline has already been changed from early September date to an undetermined date, according to a published report.

The 11-member committee is comprised of "experienced members of the Virginia Beach community," according to Bob Matthias, Virginia Beach intergovernmental relations coordinator. Their names and community affiliations follow:

Albert W. Balko, ex-city councilman; Thomas A. Barton, Beach Ford president; Cyndy Bourgard, League of Women Voters; Donald H. Clark, attorney at law; E. Richard Cockrell, Jr., the city's former director of agriculture; John D. Moss, current city councilman; Professor Timothy O'Rourke, Ph.D., Center for Public Service; Dr. Ronald E. Proctor; Crisanto D. Romero; William A. Schlingens,

New Schoolboard Chairman Greg Stillman Wants To Raise The Quality Of Education

By Karen Dailymple Staff Writer

Greg Stillman is a lawyer, but his main priority is to raise the quality of education and improve test scores in Virginia Beach.

His deep concern recently helped him elected chairman of the Virginia Beach School Board. "My job, principally, is to act as chief spokesman for the board, to run the meetings, prepare the agenda and to function in a leadership capacity," said Stillman, a Bay Colony resident.

Stillman didn't always have a big interest in public education. A Chesapeake native, he graduated from the University of Richmond in 1969 with a degree in English. He then went on to Washington and Lee University to pursue a law career.

After graduating from law school, Stillman immediately joined Hunton and Williams law firm, headquartered in Richmond. In 1979, he was sent to Norfolk to open a new office.

Beach Tourism

Image Not So Bad?

Tourists vacationing in Virginia Beach last weekend did not seem to have the upcoming Labor Day weekend on their minds. In an informal Virginia Beach Sun beach and boardwalk survey, many were quick to rattle off what they liked about the city.

Many said that they had heard stories about last year's Labor Day troubles, but that everything currently seemed "normal" or "fine" in the city.

People who have been coming to the city all-summer long and enjoying themselves should tell friends that this is still a nice place to come and vacation.

Maybe the city's image is becoming more quickly repaired that some think. - K.L.H.

Collect Something

There are a lot of people who have made a hobby out of collecting things. There are antique collectors, baseball card collectors, stamp collectors, doll collectors and coin collectors, just to name a few.

Collecting sounds like a very fascinating hobby. There is certainly much to learn about the objects you choose to collect. There has to be a history to everything, whether it be Barbie dolls or stamps. It must be interesting to find out when and where something evolved, how many there are in existence and how much it is worth.

There are people who have been collecting things for many years. There are probably several grandfathers out there who have a coin or baseball card collection just waiting to be taken over by another generation of collectors. A collection like that is a wonderful gift. Anything with age and in good shape is bound to be worth some money, not that that's the only reason to turn collecting into a hobby. But, a collection is something that a person can save all his life and add to until his children are old enough to appreciate it. Or, a collection may be sold.

Collecting brings a sense of history into someone's life. There are many books about collecting that can tell you how to go about starting a new hobby. Anyone can be a collector, from young children to senior citizens. It's something to do in your spare time that's educational at the same time. - K.L.D.

School Board

Stillman Should Add

Congratulations are in order for Greg Stillman, the newly elected chairman of the Virginia Beach School Board. Stillman now has a heavy load of responsibility on his shoulders, but obviously city council feels he is capable of handling it.

Stillman has served on the school board for about 18 months. During that time, he has tried to assist in the effort to improve our school system. Now, as chairman, he must make sure all those ideas are acted on. He will have to spend many hours, outside of his job with a law firm, working with school board members and city council to come up with the best curriculum possible.

Stillman is not an educator. He has never been a teacher or a principal. What he is, though, is a concerned Virginia Beach resident, who wants to see our children receive the best education possible. Like many people, Stillman has a child attending a Virginia Beach elementary school. Her future, as well as thousands of others', is in his and the school board's hands.

Public education is a serious matter that should not be taken lightly. With someone who cares as much as Greg Stillman heading the school board, the school system can only improve. - K.L.D.

normal here now, though."

Other tourists said that they, too, heard about the rioting and looting.

"I kind of surprised me," said 24-year-old Ginger Amalji, a nurse from Stratford, Conn. "Virginia Beach doesn't seem like the kind of place for that sort of thing."

Twenty-six-year-old Jim Weaver, an aircraft mechanic from Washington, D.C., said he also heard some "surprising" tales of Virginia Beach's tumult.

"I know a guy, I went to school with him, who was here (last Labor Day). He said he hid under a car because he was scared. He said, 'I hid for my life.' He said people copped an attitude... they went overboard."

Twenty-year-old Greg Woods, a student from Newton, N.J., said people told him that "things have gotten bad in Virginia Beach." He said someone told him that they heard gunshots last Labor Day weekend. While shots were heard, officials said it could have been fireworks.

Woods said he still plans to vacation here, though. "I've been to lots of beaches up and down the East Coast and this is one of a kind. The boardwalk is really nice - it's not cheesy and cheap, like some I've been to."

Some tourists said that they think Virginia Beach is "nicer" than other beaches, such as Myrtle Beach and Ocean City.

"I like the boardwalk here," said Griest. "Myrtle Beach doesn't have one - all it has is a sidewalk. Having a nice, wide boardwalk makes a difference."

A few tourists who have been coming to the city for a number of years said they have seen changes in the people coming to vacation here.

"I have noticed a change over the past 15 years... there are more black people here - it's no big deal to me. There used to be, what do you call them - WASPs? Now there's more nationalities involved," said Griest.

Griest said, "I'm going to keep coming, no matter what I hear. I come here to do absolutely nothing but soak up the sun and booze for a few days. The sun and the sand and the seafood - that's why I come... If you want to find trouble and action, you can find it here, or anywhere else, for that matter; but you can also avoid it, as I intend to."

Some informal survey statistics follow:

✓ Twenty-eight out of the 30 tourists interviewed said they would not come to Virginia Beach during this year's Labor Day weekend.

✓ Twenty-one tourists said they had been to Virginia Beach before the vacation they were currently on.

✓ Twenty said Virginia Beach is a vacation spot well-suited for people of all ages. Seven said it is a good spot for young people to come. Three said couples would most enjoy the city.

✓ Twenty-eight said they plan to come back for future Virginia Beach vacations.

Black and white tourists were interviewed for this article.

Commentary

More On Political Campaign Contributions, Expenditure Reports

This commentary is submitted by the Citizens Action Coalition.

One purpose of these reports is to make public the names of persons or organizations who make large contributions to political candidates. The most important report for this purpose is the one which must be filed by the candidates eight days before the election. If publicized promptly by the media, it could influence the voters in their selection of candidates.

In this, it fails miserably since there are so many ways in which the reporting requirements can be circumvented, or delayed without breaking the law, that the public can easily be kept in the dark, at least until after the election. It does, however, serve as a restraint to prevent the flagrant buying of an election by a well-heeled special interest group. It could, however, do a better job.

First of all, the instructions for filling out the forms are not all that easy to understand. Old hands at the game claim it's no problem, yet many, who should be experienced, make mistakes. There are also variations in the manner of filling out the forms which can be confusing.

Some, for example, try to report contributions and expenditures in chronological order by date; others, in alphabetical order of donors names; and most, in no order whatsoever.

One or two candidates in last May's election, who were not first-time candidates, entered subtotals after each contribution in the boxes marked "Aggregate to date." These boxes are supposed to be used to show the sum total of all contributions, previous and current, by the particular contributor listed on that line. This could easily result in a misinterpretation of the data provided. In one case, a large construction firm is shown as contributing in aggregate over $20,000, when, in fact, only $1,000 was contributed. Elsewhere, a Political Action Committee (PAC) is listed with an aggregate contribution of over $9,000 when again the contribution was only $1,000.

Some sign the "Termination Statement" indicating a final report, but fail to check under "Type of Report" that it is a final report. Councilman Robert Clyburn signed his termination statement, which calls for "an accounting of the retirement of all debts," but on page 2 he continues to report his $19,000 remaining unpaid debt. He apparently called in later, as shown by an attached note, that he did not want to finalize his report; a wise move, as this will allow him to use later contributions to repay at least part of his own loan to the campaign. This is the procedure used by most veteran candidates. It allows them to use late contributions to help pay off at least part of any outstanding debt. When it is evident that no more contributions are going to come in, they can then convert their personal loan into a contribution and retire all debts. If they finalize too early, late contributions can only be given in charity or held for a later campaign.

Even veteran reporters can be tripped up. Alex Marshall in his article on page 4 of the Aug. 1/2 1990 issue of The Beacon reports that, "Despite not signing statements that closed their reports, (John) Moss, (Nancy) Parker and (John) Perry did not file financial reports July 15." The Moss/Parker campaign was finalized with the June 15 report and therefore no reports were required on July 15.

There is practically no mechanism for auditing the reports and with the lack of clear precise instructions, it would be hard to establish whether an erroneous entry was purposeful or just an honest mistake.

There are several unclear areas. One of these is in the unitemized contributions under $100. One candidate raised over $30,000 from 321 contributors, with an average contribution of over $97. What is not clear is whether a single contributor can give numerous $100 contributions at different times without being identified. It would seem logical to assume that this does occur on occasions, but so far we have not seen it reported.

Contributions at fundraisers can be heavy, with no one identified. Totals run into the thousands of dollars. Large contributions are also made after the elections and thus can have no effect on the election's outcome. Although not always, winners are usually the recipients of these contributions and we must believe the donors give it out of the goodness of their hearts, without any expectation of consideration by the elected officials at a later date. The State conflict of interest laws are not very strict when it comes to relations with campaign contributors.

Although having little to do with the outcome of the elections, there also seems to be little guidance or limitations on what campaign funds can be used. Is it proper to use these funds for purchasing a typewriter that would be retained after the campaign is over? How about a computer or campaign truck? Can they be used for long trips to other parts of the country or abroad? Can they be used as contributions to national political parties? Expensive dinners to meet prominent people? It's an area which would be interesting to explore.

Obviously the system has its flaws, and beyond a doubt, there is need for additional legislation to control contributions.

The Citizens Action Coalition feels there should be a cut off date on all contributions a few days before the election. Even better would be a cap on expenditures. This would certainly level the playing field of all contestants. It's doubtful that such a cap would ever get any support from the media, which is largely the beneficiaries of campaign advertising spending. Some control is essential, for nowadays candidates need large contributions to get elected and it is difficult to believe that an elected official would not favor those who contributed heavily to his or her campaign.

What is scary, is to think that with so many American firms being taken over by foreign capital, they might easily, through campaign contributions, subvert our political system to their own advantage.

Can the American voters ever be awakened to the need for voting and that their interest might better be served by voting for candidates who take no contributions from special interest groups? We wonder.

More Questions And Answers

The Virginia Beach Sun last week published as a public service many of the most frequently asked questions, along with answers, concerning the upcoming Labor Day weekend.

This week we publish some more questions and answers, as provided by the Virginia Beach Labor Day Task Force office.

The city doesn't plan anything for any other group. Why is it doing it for the students?

Groups coming into the city are usually from an organization that has a convention or program subcommittee. They make all the arrangements for events and secure the appropriate permits, etc. The students come primarily as individuals, associated loosely through colleges, fraternities and sororities. There is no one to make the arrangements.

The second and most important reason is that last year the city did nothing. The city knows the students are planning to return and it desires to take an active role in providing a positive environment and somewhat directing their energies so students can enjoy their stay.

Why is the city planning a party for outsiders? The committee is not planning a "party." The committee has developed a process whereby sponsors plan, organize and conduct the events. The sponsors are responsible for obtaining appropriate licenses and liability insurance. At this time, Norfolk State University is a primary sponsor. Other sponsors include various civic organizations such as Rotary clubs, other universities, the YMCA and promoters willing to associate themselves with a non-profit sponsor.

Support Recycling Efforts

The City of Virginia Beach will be implementing a program to assist all citizens wishing to recycle.

This September, the city's Waste Management Division will have in place a system of recycling "drop-off" centers. Dome shaped containers resembling igloos will be available at 20 sites throughout the city.

This system will provide convenient locations where citizens may deposit items such as aluminum, plastic and glass for recycling. The locations will be publicized in early September.

These drop-off centers will complement the Newspaper Recycling Program already in use at all public schools throughout the city, which has resulted in a savings of $262,806 in collection and waste disposal costs.

Recycling maximizes the useful life of our natural resources, conserves energy and helps prevent pollution. Therefore, the city council and I encourage all citizens to participate in this worthwhile program.

Rate Increases Threaten Raises

The city manager and his top administrators' failure to be candid with city council about projected hospitalization insurance rate increases will force city and school workers to once again take the brunt of those rate increases this coming January.

The Virginia Beach Education Association (VBEA) has told school board members and every member of city council that the employer contribution needed to be significantly increased in the fiscal year 1990/1991 budget. They were concerned, but, behind the scenes, top city officials were busy taking a head-in-the-sand approach on the realities of hospitalization costs. These administrators told elected officials not to worry.

The rate requests and bids are in for next January (see Increase in School Board Employee Costs for Hospitalization Insurance). The money coming out of employees' paychecks needed for hospitalization insurance premiums will be increasing from 50 to 100 percent for school employees next January. City workers face a similar plight.

Chesapeake, Portsmouth, Hampton, Newport News and even Norfolk, at least for the first half of the school year, all pay more towards their employees' health insurance than does Virginia Beach.

The problem of escalating health care costs affects all people in our country. Private and public sector employees are feeling the bite. With all this in mind, do the Virginia Beach school employees have a legitimate

Why is the city welcoming the college students back? Some advocate telling them that they are not welcome.

Virginia Beach benefits greatly from visitor business. It is not in the city's best interest nor is it an accurate portrayal of its heart and reputation to adopt a policy of discouraging any group from visiting.

In 1989, bad weather, competition and Labor Day events combined to tarnish the city's image and resulted in no growth in tourism. This translates into lost revenues in tourism and conventions. This affects the entire community. If tourism continues to decline, the city's bond rating would go down, costing the city millions of dollars annually in interest rates. Those millions of dollars would have to come from each community member. The city's reputation was greatly damaged by the images seen on national television and through the international press last Labor Day. The negative opinions, perceptions and attitudes have tarnished the city's reputation as a pleasant place to visit, work and live. The city can talk about this, but actions speak louder than words. The city must demonstrate that it welcomes everyone and that as an ethnically and racially diverse community, the community can work and live together in harmony.

How will students know what the rules are? To insure that all potential visitors know about relevant city ordinances, city officials and representatives are visiting college and university campuses, are seeking opportunities to meet with reporters and editorial boards, and will welcome requests to address groups and organizations. A brochure has been sent to students describing certain city ordinances. Hotels will also be sending out a brochure when they confirm reservations.

How are the police going to be able to handle the large crowd and protect the rest of us?

Adequate police protection and presence will be available during Labor Day weekend. In addition to the local police, security at certain events will be handled by the sponsor. At the park, for example, the campus police from Norfolk State University, who deal with students daily, will provide the security. There also exists a mutual aid pact with other surrounding localities; the city can request their assistance if necessary. The Virginia State Police can also be used.

What if events are advertised but private fund-raising is not adequately forthcoming? Who will pick up the difference?

Unless they are properly underwritten and prior funding is secured, they will not be placed on a schedule of events.

Who is making the recommendations to city council?

City council approved a Community Coordination Committee to centrally plan and coordinate Laborfest '90 events. Racially and ethnically diverse, the committee includes businessmen, civic leaders, educators, military leaders, religious leaders and university students. The majority of individuals are Virginia Beach citizens. The committee is co-chaired by Dr. Harrison B. Wilson, President of Norfolk State University, and attorney Andrew S. Fine.

Why didn't we hear about plans for the weekend before city council approved it?

The Community Coordination Committee was charged to make recommendations to city council. Until council was informed and made a policy decision, the committee could not speak on the issues. The committee has provided the press with schedules of meetings, which are open to the public. In addition, the Virginia Beach public libraries have the minutes of all subcommittee meetings.

Who is paying for the events for Labor Day?

Public funds will not be used to entertain visitors during Labor Day. Instead, as Daytona Beach and other resort areas have done, the city is seeking private funds and corporate sponsors to help provide activities. This is the task of the Private Sector subcommittee.

Who is liable for the events?

In compliance with the city's existing special events permit process, sponsors must have the ability to obtain comprehensive general liability insurance for the event(s). They must agree to defend and hold harmless the City of Virginia Beach, its employees, volunteers and members of the Labor Day Coordinating Committee, from any claims arising out of the event(s).

Why are they recommending closing streets at the oceanfront?

The elimination of automobiles from Atlantic and Pacific Avenue offers several advantages: 1) it opens the area up, making movement easier; 2) it prevents gridlock, thus providing greater access to the area for emergency vehicles; 3) it reduces the opportunity for confrontation over parking and other vehicular violations; 4) in the event that an unwelcome criminal element comes into the area, their not having a vehicle prevents access to drugs, alcohol and weapons; and in the event of theft, eliminates a hiding place for stolen goods.

How will the weekend's activities restrict the access of residents to the Oceanfront?

Residents who live in the Beach Borough near Atlantic and Pacific Avenues will be issued special parking passes which will enable them to get to their homes. Other Virginia Beach citizens who wish to go the Oceanfront on Labor Day weekend must use the satellite park lots and catch a bus. The location of the lots will be announced later, but will be in the vicinity of Lynnhaven Mall and Oceana NAS.

Why is the use of a city park being recommended?

Many of the events being planned are outdoor activities. There are no sites in the Oceanfront area that could accommodate a crowd of 20,000 to 30,000 people. The committee desired a site close to the oceanfront to reduce travel time. The natural features of Redwing Park provide excellent crowd management and security advantages. Access to the park will be controlled by the number of tickets being sold for the event. Transportation can be conveniently handled utilizing satellite parking sites and shuttle buses.

How will traffic be controlled to Redwing?

There will be no on-site parking at Redwing Park nor will pedestrian traffic be allowed. Access will be by shuttle bus. These will come from the resort area and satellite parking areas. Parking will not be permitted along General Booth and additional no parking signs will be placed near the entrance.

Talbot and Associates; and Herbert Taylor, Council of Civic Organizations president.

Maxime Graham, a Virginia Beach political activist and Sandbridge resident, said that she is dissatisfied with the mayor's selection of committee members. "I think a much better choice could have been made," she said. "It appears to be a special interest committee."

Graham said that she feels that "people in our own community tact, but raise the number of council members to have had more say" on the issue of reapportionment. "Aren't the citizens experienced in their own city?" she asked. Her solution to the problem would not be to redefine the boundary lines, as was previously suggested on several occasions.

"You cannot redefine the boundaries because you would have to revise all of the past recorded deeds," Graham said. "I would suggest leaving the boundaries in-cilmembers to 14 with seven at-large members voted on by all boroughs. There should be a primary election to elect the borough candidate in each borough. I think it would be a lot fairer."

Leaving the boroughs intact as they currently stand is a proposal not endorsed by many, according to recently conducted telephone interviews by The Virginia Beach Sun.

In fact, the proposal was not even mentioned by anyone else. The support is split on the way to handle the new election procedure, however. Committee members cannot decide how to address the issue. Should the bigger boroughs have more representation or should the boroughs be redefined with equal representation? These questions have arisen due to overwhelmingly uneven population growth in different districts.

Whatever the committee decides is best will have to be presented to the Justice Department, according to Voter Registrar Marlene Hager. Hager said that the reapportionment will not affect her office except in the event of a borough change. "The polling locations may change due to the drawing of the precinct lines, but it wouldn't affect anything else in the office," she said.

Hager reported that there are 137,000 registered voters in the city of Virginia Beach. The current census estimated the current population to be nearly 400,000.

This is the first time since 1985 that the reapportionment issue has been addressed. The current system was a compromise between the old City of Virginia Beach and Princess Anne County. When the two entities merged in 1963 the population was estimated at approximately 85,000.

The existing controversial system has seven borough candidates and three at-large candidates, with the borough candidates representing the area in which they live. The at-large candidates can reside anywhere in the city.

The mayor is elected by the citizens as an at-large candidate, meaning he or she can live in any Virginia Beach borough. This is the portion of the original charter that has been amended since the merger.

Officials and citizens are split on how to resolve the reapportionment issue. Some theories suggest a totally borough election and others advocate an entirely at-large election process. Whatever the result may be, citizens in the community have until Aug. 15 to address and comment on the issue.

its improvement.

"We have a superb school system in Virginia Beach," Stillman said. "I have a love for ideas. I enjoy fashioning and thinking about creative ways to solve problems. That's one of the reasons I became a lawyer."

Stillman, 42, is a member of the Virginia Bar Association, the Virginia Opera Association's board of directors, and the Virginia Beach Rotary Club.

Stillman said he plans to assist the board in its effort to implement a new major curriculum overall. The school system didn't have a curriculum or objective standards of learning before now, he said. It is the board's responsibility to decide what the new curriculum will consist of.

Stillman said he wants an emphasis placed on the fundamentals of learning: reading, writing and arithmetic. He would also like to see an entry level introduction to foreign language, and a course syllabus to be sent to every parent of students in kindergarten through twelfth grade.

Stillman, an avid golfer and gardener, said the city has paid too much attention to the gifted students and has neglected the average students. He wants to see the average students reengaged in a level of learning.

"I'm not an educator. It's our job to provide a policy to the educators," he said.

Stillman, who's child attends Linkhorn Park Elementary School, will serve as school board chairman for one year, fulfilling Fletcher's tenure. After his term, he said, "I'll just ride off into the sunset!"

But at least he knows he helped make a difference in the lives of many children.

during a 3½ hour session on Monday.

James W. Brazier Jr., asked whether the proposal was intended to provide security for the people "or tell the nation we're racist."

He said that he had originally felt that the less restrictive plan was the better strategy, but had voted for the more restrictive plan because the committee had the endorsement of Shadowlawn and to their communities that would be affected.

He said that by the time the decision is made to switch plans, the streets will be packed. He said that the beach can expect a lot of daytrippers and a lot of cars.

Council, by a vote of 9-2, decided to stick by its July 2 action. Lantaigne and Councilwoman Reba McClanan dissented. Councilman Louis R. Jones remarked that while council voted to enforce the traffic plan, City Manager Aubrey V. Watts Jr. was at liberty to take the responsibility for changes.

McClanan said that the ordinance has not been repealed but that she would agree that it has been set aside.

Beach Man Participates In Historic Navy Visit

By Jeffrey Perron, Navy Journalist
Special to the Virginia Beach Sun

SAN DIEGO - It wasn't long ago that some Virginia Beach residents shared former President Reagan's view of the Soviet Union as the "evil empire."

Today, however, as the Cold War is ending and relations are warming between the two countries, people-to-people exchanges and reciprocal visits are altering the way Americans and Soviets view each other.

"I was very happy to be a part of it," said Davis, a 1981 graduate of Live Oak High School in Antioch, Calif. "Hopefully, it will be a stepping stone for future peaceful relations."

The Soviet destroyer Boyevo and the oiler Argun also sailed into the San Diego harbor July 31 for the historic visit. The more than 800 Soviets were greeted by thousands of American sailors and civilians.

The visit marks another in a series of military exchanges established with the Soviets by Adm. William Crowe, former chairman of the U.S. Joint Chiefs of Staff. Last July, three Soviet navy ships visited Norfolk. The U.S. Navy visited Sevastopol in the Crimea in September and will visit Vladivostok in the Soviet Far East this September.

The Soviets visited fleet and naval training centers, fire fighting and damage control schools, and attended a wreath-laying ceremony.

The sailors were able to compare life on a Soviet ship with that of an American vessel.

"I hope they learn that we're not a threat to them," said the 27-year-old quartermaster. "We're just people trying to make a living and having some fun along the way."

For many sailors, continuing the exchanges and visits will benefit both superpowers and lead to further understanding of each country's way of life.

"I hope that eventually, instead of fighting and plotting against one another, we can join forces and battle common causes," said Davis, "such as poverty, disease, injustice and the ongoing destruction of our environment."

The Federal Communications Commission has designated for hearing the following applications for a construction permit to operate a new FM radio station on FM Channel 271C2 in Virginia Beach, Virginia: New Song Communications, Inc.; HS Communications, Inc.; Ewell Media Company Limited Partnership; The Chesapeake Bay FM Broadcasters Limited Partnership; Virginia Beach FM Radio Limited Partnership; Stacy C. Brody; Pamela R. Jones; VPC, Ltd.; First Century Broadcasting of Virginia, Inc.; Chesapeake Media Communications Corp.; Regional Broadcasting Limited Partnership; Sandfiddler Spectrum Corp.; Craig L. Siebert; and Intracoastal Airways Limited Partnership.

The hearing is scheduled to occur at a time and place to be determined. The issues to be determined in the hearing are:

(1) To determine whether the proposals of the applicants would provide coverage of the city sought to be served, as required by Section 73.315(a) of the Communications Rules, and, if not, whether circumstances exist which warrant waiver of that section.

(2) To determine whether Sonrise Management Services, Inc. is an undisclosed party to Song's application.

(3) To determine whether Song's organizational structure is a sham.

(4) To determine whether Song violated Section 1.65 of the Commission's Rules, and/or lacked candor, by failing to amend its application to notify the Commission of the dismissal with prejudice of an application in which one of its principals had an ownership interest.

(5) To determine, from the evidence adduced pursuant to Issues 2 through 4 above, whether Song possesses the basic qualifications to be a licensee of the facilities sought herein.

(6) To determine whether Bay violated Section 1.65 of the Commission's Rules by failing to amend its application to notify the Commission of the dismissal with prejudice of an application in which one of its principals had an ownership interest and by failing to provide current information regarding other broadcast interests.

(7) To determine with respect to Century and Siebert, whether the applicants are financially qualified.

(8) To determine whether there is a reasonable possibility that the tower heights and locations proposed by Song, Bay Limited, Jones, Century, Media and Intracoastal would constitute a hazard to air navigation.

(9) To determine which of the proposals would, on a comparative basis, best serve the public interest.

(10) To determine, in light of the evidence adduced pursuant to the specified issues, which of the applications should be granted, if any.

A copy of the application of Ewell Media Company Limited Partnership, together with amendments thereto and related material, is on file for public inspection at the public library in Virginia Beach.

CHRISTINE M. EVERLY, Trustee, Serve: Sovran Bank, Real Estate Finance Dept., 1 Commercial Place, Norfolk, VA 23510 and DENNY P. COBB, JR., Trustee, Serve: Sovran Bank, Real Estate Finance Dept., 1 Commercial Place, Norfolk, VA 23510 and WILLIAM LAND, POLLY LAND and LORENZO LAND, Deceased, and all other deceased and unknown parties who may be interested in the abandoned grave sites located on the parcel of land, situate on the eastern side of Holland Road in the City of Virginia Beach, State of Virginia, and designated as parcel 71, George B. Wilson, 110,881 acres on the recorded plat entitled "Boundary Line Survey of Earl Wilson, et al", and all unknown parties who may be heirs of the said William Land, Polly Land, Lorenzo Land and other deceased and unknown parties, or have an interest in these proceedings, whose last known post office address is unknown, and who are made parties defendant by the general description of "Parties Unknown", Defendants.

ORDER OF PUBLICATION
This suit is brought pursuant to the provisions of Section 57.38.1 of the Code of Virginia of 1950, as amended, for the purpose of having the remains interred and the abandoned grave sites located on the hereinabove described real property, removed to some more suitable repository by a reputable funeral director, and in strict accordance with the standards of the profession, and in a manner having due respect for the dead and the sensibilities of their living heirs and next of kin.

An Affidavit having been made and filed that all parties respondent are unknown; and that their whereabouts are unknown and their last and present addresses are unknown, it is accordingly, ORDERED, and DECREED that the above named persons, the heirs at law and next of kin of said persons who are interested in the abandoned grave sites located on the parcel of land situate on the eastern side of Holland Road in the City of Virginia Beach, Virginia, and designated as parcel 71, George B. Wilson, 110,881 acres on the recorded plat entitled "Boundary Line Survey of Earl Wilson, et al", and all unknown parties who may be heirs of the said persons or have an interest in these proceedings, whose last known address is unknown, and who are made parties defendant by the general description of the "Parties Unknown", do appear On or Before the 10th day of September, 1990, and do what is necessary to protect their interest.

And it is further ORDERED that a copy of this order be published once a week for four successive weeks in the Virginia Beach Sun, a newspaper published and having general circulation in the City of Virginia Beach, Virginia, and that a copy hereof be posted at the front door of the Courthouse of the Circuit Court of the City of Virginia Beach, Virginia.

"Coins Can Transport You Back"

Coin Collectors Enjoy The Hobby For Its Historical Point Of View; Some Ancient Coins Aren't Easy To Find

By Karen Dalrymple
Staff Writer

He's no Donald Trump, but he does have a lot of coin. A lot of ancient Roman and Greek coins, that is.

Chuck Fifield, president of the Tidewater Coin Club, has collected thousands of coins from various countries and eras over the past 40 years.

"I like it from a historical point of view. Coins can transport you back 2,000 years into history," he said.

Fifield began his hobby like most coin collectors. As a child, his grandfather introduced him to the Lincoln penny.

"He had an old penny he showed me as a kid and I became interested in it and have been ever since," the Chesapeake resident said.

Kempville's John Balchunis, also a coin club member, began collecting in 1964 at the insistence of his brother, who was an avid coin collector. He, too, started with pennies and worked his way up to silver coins, and then to silver dollars.

Fifield, who keeps his coins in a bank because of their value, said he went from collecting United States coins to coins related to the Bible and the Roman empire. A recently retired Navy man, Fifield had taken many Mediterranean cruises while in the service. There, he had the chance to visit several ruins in Turkey, Italy and Greece, which is what sparked his interest in coins.

"It's a whole history of the world in a small metallic disk," he said. "The coin is just the physical tie to that era and the research is the joy."

Balchunis sold or traded all his pennies, except for a roll from each year since 1920; and he is now focusing on modern Lithuanian coins, a country from which his parents and cousins hail.

Balchunis currently has three sets of Lithuanian coins, one for each of his sons. He said more coins from that country will be available if Lithuania receives its freedom.

Both Balchunis and Fifield buy their coins from local coin dealers. Oftentimes, they swap with other collectors or find coins for sale in the newspaper.

"There's always hoards being discovered," said Fifield, who added that many of the coins are discovered underground after being buried for hundreds of years.

Fifield said he is fascinated with the coins' historic value. Many of the coins, he said, were handmade to commemorate specific events, buildings or temples. The only evidence that the events or buildings ever existed is on the coins.

"Each ancient coin is unique unto itself. There are various types, but no two are really alike," he said.

"The condition of a coin means a lot. That raises the value. Scarcity of a coin also has a lot to do with it," said Balchunis.

Fifield, who purchases a coin

Coin Collecting is not only fun, it can also be a financial investment.

about once a month, said many coin collectors sell their collections once they are complete and then move on to begin a new collection. He said he doubts he'll ever complete his Lithuanian collection, but if he did, he has no idea what he would pursue next.

In addition to coins, Fifield said, collectors often choose to seek out tokens, metals or paper money. Balchunis, on the other hand, has been collecting stamps since he was 16.

"I didn't enjoy it (coin collecting) as much as I used to," said Balchunis.

Balchunis also saves German, United Nations and Lithuanian stamps. He said his stamp collection, with which he does a lot of trading, is better than his coin collection.

"It's more educational, I think," said Balchunis, also a Virginia Beach Stamp Club member.

"It's (coin collecting) not as big as it's been in the past. Baseball card collecting has kind of taken over," said Fifield. "The hobby has been around for thousands of years and I suspect it'll continue. It's so important from a historical aspect."

gripe about their share of the rates? Well, if you compare what other Hampton Roads school divisions do for their employees, I believe they do. Chesapeake, Portsmouth, Hampton, Newport News and even Norfolk, at least for the first half of the school year, all pay more toward their employees' health insurance than does Virginia Beach.

Unless the school board and city council are willing to increase the employer contribution, pay raises for the average worker will be wiped out. When the VBEA talked to elected officials last spring, possible sources of revenue were even identified that could be used to help out all city school workers. In fact, the school board just turned in about $4,000,000 to city council that was not spent this past school year.

We all know that city council has a lot of ways that they can spend a $4 million surplus. My bet is that the public would support using enough of that money to make sure that city and school employees don't lose any of their three percent pay raise to increases in health insurance premiums.

trances of the residential areas and on main thoroughfares.

Who will pay to upgrade the park or pay for damages?

The sponsor is responsible for all costs associated with staging an event and any damages. In the case of the site for Norfolk State University activities, the university will pay for the cost of fencing, lighting, stage construction, additional sanitary facilities, etc.

Will alcohol be allowed in the park?

Alcohol will not be sold in the park and the use of alcohol will not be permitted.

How will emergency vehicles get to people in the area of the park or at the park?

Part of the detailed work yet to be done includes an emergency services plan. Whenever there is an event in the city where there is a large concentration of people, such as with the Strawberry Festival, this type of plan is developed. Usually, emergency vehicles are on-site.

National Media Turning Spotlight On Laborfest

Post, Enquirer Among Those Sending News Crews To Beach; Media Divided As To What To Expect

Stories by Kerry Lyndsay Hothelmer
Staff Writer

"We don't anticipate trouble, but there's a story there, with or without trouble," said The Washington Post's Virginia editor, Douglas Feaver, of the upcoming Virginia Beach Labor Day weekend.

Since 1989's riotous "Greektfest," now called "Laborfest," major newspapers editors throughout the country have kept readers abreast of Virginia Beach's Labor Day fallout from last year and the planning that has gone into trying to make 1990's Laborfest an orderly affair.

These editors are ready for 1990, come what may. Newspaper crews' hotel reservations have been made; certain journalists have selected to be on the scene, and pens and cameras are ready.

Most editors The Virginia Beach Sun contacted said they don't expect trouble, but that they do expect to churn out Laborfest headlines of some sort.

"We've covered the issue throughout the year, from many angles - political, racial, city government, police force, and National Guard," said Feaver. "People are interested. It's an unusual story."

The Philadelphia Enquirer's deputy national editor, Hank Klibanoff, said he, too, thinks the approaching Laborfest deserves considerable attention.

"There's a great deal of local interest in it," he said. "We're sending an outstanding reporter to cover it. . . The fact that we're sending anyone shows that we think it's important."

Many news people apparently think that how this Labor Day weekend unfolds is important. Pam Ford, Virginia Beach's citizen services coordinator, said that as of Tuesday, 14 or 15 newspapers, wire services and radio, and television stations have applied for 140 media credentials to cover Laborfest.

Some newspapers are sending just a few staff members, but will have others on call.

"How many we send will depend on how the weekend is going," said The Richmond Times-Dispatch's state editor, Mike Steele. "We are planning to send six reporters right now. . . we tend to look at things from an historical perspective; so, yes, there might well be trouble in Virginia Beach."

Klibanoff's remarks display a similar attitude: "We don't prejudice, but since last year there was disruption, there might be some this year."

Last year's Labor Day planning among news makers did not involve as much forethought as this year's, said some editors. Some sources said they predicted last year's Greektfest trouble, but most did not expect it.

Some newspapers, such as The Philadelphia Enquirer, sent people as soon as the trouble began, and some, such as The Raleigh News and Observer, had reporters who happened to be in the city at the time of the trouble.

Roy Campbell, a Philadelphia Enquirer reporter, said he "sensed that all the elements (for trouble) were there" before Greektfest. But, he said, "I did not expect what happened to happen. I don't think anyone really did."

Klibanoff, Campbell's editor, said he had Campbell on a plane as soon as the chaos began.

This year Campbell, who again will cover the fest, will be sent

The following news organizations were randomly contacted by The Virginia Beach Sun and asked about their plans for Virginia Beach Labor Day weekend coverage.

This list, which is tentative, is not meant to be complete or totally reflective of Laborfest's overall media coverage.

The Washington Post - two reporters, one editor, two photographers.

The Philadelphia Enquirer - one reporter.

The Washington Times - three or four reporters.

The Richmond Times-Dispatch - six reporters, two photographers.

The Chicago Tribune - will depend on wire reports.

The Raleigh News & Observer - will depend on wire reports.

The Daily Progress - unsure.

Time Magazine - unsure.

The London Times - unsure.

"It's A Jungle"

Annual Hit Or Miss Tent Sale Brings Out The "Craziness" In Some People

By Kerry Lyndsay Hothelmer
Staff Writer

"There are more naked women here than in any other place in the nation," said Bob Klausman, the loudspeaker voice last Saturday on the first day of the annual Hit or Miss Tent Sale at the Pavilion. "This is truly an event."

The sale, which began in 1981 at the Princess Anne Plaza and was moved indoors in 1985, will run through this Sunday.

With inexpensive clothing items brought in from close to 600 Hit or Miss stores across the country, people come from all over, to shop said regional Hit or Miss manager for Atlanta, Paul Thorn.

"I come for the values," said 29-year-old Elsie McQuay, a nurse from New York. "They really are incredible."

Last Saturday, women's suits went for $35; dresses were $20; and sweaters, blouses, and shorts were $7. Prices might be lowered further by the time the sale ends, said Thorn.

"You find some cheap polyester stuff, but you can also find the most terrific values," said 26-year-

Total sales and attendance figures were not available, but suffice it to say that the event has mass appeal.

old Susie Sporten, a Virginia Beach secretary. "Last year, I bought almost my entire wardrobe for the following year for about $250."

Price mark-downs are what has Virginia Beach women scouting their calendars for time in which they can sneak away and hit the sale, which has a reputation for being frenzied, said 23-year-old Susan Zigler, a Virginia Beach homemaker.

"What you save in dollars, you pay for in sweat," she said. "I'd say its worth it, though. I have infinitely more of the latter available."

Many would agree that the sale is no calm affair. "It's a jungle. You'd think somebody sighted gold in there," said 32-

Inexpensive clothing brought in from close to 600 Hit or Miss stores across the country attracted masses to this year's Tent Sale, to be held at the Pavilion through Sunday.

year-old Denise Valdez, a nurse from Hampton, who added, "I still think the values are worth the craziness."

Pavilion duty manager Winnie Pitroni said people "got really crazy here." The sale began at 6 a.m. last

City Pavilion "Fortunate" To Host Sale

By Kerry Lyndsay Hothelmer
Staff Writer

"Virginia Beach is fortunate to have Hit or Miss hold its annual tent sale here," said the Pavilion's assistant manager, Courtney Dyer. "The sale is a major event. It adds to tourism, provides sales tax for the city, and employs some 600 or more temporary jobs."

This year's Hit or Miss Tent Sale began at the Pavilion last Saturday and will go on through Sunday, Aug. 19.

"The sale has become good for the city," said Dyer.

Store managers and tractor trailer loads of clothing were brought in from the national retail clothing chain's some 600 stores across the nation and prices have been slashed. Thousands upon thousands attend each year, Hit or Miss managers say.

"The sale has become good for the city," said Dyer. "We're famous for it. I get long-distance calls, and the first thing people ask me is 'when is the tent sale?'"

"People come from all over to shop. We even had groups come this year," said Dyer.

Dyer said he hopes that the sale continues to come to Virginia Beach. "Every year they (Hit or Miss) say that this will be their last year, but they still come back."

"It (the sale) is actually an expensive proposition for them to do. When they bring in managers from their stores, they book them at hotels. This year they booked one hundred or so rooms at the Radisson for 10 to 12 days."

In addition to increased tourism and the resulting business, the sales tax generated for the city, through the sale, is "significant," said Dyer, "and the jobs, though temporary, are well-appreciated."

Dyer said that the sale also "perks up" the Pavilion's slow summer season.

"Usually August is a slow month," he said. "Having them (the Hit or Miss company) rent it out for more than nine days helps out the city."

Labor Day Committee Has $150,000 Of $200,000 Goal

Wilson, Fine Get Praise From Oberndorf, Lantaigne, Fentress

By Lee Cahill
City Council Reporter

The Labor Day Community Coordination Committee has raised $150,000 for the Laborfest weekend and will continue to solicit funds toward a $200,000 goal.

The original goal had been $100,000, but even then the committee chairmen had indicated it was a flexible goal which could be changed as plans progressed.

Andrew S. Fine, a committee co-chairman, reported on the committee's progress at a city council meeting Tuesday, and said with 17 days to go, the committee has a "heap of volunteers."

Dr. Harrison B. Wilson, another co-chairman, said that he had not heard about a rumored boycott of the event, which has been expected to attract close to 100,000 black college students, that everything is on schedule and that the students will be welcomed here.

"I think we have done the right thing," he said.

Councilman Paul Lantaigne, who said that he attended the committee meeting at the Fraternal Order of Police lodge, said that he found the atmosphere positive and said that Wilson and Fine had done an excellent job.

Vice Mayor Robert E. Fentress also congratulated the chairmen, but "I think we have done the right thing," Dr. Harrison B. Wilson added that most of the citizens were still asking how they can get traffic passes. Arrangements are being made to provide passes ahead of time, but, said Fine, if guests or others just show up they will have to go to the tourist information center.

"If there were ever two men of good will," said Mayor Meyera Oberndorf, "you two will get my vote."

Charles C. Rouse, a 46-year-old computer engineer, had filed a suit in Circuit Court asking that the concerts planned for Laborfest be banned from Red Wing Park.

Judge Kenneth N. Whitehurst Jr. ruled against Rouse.

Scheduled concerts include: Saturday, Sept. 1, Today, The Good Girls, EU, Boogie Down Productions and Grand Master Slice, beginning at 4 p.m.

Sunday, Sept. 2, Mikki Howard, M.C. Lyte and Basic Black, beginning at 3 p.m.

Capacity crowds are expected, limited to 25,000 for each concert. Tickets will cost $15 for one show or $25 for two.

Triple Fatality On Sandbridge Road Prompts Question On Ferrell Parkway Progress

By Lee Cahill
City Council Reporter

The triple fatality on Sandbridge Road over the weekend has heightened city council's interest in Ferrell Parkway's progress.

Pungo Councilman Paul Lantaigne asked City Manager Aubrey V. Watts, Jr., to bring back to council a timetable on what's happening in regard to the project, which is expected to provide a safer road to the beach.

Lantaigne said that Sandbridge Road is not the number one road in the number of accidents, but that it is the number one in the severity of injuries. He said that 50 percent of the accidents on the curving road results in personal injuries, while 20 percent of the accidents throughout the rest of city results in injuries.

He said that he would like to see a timetable of what's happening with the parkway.

Councilwoman Reba McClannan agreed that the statistics for the road were terrible and asked when a public hearing on the parkway will be scheduled.

Laborfest

Think Peace

Last year's Greekfest cannot be erased, will not be forgotten, and its story continues.

Wouldn't it be powerful to have a Laborfest story broadcast throughout the world, portraying blacks and whites strolling down the boardwalk, listening to concerts, talking together, with just the right music playing in the background?

What an impact this would have, not just on the city's image, but on racism in general. Virginia Beach could show the world that racial tensions, real and perceived, are remediable.

This might never happen, but if it does, it will probably involve more than the city's past year of planning.

It would have to involve the community coming out for the weekend and supporting its city's efforts, welcoming the visitors and letting them know the city is trying to show them a good time.

If local residents on Labor Day weekend are out smiling and spending money in local business places, however remote that possibility is, a positive message would be sent out. Local merchants would feel support, and visitors might catch some of the friendly, let's-have-fun spirit.

People are undeniably affected by the spirit in the air in any given place, whether or not words are even spoken. People can truly sense whether they are welcome.

Let's not give these Laborfest visitors too great a chance to feel that they are alone, under a spotlight. — K.L.H.

Hit or Miss

Survival Tips

The best strategy for dealing with this year's annual Hit or Miss Tent Sale, to be held at the Pavilion from 9 a.m. through 11 p.m. until Sunday, Aug. 19, is to go for an hour or two each day, during a convenient time, when one's energy level is high.

Trying to do it all, which means looking through racks and racks of clothing and trying them all on in one day, will make one a mental wreck, and the best values usually cannot be discovered in just one trip.

Sales managers said that some of the nicer clothing items are often put out later on in the sale, so make sure and stop in late this week and this weekend.

A good time to go is in the late afternoon, at say 4 p.m., when the day shoppers are leaving and the after-work shoppers have not yet arrived.

Shop only until other shoppers saying "excuse me" as they press by becomes irritating. This indicates that all patience has been lost, and it is time to go home and put one's feet up. — K.L.H.

Doritos And Dog Food

It Takes All Kinds!

Some Virginia Beach residents could not imagine anything much grosser than eating a can of dog food, as Susan of Virginia Beach did last Thursday at a promotional Doritos-eating contest.

"She did that, just to win $1,800," some observers said. "I wouldn't do it unless you offered me a million, at least."

Others, however, thought it was really no big deal.

"You eat the same kind of stuff when you eat lunch meat," some said, seeming unimpressed.

These different responses are good measures of a human quality — earthiness. Some people have it to the hilt — they don't mind dirt under their fingernails, and some have been known to unashamedly lick their dinner plates clean.

Others, however, of the unearthy camp, won't use "used" towels and would throw away an entire pan of lasagna upon sighting an unfamiliar black speck in the ricotta cheese, which might well be pepper, but just in case it isn't. . . .

It definitely takes all kinds! — K.L.H.

Clarification

In the August 8 edition of The Virginia Beach Sun, statements made in a reappointment article, attributed to Sandbridge resident Maxine Graham, should have read as follows:

Graham said that she feels that "people in our own community should have had more say" on the reappointment issue. "Aren't the citizens experienced in their own city?" she asked. Her solution to the problem would not be to redefine the boundary lines, as was previously suggested on several occasions.

"You cannot redefine the boundary lines because you would have to revise all of the past recorded deeds," Graham said. "I would suggest leaving the boundaries intact, but raise the number of councilmembers to 14, with seven at-large members voted on by all boroughs. There should be a primary election to elect the borough candidate in each borough. I think it would be a lot fairer."

"I Hear Ya!"

"I hear ya!"
God, if someone else says that to me I swear I'll tear out their tongue! Just kidding; but that famous three-word retort was really quite amusing the first several hundred times I heard it. It escaped my boyfriend's lips in response to an unrelated comment on either politics or the weather. I can't remember which.

I particularly liked the way he stressed the second word in the phrase, emphasizing that he heard the statement clearly. Was this the dawn of increased communication between us? Not hardly.

It was not soon afterwards, about the fourth "I hear ya" later, that I realized that this was a new form of expression, not the beginning of something wonderful and different in our personal relationship. It just so happens that now, he can use those words to pretend that he has actually listened to what I am saying.

After about 2,000 more "I hear ya's," it came to my attention that my editor, who has never met my boyfriend, had picked up the phrase as well. In a casual manner the three words were dropped into our conversation one day and I truly believe my chin created a three-foot chasm in the floor. He usually just says, "I know, I know." So, I couldn't believe that he, too, had heard the phrase. It must be catching, I thought.

For months it went on like this. "I need to go to the store," I'd say. "I hear ya," was my boyfriend's reply. "My head hurts," "I hear ya!" "Today at work I had to . . ." The infamous, but by now anticipated, "I hear ya!" was again on its way.

In truth, the three-word phrase is not all that bad. It simply and succinctly embodies exactly what the speaker wants to hear, and what the listener wants to say. Believe me, I know because I have used the phrase on several occasions when I am too lazy to come up with something more creative. And sometimes, it just fits perfectly into the conversation.

I don't know if the entire thing is a matter of laziness or if it is just the "hip" or "in" phrase to use in 1990. Everywhere I go I can hear the reverberations of the phrase floating through the room at a rapid pace. Not once or twice, but countless times — from all types of people.

The one that really got me was when I was talking to my father on the phone. We were discussing something and in response to something I said, his answer was — can you guess? You're right!

"I hear ya" is a handy phrase with varying degrees of sincerity. It is used to blow off what someone has said and to sometimes show genuine interest in the topic at hand. In my editor's case, he was genuinely stating that he understood my point, but in the social setting it is often used as a means to avoid relevant comment on what one may consider an insignificant subject.

In my dad's case, I believe it was discontentment with what I was proposing, but I didn't interpret it that way at the time. Or maybe I did and I didn't want to admit it.

Anyway, the phrase has been in my communications' arsenal for well over six months now and I'm learning to decipher the message. I know that it will take a few more months before the words lose societal impact, but I believe the phrase reflects the attitude of the '90s very well.

I don't know who started it or how the phrase gained such community recognition, but in my mind it has been a success. Like a bad rumor that has gone around the block several thousand times, it keeps coming back to haunt me. In my mind, my boyfriend started it all . . . and I wish I could get him back for it!

The next time you're out dining or dancing or whatever — listen to the crowds and count how many times you hear that phrase. You will be amazed at its prevalence and at its impact on the speaker. You really will. You hear?

Do We Really Need New Expressway?

In all the rhetoric published on the Savings and Loan debacle, we have seen very little said about the fact that the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation (FDIC) is doing what it was designed to do.

For those old enough to remember, one of the main contributing factors to the great Depression of 1929 was the failure of hundreds of banks, which wiped out the life savings of millions of American families. With consumers deprived of money to spend, the rest of the economy came tumbling down. In spite of heavy federal government pump priming, the economy did not fully recover until the start of World War II, eleven years later.

Fortunately, thanks to the FDIC, this has not happened with the failure of the Savings and Loan institutions. The cost, however, has been astronomical. The failure lies not with the FDIC, but with the regulators who allowed things to get out of hand, and with the politicians who interfered with the regulators carrying out their duties. It has been estimated that the cost of the bailout will be $500 billion or around $2,000 for every man, woman and child in the country.

This is a heavy burden for the average taxpaying household in this country, and taxpayers' resentment is well justified.

On August 7, thanks to recently re-elected Councilman Will Sessions, who sponsored the resolution, the new developer-oriented city council committed the residents of Virginia Beach to spending the truly astronomical amount of $78,000,000 for the Southeastern Expressway; a road that can no longer be economically justified. Only Councilwoman Reba McClanahan voted against it with Mayor Meyers Oberndorf and Councilwoman Nancy Parker abstaining. Including interest on the bonds, the cost to every man, woman and child in Virginia Beach will be over $3,000, or 50 percent higher than the S&L bailout; and this is just one boondoggle road!

Sessions' resolution glowingly speaks of the advantages to be gained by the construction of the road, but nowhere mentions its cost. Other items, also not included in the resolution but which were brought out by the three speakers against the resolution, were that the project was being held up by the Environmental Protection Agency because of the potential adverse effect to the environment; that the exact route has still not been determined by the Virginia Department of Transportation (VDOT); and that the prior city council has agreed that a public hearing would be held before taking any further action on the project. There were no speakers in favor of the resolution.

Why then did Sessions push so strongly for the resolution? The Citizens Action Coalition thinks the answer lies in his statement that he had spoken with various transportation officials and some members of our delegation to the General Assembly in Richmond. Although not widely publicized, it is known that several of our representatives to Richmond are pushing, along with the Hampton Roads Chamber of Commerce, to create a regional authority with appointed members, which will have the authority to raise funds through the establishment of tolls on highways, bridges and tunnels, stickers on cars and other so-called user fees. A tax by an other name is still a tax, and for it to be imposed by an appointed body not responsive to the voters' will, leaves a bitter taste in our mouth. Somehow, we felt, dating back to the Boston Tea Party and the American Revolution, that the people of this country have always been of the belief that "taxation without representation is tyranny." Regardless of this, they are still going full steam ahead to have legislation ready for the next General Assembly session.

As former Governor Gerald Baliles did for his massive tax increase for highway funds, they need justification on which they can base this new massive tax burden on the people. What could be more suitable than a half-billion-

Laborfest Assistants Are Invaluable

I am always impressed by the level of commitment to volunteerism in Virginia Beach and Hampton Roads. Laborfest '90 is proving to be another example of that dedication as hundreds of people step forward to lend a helping hand, a warm smile and personal support.

A positive, peaceful and enjoyable 1990 Labor Day weekend is vital to this city's future. An atmosphere of brotherhood, harmony and welcome is vital to the success of Laborfest '90. What better way to help achieve that friendly atmosphere than utilizing volunteer festival assistants as hosts and hostesses.

These folks will stroll up and down the boardwalk and Atlantic Avenue, meeting and greeting visitors. They will provide information and assistance on entertainment, shuttle schedules, beach rules, city ordinances, etc. They will help dispel rumors, correct misinformation and resolve complaints.

Festival assistants will be easily identified in their bright yellow T-shirts and matching caps with "Laborfest '90, Volunteer Assistant" emblazoned on their backs.

Thus far, more than 400 citizens from Virginia Beach and Hampton Roads have volunteered as festival assistants. This hospitality crew includes private citizens, members of sororities and fraternities, local education.

How Teachers Spend The Summer

This week's article was written by Lisa Guhrle, Virginia Beach Education Association vice-president.

About this time every summer, people ask enviously of teachers and children, "What have you been doing with yourself over your long vacation? Boy, what would I give for two long months with absolutely nothing to do."

For many teachers, summer is a busy time. We travel, take college courses required for state recertification, work for additional family income, attend educational seminars and conferences, get reacquainted with our families, and recharge ourselves for the fall.

In addition, this summer, many students and teachers were involved in the Virginia Beach public schools' expanded summer school program. The elementary program encompassed reading and math, from grades one through sixth, Virginia's sixth grade "literacy passport" emphasis, "English as a Second Language," and special education.

Teachers had the advantage of getting glimpses into an educational setting that valued individual differences, instructional assistance, and workable class size in an atmosphere that was relaxed, and even fun!

This year, summer school was held in 12 school centers. Rather than a traditional pass/fail approach, an innovative remedial program was accomplished. Each teacher was assigned one subject area to teach and two sessions.

Reapportioning Mosquito Boroughs!

A funny thing happened on my way to learn more about redistricting. I was one of the 15 who attended the first public hearing on reapportionment on July 18 at the Princess Anne High School. While I realized that changing the boundaries of the boroughs would be vexatious, I had no idea how many problems it would raise.

One speaker stated that the borough name was used in describing real estate. Thus, he recommended drawing new voting districts, rather than re-drawing borough boundaries. Another speaker insisted that the old borough names should be retained as they were historical and meant a great deal to the public.

I recently called the clerk of the circuit court, J. Curtis Fruit, for verification about using the borough name in describing real property. He said, "The legal description of the property usually includes the name of the land on which the land is located." He then added that old Princess Anne land books were divided in various ways, especially when it came to mosquitoes. "Mosquitoes?" I asked incredulously.

I then realized that reapportionment was going to be more difficult than I had imagined. Still, I believe election reform is needed in our city...

This was shocking. I never knew that there had been a Kempsville Borough and also a Kempsville "Mosquito" Borough!

Mosquito Boroughs had just never come to my attention. It bugged me to think that such vital information had been withheld at the hearing. I de-

Despite Objections, City Council Endorses Southeastern Expressway

Impassioned objections by Councilwoman Reba McClanan to a resolution endorsing the Southeastern Expressway's construction failed to sway council. The resolution was recently adopted by a vote of 8-1, with McClanan dissenting and Mayor Meyera Oberdorf and Councilwoman Nancy Parker abstaining.

Councilman William D. Sessions Jr., who proposed the resolution, said that he had talked with state legislators and the message was that a signal needed to be sent to Richmond, not endorsing any route, but saying that the expressway was vital to Virginia Beach.

McClanan said that the item was inappropriately placed on the agenda. She said that a year ago council indicated that it would take no further action on the highway until a public hearing was held.

Oberdorf based her abstention on the confusion surrounding the public hearing. Oberdorf also pointed out that the city had already supported the concept in a resolution passed unanimously by council on Aug. 25, 1986.

The concept, she said, was introduced by former Mayor Robert J.G. Jones.

Vice Mayor Robert E. Fantress said that council "needed to tell the people in Richmond we need this road." He said that the city could always cut the project later.

McClanan said that considerable money has already been spent on the road, which has escalated in its estimated cost from $200 million to $578 million. She said that the next step in road building normally is a location hearing. No route has been decided on the Virginia Beach side, although the City of Chesapeake has selected its preferred route.

More recently, environmental considerations indicate that the highway's cost, if it can be built at all, may go even higher.

McClanan said the cost is getting all out of proportion for a 21-mile road. She said some people, including developers, see the road as a gravy train. She said that she had no problem with the business community and the property owners making a profit, but that she had a problem when she was at the other end.

She said that the road will be the biggest ever built in the city and that it is important that it is built properly and at the least cost to the city. But without a route, how would the cost be known, she asked. She said that she represented most of the area where the road will be located, and her constituents expected a public hearing.

McClanan said that the road may be good for economic development, but at what cost? She objected that the item was on the agenda. In the middle of the summer, when most of the people go on vacations, she said, we have a resolution that will affect the city more than everything else.

"I don't normally disagree with Mr. Sessions, but, I'm not with him on this," she added.

Oberdorf suggested that an urban boulevard may be preferable, and noted that setbacks were no longer part of the plan.

"The people don't realize that with the soils we have," said councilman John A. Baum, "we won't have major projects built anywhere."

Councilman James W. Brazier Jr. said that all the resolution does is send the message to Richmond that the new council endorses the plan.

"I'm getting tired of it all," Mc-

Clanan said. "This road goes through the area of the city I represent and we have told the citizens we would have a public hearing."

Lou Pace said the cost was too high.

Rae LeSene wanted to know how many millions of dollars the city would lose if the road was not built, how many millions in consultants fees have been spent, how the city was going to pay for the road and from where the money is coming. He said that it was a "road to nowhere. Why build it?" He suggested instead that the city get behind a regional mass transit system.

Darlene Kyle, of Landstowne Road, said that the people have lost their rights. She said that property owners were interested in knowing where the road will be located so that they would be free to do what they wanted to with their property.

City council last Tuesday turned down a request of the Labor Day Community Coordination Committee to change the traffic plan approved by council a little more than a month ago.

Dr. Harrison B. Wilson and Andrew S. Fine, Labor Day Committee co-chairmen, asked that professionals in the field be allowed to decide on whether to use a more or less restrictive plan, depending on the apparent needs, to provide greater flexibility.

The plan adopted by council on July 2, per the committee's recommendation, would close to traffic the Old Beach area, from Laskin Road to Rudee Inlet. Fine said that this plan probably may be too restrictive for the residents and may make the beach appear to be an armed camp to the rest of the world.

He asked that professionals be allowed to determine whether to use the more restrictive plan or an alternate one, which also was considered, that would close Atlantic and Pacific Avenues and a portion of Arctic Avenue from Laskin Road to 12th Street.

He pointed out that the city does not know how many visitors will attend Laborfest and that if only 30,000 come here, the more restrictive plan would be a "terrible inconvenience" for residents and visitors.

Under the committee's recommendation, the less restrictive traffic plan might be used on Friday and Saturday morning, when the more restrictive plan going into place when the crowds are greater. He said that the professionals working with the committee suggested the flexible plan when they were asked specifically by the chairmen to express their opinions during a recent 31-hour session.

James W. Brazier Jr. asked whether the proposal was intended to provide security for the people "or to tell the nation we're not racist."

He said that he had originally felt that the less restrictive plan was the better strategy, but had voted for the more restrictive plan because the committee had the endorsement of Shadowlawn and other affected communities.

He said that by the time the decision is made to switch plans, the streets will be packed. He said that the beach can expect a lot of daytrippers and a lot of cars.

The traffic plan was intended to relieve congestion along the resort strip and to eliminate parking on residential streets. Residents will be given passes to get to and from their homes. Hotel guests also will be allowed to drive to their hotels, but transportation to and from other locations will be provided by bus.

Fine said that the committee proposal is not a fall-back to the less restrictive plan, but a blend of the two. He said that parking in the neighborhoods is a valid concern.

Council, by a vote of 9-2, decided to stick by its July 2 action. Councilman Paul Lanteigne and Councilwoman Reba McClanan dissented. Councilman Louis R. Jones remarked that while council voted to enforce the traffic plan, City Manager Aubrey V. Watts Jr. was at liberty to take responsibility for changes.

Lou Pace said that the restrictions abuse his and the students' rights. He is against blocking the area at all.

Rhona Tracy, who has been one of the leaders of the residents opposing the use of Redwing Park for the weekend events, complained that she has had a problem getting information on security measures around her neighborhood.

Charles Rouse, of Springfield Court, who lives two miles from the park, said that the citizens want restrictions. Rouse has filed a suit against the city charging that the city would be violating its own ordinance by allowing the park to be used by Laborfest visitors for special events.

Rouse said that the city ordinance says that the park would be open to the public. In fact, he said, four members of the present council voted for the ordinance in 1981 - McClanan, Mayor Meyera Oberdorf, and Councilmen John A. Baum and Harold Heischouer. He said that a prayer meeting was denied at Mt. Trashmore under the same ordinance.

McClanan said that the ordinance has not been repealed, but that she would agree that it has been set aside.

Rouse said, "We're making exceptions, catering to special interest groups... catering to Norfolk State University which would like to have a major event... I don't think the people want Laborfest."

Heischouer said that it would be wise to stay with the approved traffic plan.

Council Goal May Include Limiting Speakers

A memo sent to city council members by Mayor Meyera Oberdorf on council goals is reaping results.

Among the replies received so far by the mayor are two from members who have suggested that a ten-minute limit be placed on speakers. The speakers can be given extra time if council chooses.

Also, reported Oberdorf Tuesday, some members prefer that only matters on the agenda be discussed and new items should be placed under new business.

Oberdorf, who has asked for at least three and no more than five issues or goals from each council member, is planning to compile the list and bring it back to council at a work session.

Navy Achievement Medal Awarded To NAS Oceana's Good Samaritan Norris

By Annette Hall
Special To The Virginia Beach Sun

Most of us are still shaking off those early morning "cobwebs" on the way to work.

At 7 a.m. last March 20, Machinist's Mate First Class (MMI) Ronald L. Norris had not time for "cobwebs." His "Good Samaritan" reaction to a roadside motorcycle accident at the Princess Anne and Landstown Roads intersection gave the victim the best possible chances of surviving.

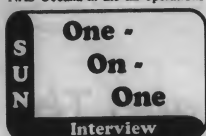

Certified to practice emergency medical services (EMS) as a first responder, Norris identified himself to the victim, saying he was there to help. Upon checking, Norris found that the toes of the injured man's left foot were amputated and that he was bleeding profusely.

Norris carries first responder emergency medical equipment in his truck. Once Norris was able to control the bleeding, he then began a secondary survey of the victim's injuries and monitored his vital signs - pulse, respiration and blood pressure levels. Norris continued his efforts to stabilize and comfort the victim, despite the cold and rainy weather.

The victim was in shock, but alert when the ambulance arrived. Norris passed on his evaluation to the attendants, who were then able to immediately continue medical care and transport the injured man to the hospital.

Assigned to the NAS Oceana Naval Legal Service Office Detachment, Norris learned that the injured man, too, was assigned to NAS Oceana in the air operations department. Continuing his assistance, Norris notified the department of the accident and the fellow sailor's condition.

Furmanite America, Inc. Expands In Virginia Beach

Furmanite America, Inc., an industrial repair company specializing in on-line leak sealing, machining, bolting and trevister services throughout North and South America, recently purchased a three-acre parcel at the corner of Voyager Court and International Parkway in Oceana West Corporate Park.

Furmanite plans a new 12,000 square-foot office and warehouse operation with investment of approximately $750,000.

The new facility will serve as Furmanite's American corporate headquarters and provide expanded warehouse space for teflon, rubber based self-forming gasket materials, injection guns, hand and machine tools, protective clothing and safety equipment.

The company's four major services to industry include leak sealing, safety and relief valve testing, machining and bolt tensioning. Furmanite's customer base includes power stations, fossil fueled and nuclear; pulp and paper mills, chemical manufacturing plants and oil refineries.

Furmanite employs 35, with an annual payroll of approximately $1.5 million and annual sales of $35 million. The company is presently located in Virginia Beach and is leasing space.

In 1922, Clay Furman, a Virginia shipyard foreman, developed a sealant to seal on-line steam leaks without a system shutdown. Furman started a small business packaging and selling small leak-sealing kits. In 1927, two Englishmen acquired United Kingdom sales and manufacturing rights to the formula. In 1966, Alan Forsyth, a consultant to Furmanite in England, suggested that the company expand by providing trained technicians. The recommendation boosted profits and in 1970, Forsyth was named managing director of Furmanite.

Forsyth visited the United States in 1971 and discovered Furman's son, Bob, still operating the family business sales business in Norfolk. Bob Furman was impressed by the success of converting from product sales to full service leak sealing and began discussions with the British company, paving the way for the formation of Furmanite America, Inc., in September 1972. In 1973, with a staff of five, the company moved to new offices and two months later sealed its first leak.

The company grew quickly, establishing offices in Pennsylvania, Indiana, Texas, Georgia, California and Ontario.

In December 1981, controlling interest in Furmanite was acquired by J. Bibby and Sons PLC. At that time, Furmanite International employed 500 people worldwide, more than half of whom reported to the Virginia Beach headquarters. In October 1986, the management, staff and a group of three institutional investors repurchased the company. Sovran Bank of Virginia and Natwest Bank of Great Britain provided the financing.

Furmanite now operates throughout the United States and Canada, West Europe, the Middle East, Africa, India, Japan, China, Australia, Czechoslovakia, Hungary, Yugoslavia, Argentina, Brazil and Mexico, directly employing more than seven hundred people.

Museum Announces Activities

The Virginia Marine Science Museum has announced the following activities:

✓ Museum staff members will be on hand for a behind-the-scenes tour on Tuesday, August 14 from 7 until 9 p.m.

Museum specialists will discuss what is involved in taking care of a large and varied collection of plants and animals, in addition to giving participants a tour of the Coastal River Room and Chesapeake Bay Aquarium.

The fee is $2 for members and $3 for non-members. Registration deadline is August 7.

For more information call 425-3476.

✓ The museum will hold a shell program during its August 9 "Discovery Day."

The August 16 Discover Day will focus on the question, "Why do we care so much about whales and dolphins?"

Discovery Days feature a different topic each week with special displays, demonstrations, activities, and crafts of interest to children and adults. Admission is free with admission to the museum.

For more information call 425-3476.

✓ The museum holds "marsh walks" on the Owls Creek Salt Marsh daily at 10:30 a.m.

The program focuses on the plants and animals that inhabit the marsh. The museum is located at 717 General Booth Boulevard.

Admission to the program is free with admission to the museum.

Museum Exhibits 12 Artists

The month of August will be one of a cooperative effort for two Virginia Beach facilities.

The Life-Saving Museum of Virginia, located at 24th Street and the Oceanfront, is currently showing the works of twelve artists from the Working Gallery.

The "Marine Art Exhibition" is a for sale show of acrylics, watercolors, oil, collage and color pencil works by noted area artists that have galleries on Pacific Avenue, which are open to the public for visitation, while the artists create their various works.

Works sold in the museum have a portion of the proceeds donated to benefit its outreach and educational programs. Artists selected for this show include Constance Fahey, Rabbiah Levinson and Robert Brownson.

The show continues for the entire month of August.

The museum is open Monday through Saturday from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m.; and on Sunday from noon to 5 p.m. Call 422-1587 for more information.

New School Board Chairman Greg Stillman Wants To Raise The Quality Of Education

By Karen Dalrymple
Staff Writer

Greg Stillman is a lawyer, but his main priority is to raise the quality of education and improve test scores in Virginia Beach.

His deep concern recently helped him elected chairman of the Virginia Beach School Board.

"My job, principally, is to act as chief spokesman for the board, to run the meetings, prepare the agenda and to function in a leadership capacity," said Stillman, a Bay Colony resident.

Stillman didn't always have a big interest in public education. A Chesapeake native, he graduated from the University of Richmond in 1969 with a degree in English. He then went on to Washington and Lee University to pursue a law career.

After graduating from law school, Stillman immediately joined Hunter and Williams law firm, headquartered in Richmond. In 1979, he was sent to Norfolk to open a new office.

said Stillman, who also served on the city's Community Services Board. "It was then that I developed my interest in serving on the school board."

Stillman was appointed to a three-year school board term by city council 18 months ago. He recently replaced former chairman James Fletcher, who stepped down after three and one-half years.

Stillman said the board's five priorities are: excellence; a commitment to at-risk kids; managing growth; technology; and reducing the drop-out rate. He said what motivated him to become involved with the school board was his desire to contribute

"As a lawyer, I had been representing the City of Virginia Beach on a number of matters."

Loneran Day Set By Mayor

Whereas: Gregory Loneran, an extension agent for commercial horticulture in the Agriculture Department, City of Virginia Beach, has been the driving force behind the Virginia Horticulture Conference, serving on the Planning Committee of the Virginia Horticulture Conference since its inception in 1979 with responsibility for program development and organization of this event since 1984. Under his leadership, the Conference has evolved into the largest Horticultural conference in the State, serving as a major clearing house for the dissemination of information from top experts in the country, providing training to our local, State and regional industry. With the massive use of chemical fertilizers and pesticides within populated areas with extensive waterways, the knowledge that the Conference makes available is a critical asset to the industry.

Whereas: In 1990, Greg received the Most Outstanding Urban Education Program Award from the Virginia Association of Agriculture Extension Agents for his work which has greatly benefitted the industry. Over 42,000 man-hours of professional training have been offered through this educational program.

Whereas: Greg has raised the professional standards of the industry by the business management skills instilled in the new members, which have effectively helped protect the professional status of the entire industry.

Whereas: The Department of Convention and Visitor Development named Greg their 1989 "Ambassador Extraordinaire" for his success in bringing visitors to our city, through the Horticulture Conference, during the critical off-season at the Virginia Beach Pavilion.

Whereas: Now that Greg has advanced to other projects, he leaves behind an institution that will continue to carry on his work of improving the vision and performance of this industry which is responsible of the beauty we, as citizens, enjoy as we drive to our jobs and leisure activities.

Now, therefore, I, Meyera E. Oberndorf, Mayor of the City of Virginia Beach, do hereby proclaim: August 1, 1990 as Greg Loneran Day, in Virginia Beach to recognize and pay him tribute for his contribution to our city. Given under my hand and seal this first day of August, Nineteen Hundred and Ninety.

The new $1.75 million information center will provide tourists with information, brochures, and assistance, said tourist sales and convention director, Hester Waterfield. Five people behind the scenes will answer toll-free phone calls.

The new 6,300-square-foot Virginia Beach Information Center was built because the city's tourism is increasing and the old information center, which was located at Pacific Avenue and 19th Street, was not as accessible to people just arriving to the city, said Mayor Meyera E. Oberndorf.

New $1.75 Million Visitor Info Center To Meet Rising Tourists' Needs

By Kerry Lyndsay Hoffheimer
Staff Writer

Tourism brought a total of $530 million to this city last year, and created 21,000 jobs, Virginia Beach Mayor Meyera E. Oberndorf said to those gathered for the new $1.75 Visitor Information Center's recently held ribbon cutting ceremony.

The new 6,300 square-foot center, located in the median at the end of route 44, between the Pavilion and the Virginia Beach Center for the Arts, was built as part of the city's capital improvement program, to accommodate the growing number of Virginia Beach tourists, said Oberndorf.

Since 1973, the overnight tourist population has grown from 1.4 to an estimated 2.5 million visitors annually city statistics show.

The center, which is built on city-donated land, replaces the former Pacific Avenue and 19th Street information center, located beside the dome. Because of its "strategic" location, the new center is expected to attract more visitors than the old one, said a city press release.

The old center handled an average of 100 walk-in visitors per hour during the summer of 1989, and a total of 150,000 visitors throughout the year.

synthetic stucco finish and concrete block with a blue metal roof.

A total of ten people will staff the new facility, working in shifts of seven to ten people per shift. They will distribute informational brochures, orient visitors with aerial photographs and maps, and have videotapes playing on monitors describing local activities and entertainment.

About five city representatives will be available to answer toll-free phone calls and provide information about the city.

"We expect that the request for information stimulated by tourism advertising is increasing," said Tourism Sales and Promotion Coordinator Hester Waterfield. "The new center will help meet this demand."

Mayor Proclaims Coast Guard Month

Whereas: The United States Coast Guard has served this Nation well in war and peace, and in both, protected this nation against enemies and the use of the sea for crimes against the nation;

Whereas: The U.S. Coast Guard has also served the nation well in protecting against the perils of the sea by rescuing those in danger at sea, maintaining aids to navigation, protecting the environment, and regulating the safety of vessels and ports;

Whereas: The U.S. Coast Guard's present-day battle against the importation of drugs by sea reminds us of the origins of those first 10 cutters charged by the first Congress with guarding the coast against smugglers;

Whereas: August 4, 1990, marks the 200th birthday of the U.S. Coast Guard.

Now, therefore, I, Meyera E. Oberndorf, Mayor of the City of Virginia Beach, do hereby proclaim: August 1990 as Coast Guard Month and encourage all citizens of Virginia Beach to take notice of this special occasion.

In witness whereof, I have hereunto set my hand and cause the Seal of the City of Virginia Beach, Virginia to be affixed this first day of August, Nineteen Hundred and Ninety.

Incubator Development Center Announced

Mayor Meyera E. Oberndorf and Old Dominion University President Dr. James V. Koch have jointly announced that Commonwealth's first incubator development center, devoted to biotechnology and related technical research will be in Virginia Beach.

The Virginia Biotech Development Center is expected to draw to the city a large number of new small research companies. Prospective tenants will be university and private sector researchers. Both non-profit and profit companies will specialize in areas, such as cellular research, as it relates to human problems, cancer and heart disease.

Biotechnology research has its basis in biology and involves laboratory research on live tissues to advance the art of medically treating human problems.

The center is expected to provide a decentralized, flexible environment designed to support new and existing small biotechnological companies. The center is designed to pull laboratory intensive companies into Virginia Beach through the auspices of the center which will initially be located at 841 Seahawk Circle in Oceana West Corporate Park.

Non-profit research frequently produces applications best suited to "for profit" production. Both non-profit and for profit spinoff will be located at the Biotech Center. Assistance channeled through the center by the educational and development communities will support the formation and success of fledgling enterprises generated in the research community.

The center is a joint venture of the City of Virginia Beach, Old Dominion University and Bay Properties, Inc. The city, through its Department of Economic Development, will market the program for Virginia Beach and in cooperation with Forward Hampton Roads and the Virginia Department of Economic Development. The Old Dominion Entrepreneurial Center, which is funded by Virginia's Center for Innovative Technology, will provide business assistance education, developing business and marketing plans and education relating to non-financial and financial resources.

Bay Properties, developer of the building housing the venture, will act as property manager of the 15,000 square-foot operation. The facility will charge competitive rents and provide access to specialized capital intensive laboratory equipment as well as shared business services such as office equipment and clerical staff.

The concept for this unique partnership originated with Dennis Ackerman, director of the Old Dominion Entrepreneurial Center, during his service as a subcommittee chairman on the Mayor's Strategic Plan for Economic Development Committee.

Although the center will initially be located in the Bay Properties facility, the program is designed to expand throughout the city as matches are made between new ventures, researchers and property owners. The organizational structure will remain in place to identify additional facilities and continue the process of attracting and providing support to those new enterprises created through biotechnology research.

The center's first tenant is expected to be fully operational in a month. Negotiations with several prospective tenants from out of state are in process with a formal grand opening at the center planned for October.

Police Seek Sexual Assaulters

Virginia Beach police would like the community's help in solving three burglaries in which women were sexually assaulted. Detectives suspect that one man may be responsible for all three attacks. Crime Solvers is offering a cash reward of up to $1,000 for information that will lead to an arrest.

The first attack occurred in the 100 block of South Palm Avenue, Thalia Village, on Thursday, June 21, at about 2:30 a.m. The next attack occurred in the 700 block of Linden Court, Timberlake, on Saturday, June 30 at about 3:30 a.m. The last attack occurred in the 3400 block of Waltham Circle in Hollygrier, on Sunday, July 8 at about 1:40 a.m. Each time, the man was armed with a knife and wore a dark, hooded sweatshirt drawn tightly around his face.

The man police are looking for is described as either a white male with a dark complexion or a black male with a light complexion. He appeared to be in his twenties or early thirties, medium in height, with a thin build and a slight mustache.

Anyone who has information can call Crime Solvers anonymously at 427-0000. Phone calls are not recorded or traced.

"Last Yummy Bite"

Beach Woman Eats 16-Ounce Can Of Dog Food To Win $1,800 Shopping Spree

By Kerry Lyndsay Hofheimer
Staff Writer

"It was the most disgusting thing I could think of," said contest-winner Susan (she didn't want her last name released), a Virginia Beach resident who wolfed down a 16-ounce can of Alpo dog food, along with some Doritos, at a local radio station promotion held recently in Lynnhaven Mall's parking lot.

The contest's purpose, said Z104 emcee Doc Holliday, was to come up with the most outrageous and disgusting way to eat Doritos.

The six entries were as follows:

Shannon Baldwin and Debbie Luquias used peanut butter as glue to stick Doritos all over their leotard and tights, and they proceeded to eat the Doritos off of each other.

Terry Russell, wearing his wife's wedding dress, had his head shaved, with a "Z" razorred in on the back of his head, while eating Doritos.

Mark Spencer, wearing a diaper, sat in a baby pool eating Doritos, while friends poured used-motor oil over him.

Greg Lavin, dressed as Humpty Dumpty, danced to the song, Do the Humpty Hump, while dipping Doritos in a raw egg mixture and eating them.

theme song while pouring a large bowl of salsa over his body, and occasionally guzzling down the spicy stuff.

And, of course, there was Susan, who grimaced as though she might vomit, as she consumed the dog chow while the thirty or so in the audience cheered her on.

"Don't ever do this when you grow up," Susan told a wide-eyed child, but she said she is excited about her prize, an $1,800 Lynnhaven Mall shopping spree, on which, she said, she plans to "buy" a pair of diamond earrings.

Holliday teased Susan on the air, making comments such as, "You have bad breath," and, "Listen everybody, she's eating her last yummy bite."

The audience chose the winner, by applauding the loudest, but it was a close call between "Chip," who sported an elaborate Dorito costume and announced, "Ladies, ever dance with a Dorito in the cool morning air" (a Batman take-off), and Susan, who said, "Don't ever prostitute yourself for money, as I have."

"Chip" also gave this advice: "Don't ever volunteer for anything before 8 a.m. I was asleep and I should have known better."

Holliday said the radio station's staff members came up with the contest idea, "to be funny, promote the station, and promote Doritos - they loved the idea."

Perhaps the only one who left the contest with any appetite was Samantha, Susan's dog, who spent much of the morning watching her owner eat what she thought was going to be her breakfast.

School News

Schools Set Meal Policy, Price

The Virginia Beach public school system recently announced its policy for free and reduced price meals for children unable to pay the full price for meals served under the National School Lunch Program and the School Breakfast Program.

Each Virginia Beach public school, and the School Administration Office, has a copy of the policy, which may be reviewed by interested parties. The following household size and income criteria will be used for determining eligibility:

Household size	Maximum household income for free meals	Household income for reduced price meals
1	$ 8,164	$ 8,164.01 - $11,618
2	10,946	10,946.01 - 15,577
3	13,728	13,728.01 - 19,536
4	16,510	16,510.01 - 23,495
5	19,292	19,292.01 - 27,454
6	22,074	22,074.01 - 31,413
7	24,856	24,856.01 - 35,372
8	27,638	27,638.01 - 39,331
For each additional family member add	$2,782	$3,959

Children from families whose income is at or below the household level shown are eligible for free or reduced price meals.

During the first week of school, application forms will be sent to all homes with a letter to parents or guardians. To apply for free or reduced price meals, households should complete the application and return it to the school. Additional copies will be available in the principal's office at each school. The information provided on the application will be used to determine eligibility and may be verified at any time during the school year by school, or other program officials.

For the school officials to determine eligibility, the household must provide the following information listed on the application:

- ✓ Names of all household members.
- ✓ Social Security numbers of the primary wage earner or the adult household member signing the application.
- ✓ All income received in the household, or the household's case number if they currently receive food stamps or Aid To Families With Dependent Children (AFDC)/Aid to Dependent Children (ADC).
- ✓ The signature of an adult household member certifying that the information provided is correct.

Households are required to report increases in household income of over $50 per month, or $600 per year, and decreases in household size. Applications may be submitted at any time during the year.

ment for free and reduced price meals contains an outline of the hearing procedures.

If a household member becomes unemployed or if the household size changes, the family should contact the school. Such changes may make the child or the household eligible for reduced price meals, or for additional benefits such as free meals if the family income falls at or below the levels shown above.

In certain cases, foster children are also eligible for these benefits. If a household has foster care children living with them, who are the legal responsibility of the courts or welfare agency, and wishes to apply for such meals for them, the household must complete an application.

The information provided by the household is confidential and will be used only for purposes of determining eligibility and verifying data.

In the operation of child feeding programs administered by the U.S. Department of Agriculture, no child will be discriminated against because of race, color, sex, national origin, age or handicap. If any member of a household believes he/she has been discriminated against, they should write immediately to the Secretary of Agriculture, Washington, D.C. 20250.

Boyer Delivers School Report

Virginia Beach Public Schools Superintendent E. Carlton Boyer will deliver a report on the school division's curriculum assessment and revision project to the Program Equity Committee of the Governor's Commission on Educational Opportunity for All Virginians.

Boyer, and Executive Director Dr. K. Edwin Brown, will speak to the committee on Wednesday, August 22 at 1 p.m. in Richmond in the west conference room of the General Assembly Building.

The committee is holding a series of meetings to investigate educational opportunities in schools and school divisions across the state. The committee wanted to look at model programs in curriculum and staff development and invited the Virginia Beach participation.

The Program Equity Committee is chaired by Dr. Judith D. Ball, superintendent of York County

Public Schools. Members are Frances A. Lewis, member of the State Board of Education; Delegate Ford C. Quillen of Scott County; Madeline I. Wade, president of the Virginia Education Association; Lillian M. Brinkley, principal of Willard Elementary School in Norfolk; and Rosal H. Schewel, a citizen from Lynchburg appointed by Governor Douglas Wilder.

The Governor's Commission has also established committees on pupil equity and fiscal equity.

Boyer was invited to discuss Virginia Beach's efforts to eliminate student tracking through new teaching strategies. He is scheduled to meet with the committee on August 13, also in the General Assembly Building.

All Commission meetings are open to the public.

Allison Erwin Locates At Beach

A 100-year-old distribution firm has chosen Virginia Beach for its newest expansion.

Allison Erwin Company, a diversified manufacturing and distribution firm headquartered in Charlotte, N.C., has located a branch of its wholesale floor covering division in the Airport West Building in the Airport Industrial Park.

The 8,000-square-foot facility will employ six to eight people. It will distribute such brands as Congoleum and Anderson and will carry vinyl resilient flooring, tile, carpet and other related products.

Allison Erwin began in 1892 as the Charlotte Hardware Company. At that time, larger hardware stores supplied smaller, rural stores. Charlotte Hardware Company shifted emphasis from retail sales to wholesale distribution to meet that need. The company now operates throughout the middle-Atlantic and southeastern United States.

The company's administration and management are based in Charlotte, along with its largest warehouse of 250,000 square-feet and a 50,000 square-foot HVAC fabrication operation. Other operations are located in Columbia S.C.; Raleigh, N.C.; Greenville, S.C.; the Greensboro - High Point - Winston Salem, N.C. area; Richmond, and now Virginia Beach.

The company has nine divisions, distributing outdoor power equipment, microcomputer products, industrial storage equipment, central heating/ventilation and air conditioning equipment, televisions, fabricated custom window blinds manufactured by Allison Erwin, floor coverings and in North Carolina, Coca-Cola syrup for soda fountain uses.

Police Seek Auto Thieves

Virginia Beach auto theft detectives would like the community's help in solving a one-night spree of stolen cars, larcenies and vandalism. A reward is being offered by Crime Solvers for information that leads to an arrest.

During the night of Friday, June 8 and the early morning hours of Saturday, June 9, thieves stole five cars and broke into five others on Chisholm Drive, Clyne Lane, Carnegie Road and Cameron Lane in Brookwood. All the cars have been recovered, but they sustained several hundred dollars in damage. Items stolen from the cars include stereos, amplifiers, speakers, televisions, tools, money and a bicycle.

Anyone who has information about these thefts or the location of any of the stolen property can call Crime Solvers at 427-000. Rewards of up to $1,000 are paid in cash and can be collected without callers giving name or testifying in court.

Domestic Linens Moves To Beach

Domestic Linen, a 60-year old company originally established in Michigan, has moved its Hampton Roads operation to Virginia Beach.

The uniform, apparel, restaurant and allied products supply distribution facility has leased 5,600 square-feet of office/warehouse space at 5784 B Arrowhead Drive. The firm's current staff of eight is expected to increase rapidly according to Branch Manager Ray Jarreau.

The Virginia Beach plant is one of 50 locations throughout the United States and serves the entire area from Williamsburg, Virginia south to Elizabeth City, N.C. and west to Emporia. Domestic Linen holds the nationwide contract for A & P and travels weekly to the Eastern Shore to serve the grocery chain operation there.

Domestic Linen opened its southernmost service center in Raleigh, N.C. in late June.

Navy Family Services Sets Banking Seminar

C.G. Academy Accepting Apps.

The United States Coast Guard Academy is now accepting and processing applications from Virginia Beach residents for appointment as a U.S. Coast Guard cadet for the class of 1995.

Applications are being accepted for both men and women.

Appointments as Coast Guard cadets are tendered solely on the basis of an annual nationwide competition, with no congressional nominations or geographical quotas.

Applications must be submitted to the director of admissions prior to December 15, 1990. Candidates must arrange to participate in either the College Board Scholastic Aptitude Test (SAT) or American College Testing Assessment (ACT) prior to or including the December 1990 ACT and SAT test administrations.

Appointments as cadet are tendered based on the candidate's high school record, performance on either the SAT or ACT, and leadership potential as demonstrated by participation in high school activities, community affairs and/or part-time employment. Most successful candidates rank in the top quarter of their high school class and have demonstrated proficiency in both the mathematical and applied science fields.

Candidates must be unmarried at the time of appointment, have no legal obligations resulting from a prior marriage, and must have reached the age of 17 but not 22 by July 1, 1991.

All candidates must be assured of high school graduation by June 30, 1991. All candidates must have completed a minimum of three years of English, and three in mathematics to include algebra and plane or coordinate geometry or their equivalents, and must fulfill basic physical requirements.

Coast Guard cadets obtain an undergraduate education at no personal expense. In addition, they receive pay and allowance fully adequate to fulfill their ordinary living expenses. The constantly updated academy curriculum leads to a Bachelor of Science degree, with a strong academic emphasis on engineering and science. The selected major studies, when combined with varied elective courses, establish a solid foundation for a challenging career. Academy graduates are commissioned as Ensigns in the United States Coast Guard. Selected officers may pursue further postgraduate education and specialized training at many leading civilian and military graduate or professional schools, in such fields as aviation, business administration, electronics, engineering, law and oceanography.

The young academy graduate can look forward to a varied, exciting and demanding career as a regular Coast Guard officer. Under the Department of Transportation, the Coast Guard performs a variety of missions. These include search and rescue operations by ship and plane, maintenance of advanced electronic and other aids to navigation around the globe, operation of icebreakers which clear the way for all polar expeditions, and enforcement of marine law and all aspects of merchant marine safety. In addition, the Coast Guard has responsibility for boating safety and marine environmental protection.

General News

S.S. Numbers May Differ From IRS

Starting in October, some Virginia Beach residents may receive a notice from their financial institution indicating that the Social Security number and/or the personal name in the institution's records are different from those in the Internal Revenue Service's records.

In some cases, it may be necessary for the person to contact the local Social Security office to change his or her name on Social Security records, or to verify the information already in those records.

If the person needs to change the information in the Social Security records, he or she should have documented evidence showing both his or her old and new names, as well as evidence of identity.

Darts Tournament Benefits MDA

The Tidewater Area Darting Association and a local radio station will sponsor the 17th annual Muscular Dystrophy Tournament from August 31 to September 2 at the Quality Inn Lake Wright Resort and Convention Center.

This event will also host, for the first time, a youth darts tournament, sponsored by Bit of England and open to youth ages six to 17.

The tournament is open to the public. There will be competitions for men, women, mixed teams, singles, doubles, triples and youth. Entry fees are required for all contestants. The darts tournament is sanctioned by the American Darts Organization. Spectators are welcome.

Eljay's Tavern will host national darts professional Paul Lim in an exhibition and challenge on Thursday, August 30. Registration begins at 7 p.m. and competition begins at 8 p.m.

Proceeds from the darts tournament and exhibition are to benefit the Muscular Dystrophy Association and its local patient services programs, which include a medical clinic at Sentara Norfolk General Hospital, orthopedic equipment and other aids to daily living, and a youth summer camping program. All services are offered to the patients at no cost.

Back To School Tips

Fall is back to school time. In fact, each day more than 21 million students will be transported to school - most on school buses.

The National Safety Council suggests that Virginia Beach parents take time to explain the following safety tips to school-aged youngsters.

Get to the bus stop on time and never wait or play in the street. Once the bus has come to a stop, get on, take a seat quickly and keep the aisles clear of book bags or other parcels.

Do not throw things, make loud noises or horse around on the bus. Instead, have respect and obey the driver.

Be careful when leaving the bus. Look both ways before crossing the road and make sure the driver can see you if you cross in front of the bus.

Public Notice

NOTICE OF INVITATION TO BID

Notice is hereby given pursuant to Section 15.1-308 of the Code of Virginia of 1950, as amended (the "Code"), that the Mayor of the City of Virginia Beach (the "City"), will accept written bids at 2:00 p.m. on Sept. 18, 1990, at the City Council Chambers, Municipal Center, Virginia Beach, Virginia for service as lessee under a lease amendment to effect the financing described below. The City Council shall appoint such lessee pursuant to an ordinance scheduled to be adopted at the 2:00 p.m. meeting of the City Council on Sept. 18, 1990, in the City Council Chambers.

The City has leased certain parcels of property adjacent to the Municipal Center (the "Property") to First Union Leasing Corporation ("First Union") for a period of forty (40) years from October 13, 1987, pursuant to a Prime Lease. First Union leased the Property back to the City pursuant to a Real Property Lease. The acquisition of the Property was financed by the public issuance of certificates of participation (the "Certificates") representing direct and proportionate interests in lease payments under the Real Property Lease pursuant to a Trust Agreement. The Trust Agreement provides that additional certificates ("Additional Certificates") may be issued on a parity with the Certificates to finance the construction of improvements on the Property. Other leasing companies or other entities may be added as additional parties to the Prime Lease and Real Property Lease for the purpose of the issuance of Additional Certificates.

The City is constructing a new judicial center complex and intends to finance the construction through the issuance of Additional Certificates. The complex will be located on the Property and other real property owned by the City adjacent to the Property (the "Adjacent Property"). The lessee for the Adjacent Property (the "Company") will agree to lease the Adjacent Property from the City pursuant to the terms of an amendment to the Prime Lease. The Company will agree to lease the Adjacent Property and all improvements thereon to the City pursuant to an amendment to the Real Property Lease. All rights of the Company under the Real Property Lease, as amended, will be assigned by the Company to the Trustee under the Assignment Agreement, as amended, and the Trust Agreement, as amended, for the benefit of the holders of the Certificates and the Additional Certificates. The lease payments of the City under the Real Property Lease, as amended, will be subject to annual appropriations by the City Council. The lease term of the Real Property Lease, as amended, will be equal to the last maturity of the Additional Certificates presently expected to be twenty (20) years. The Certificates will be underwritten by Lehman Brothers, 3raigie Incorporated, Legg Mason Wood Walker, Inc. and Wheat, First Securities, Inc.

Copies of the Prime Lease, the Real Property Lease, the Trust Agreement, the Assignment Agreement and drafts of the proposed amendments thereto and other related financing documents are on file at the City Clerk's Office, Municipal Center, Virginia Beach, Virginia. Interested bidders may contact Giles G. Dodd, Assistant City Manager, Municipal Center, Virginia Beach, Virginia, for down two days early. "Our coverage has to be substantive," Campbell said. "This (Laborfest) has become an immense national story. I've heard that The London Times is even sending people to cover it."

The London Times' Washington editor said that to his knowledge, no one from the paper will be sent, but that this could change.

Whether or not Laborfest becomes a big deal internationally will not diminish the fact that nationally and locally, there is much interest.

"Most of our media interest so far has been local," said Ford.

Newspapers create only a part of this interest. The local branches of the three major networks, NBC, CBS and ABC, are each sending most of their news crews for 24-hour coverage, news directors said.

Each of these networks has chosen posts where they will have live broadcast satellite trucks, which allow for footage from the field and which enable programmers to interrupt regularly-scheduled television shows.

Out-of-town newspaper editors said they have not yet planned specialized locations where journalists will be stationed, but local networks said they will scatter their crews throughout certain beach sites, including the boardwalk, and Red Wing Park, where concerts will be held.

One difference between non-local and local media is that while the former does not necessarily expect trouble, per se, the latter, at least the networks, have publicly announced a commitment to expecting a smooth and well-orchestrated weekend.

To avoid a narrow focus, news directors, such as WAVY's David Overton, WVEC's Dave Cassidy and WTKR's Jay Mitchell, are organizing Laborfest coverage so that all facets of the weekend, such as the city's police presence, visitors' attitudes and their numbers, merchants and how much business they have, and city officials, will be spotlighted.

Non-local media sources said they have not yet developed such strategies, nor have they planned which aspects of the weekend they might or might not highlight.

"We don't like to lock ourselves into particular angles," said Steele. "We're coming with open minds."

sions of two hours each. Each classroom's size was kept deliberately low, averaging 15 to 20 students, and an instructional assistant was assigned to each. Rather than "replay" the exact basal reader experience the child had difficulty with during the school year, new techniques were employed to teach the material in a different, and hopefully, in a more successful way. Even though the old reading texts were used, many of the new "whole language" and "literature-based" approaches added a whole new dimension. Gone was the workbook-based rigidity; instead, children analyzed and discussed, wrote in their own words, read large quantities of books and regularly visited the summer school library - often to research, sometimes to listen to stories read aloud, and even to browse and soak up some topic of interest.

I felt fortunate to have had the opportunity to have worked with this positive summer program. Children, some of whom had already "turned-off" to learning at a very young age because they couldn't keep the pace, had a crucial chance at success that they can carry forth in the new school year. Teachers had the advantage of getting glimpses into an educational setting that valued individual differences, instructional assistance, and workable class size in an atmosphere that was relaxed and even fun!

So, to respond to the uninformed who believe that teachers lie basking on the beach and students "veg" out on MTV for two months, the job of teaching and learning never ends. And that is a pretty good way to spend a summer vacation.

cided to dig deeper into the situation, hoping not to step into a hornet's nest.

I timorously called the commissioner of the revenue, Robert Vaughan. "Yes," he acknowledged, "after the city was formed and for many years, real estate rates had a tax surcharge added if mosquito control was available." One must conclude that the mosquitoes were still getting their (tax) bite!

In an effort to reach the Mosquito Control commissioner, I discovered that the telephone number, listed in the Telephone Guide to Virginia Beach, had been disconnected and that the commission itself had evidently succumbed to bureaucratic reorganization. It is now under "Highways," and no one seems to know if the mosquitoes are being kept under control!

Unable to attend the second hearing on July 25, as I was out of town, I tried to locate someone who had been present. Alas, the public was even more apathetic about reapportionment than I feared, as only six or seven showed up that second evening.

I then realized that reapportionment was going to be more difficult that I had imagined. Still, I believe election reform is needed in our city and this may be the only route to take to get the bugs out of the voting apparatus.

tors and other individuals who want to take an active role in the success of Laborfest '90.

Volunteers will be paired two per block. They will work four- to eight-hour shifts on a 24-hour basis. Prior to Laborfest, festival assistants will receive training in human relations, community resources, public and personal safety, city ordinances and other appropriate topics.

Festival volunteers will be some of the first people with whom visitors will come in contact over the Labor Day weekend. They will help set the tone for this major event. I will be out there with these fine citizens, helping to welcome our visitors and encouraging good will and harmony for the weekend.

More festival assistants are needed and there is still time to volunteer. You can call the Labor Day Task Force Office at 427-4381 to obtain a volunteer application and information about scheduling and training.

I want to personally thank those who have already signed up and those who still may. Your concern for this community and the welfare of our residents and visitors is commendable. We couldn't do this without you.

"My wife dragged me to this," said Portsmouth resident, Mr. L. Myers, who carried his wife's abundant purchases at this year's annual Hit or Miss Tent Sale.

Sale

Saturday, and people began lining up at 1 a.m. that morning, she said.

"People think they're going to really make out because they get here early, but we'll be putting out new merchandise all throughout the sale, so it doesn't really matter when you get here," Pitrone said.

It might even be better to come on one of the later sale days, said Thorn, since the clothing quality tends to improve as the sale goes on, and sometimes the prices are dropped further.

Thorn is just one of the 300 or 400 store managers Hit or Miss brought in to run the sale, which Baltimore store manager Lisa Geiger said, "is very well-orchestrated . . . we started planning for this year's sale the day after last year's ended."

The company hired roughly 1,000 temporary workers for the nine-day event, who, in addition to receiving a minimum wage salary, were also offered a 30 percent clothing discount.

"We have to work really hard to keep people organized, to keep the entrance and exit ways clear," said Pitrone. "We try to keep people from camping out here and blocking traffic."

And, traffic there is. "Imagine a crowded department store, quadruple the number of people there, then multiply that by 20," said 22-year-old Shannon Smith, a Norfolk school teacher, in attempting to describe the sale. "You need to come here when you're up for it, when your energy level's high."

The masses of women shopping was enough to overwhelm some buyers.

"I came here, saw all the people and immediately turned around and walked out of the building," said 23-year-old Terri Wecker, a law student from Charlottesville. "Then, after I took a deep breath, I decided to go back in . . . I'm glad I did. It wasn't as crazy as I thought it'd be."

Pitrone said she thinks the sale is crazy. "See, people just throw clothes in piles all over the floor," she said, pointing to large piles of clothing, some being trampled and kicked about.

"When the fitting room lines are long, people try things on anywhere," said Pitrone, pointing out that many shoppers wear bathing or exercise suits under their clothes, so they can "try on" anywhere.

At the Hit or Miss Tent Sale, said Pavilion duty manager Winnie Pitrone, some frenzied people have been known to "throw clothes in piles all over the floor."

"You've got to come prepared," said 30-year-old Tobie Spuill, a Chesapeake homemaker. "I made sure to wear clothes that were easy to slip on and off, and I've got my money and my keys in my socks. I might lose a pocketbook, and they'd fall out of my pockets."

Some women bring boyfriends and husbands with them. "They bring the men to hold the clothes," said Pitrone.

Some women need more than a strong male to help them carry their purchases. One woman, said Thorn, "bought $2,200 worth of merchandise. She had a child with her and it took them four or five trips, with both of them carrying bags, to get it all to her car."

Twenty-seven-year-old Donna Seymour, a Norfolk office manager, said, "This is the kind of sale where people get compulsive, where they can't stop trying on and shopping . . . I swear shopping's an addiction and this sale's the perfect place for it. . . the good thing is, since everything's so inexpensive, you can only do so much damage."

Expressway

dollar-plus boondoggle highway like the Southeastern Expressway?

Do we really need this expressway? The preponderance of the evidence clearly points to the conclusion that it is no longer needed. The extensive overbuilding, so clearly evident today, the area's almost certain reduction in military spending, the steady and pronounced decline in construction in the area, the Near East crisis and expected high cost of fuels, all point to a decline in traffic. Construction of a mass transit system makes a lot more sense at this time.

Why then continue to push for this 20-mile stretch of highway which will cost over twice as much as the Lake Gaston Pipeline and as much as the several hundred mile Route 58, from the full length of Virginia, from East to West? One explanation may be that it is needed to protect the interests of developers and land speculators who have invested heavily along this route, and that of the financial institutions who may have financed them. With the present declining real estate market, these properties may be worth a lot less than what they may have been worth just a short time ago. One way to enhance the value of these properties is to have a major highway planned through the area. With Sessions' resolution, VDOT, as it did with the Columbus Loop Flyover, could jump the gun and purchase properties at over inflated prices for the right of way. This may well be one of the reasons for the projected astronomical cost of the project.

Could it be that the Southeastern Expressway is a form of Developers and Land Speculators (D&LS) bailout, being foisted off on the residents of Virginia Beach? Will the Beach residents calmly allow the imposition of yet more taxes in the form of high tolls and other user fees?

We hope not.

Stillman

to its improvement.

"We have a superb school system in Virginia Beach," Stillman said. "I have a love for ideas. I enjoy fashioning and thinking about creative ways to solve problems. That's one of the reasons I became a lawyer."

Stillman, 42, is a member of the Virginia Bar Association, the Virginia Opera Association's board of directors, and the Virginia Beach Rotary Club.

Stillman said he plans to assist the board in its effort to implement a new major curriculum overall. The school system didn't have a curriculum or objective standards of learning before now, he said. It is the board's responsibility to decide what the new curriculum will consist of.

Stillman said he wants an emphasis placed on the fundamentals of learning: reading, writing and arithmetic. He would also like to see an entry level introduction to foreign language, and a course syllabus to be sent to every parent of students in kindergarten through twelfth grade.

Stillman, an avid golfer and gardener, said the city has paid too much attention to the gifted students and has neglected the average students. He wants to see the average students reengaged in a level of learning.

"I'm not an educator. It's our job to provide a policy to the educators," he said.

Stillman, who's child attends Linkhorn Park Elementary School, will serve as school board chairman for one year, fulfilling Fletcher's tenure. After his term, he said, "I'll just ride off into the sunset!"

But at least he knows he helped make a difference in the lives of many children.

"I'd want to know if the decision to allow Captain James Brazier and Sergeant Paul Lanteigne to retain their jobs while running for council was primarily Police Chief Charles Wall's or his own. I'd also ask him if he thinks this decision opens a political "Pandora's Box" for the future.

"I'd also want to know what grounds he determined that citizens had to finance and plan a private party for the obviously disorganized black fraternities and sororities. Also, how did he decide that any unlikely profit that might be made would go to Norfolk State and not to the city treasury."

CBD Consultant Given Time Extension

The Virginia Beach Central Business District (CBD) master plan consultant was given a two-month extension Tuesday at a city council meeting to complete the project, but not without strong opposition.

Councilman Louis R. Jones said that the request for an extension was merely a delaying tactic to try to revive the Constitution Drive flyover.

He said that the deferral of the deadline from Dec. 31 to March 1 is designed to put off the plan until after the General Assembly meets and possibly resurrects the flyover in the State's road program.

On July 10, council voted to ask the Virginia Department of Transportation (VDOT) to suspend work on the flyover indefinitely because of higher priority road projects in the city.

Councilwoman Reba McClanahan had pointed out that the road, which is not on the city's five-year Capital Improvement program, had been moving faster than other road projects. Also, council did not want to make a decision on the road until the CBD plan was completed.

Councilman William D. Sessions presented the resolution at the end of the council meeting. It was not on the agenda.

The resolution extends the competition and reporting date of the CBD master plan, being prepared by EDAU Inc., until March 1.

On Nov. 20, 1989, council created the Central Business District Commission, which was to present a master plan on or before Dec. 31. The city is paying the consultant up to $150,000.

Sessions said that the consultants needed additional time because of some confusion on their part.

"We voted, the contact was let, the consultant hired," said Jones. He said that he saw no reason to delay the contact, and that the extension was a "delaying tactic" in an effort to try to revive the Constitution Drive flyover.

Sessions said that the consultants can rush the job and have it done by Dec. 31.

Vice Mayor Robert E. Fontress said that he had understood that the consultants would present a plan with and without a flyover.

Jones said that by December it will have been five months since the new council voted against the flyover. "I don't know why they have to have nine months."

Sessions said that the request came from the CBD and that the consultants would have to have more meetings to get the work done by Dec. 31.

"Let them meet," said Jones. To Sessions' motion to approve the request, Jones offered a substitute to deny the request and to cancel the contract if the work isn't done by Dec. 31.

The Jones' motion failed by a vote of 4-7 with Jones, Councilmen James W. Brazier Jr. and Harold Heischberger, and Councilwoman Reba McClanahan in favor. Sessions' motion passed by the same vote reversed.

Hopeful, Educated Black Students With Money Don't Accept Segregation, Psychologist Asserts

Students Very Sensitive To Any Racial Nuances

Stories by Kerry L. Hothelmer
Staff Writer

Clinical psychologist and Old Dominion University psychology professor Janis Sanchez said she has clear ideas about what wrought 1989's Greekfest chaos.

"The black college students who came to the city Labor Day weekend felt unwelcome, and this threw them off balance," said Sanchez, a Virginia Beach resident and a Black Psychologist's Association member.

"These black youngsters feel hopeful about their lives. They are educated. They have money. In no way do they expect to not be appreciated," she said.

When the city did not seem to want them here, this challenged their notion that "the world was their doorstep," said Sanchez.

Sanchez said ten or 15 years ago, blacks were not surprised "that when people saw them, they saw black . . . Today's youngsters aren't prepared for this. They can't and won't accept it. They have grown up in integrated communities and are accustomed to being accepted."

Sanchez said Virginia Beach is not a racist community, per se, but that it is a mostly white community that "feels uneasy when masses of black young people come in . . . Virginia Beach is not unlike other resort cities. Many cities would send out the same anxious energy in such a situation."

Sanchez said she thinks the Greekfest chaos was "not surprising."

"Virginia Beach did not even allow blacks to come until the early '70s," she said. "For many (white people), life has been very insulated . . . These people cannot help but display anxiety when increasing numbers of blacks come into their city."

Students hang out near the boardwalk at last year's Greekfest. "Too few events were planned last year," said Dr. Janis Sanchez. "Students were bored and restless."

And the blacks sense this anxiety, said Sanchez.

"Blacks and other minorities have had to develop a sensitivity to how whites perceive them," she said. "They pick up on things. They can immediately tell when vibes are not good."

What the city did not seem to realize last year, said Sanchez, "was that the day is over when you can say, 'you can't come! This is no longer acceptable.'"

Sanchez said she thinks the city is "doing the right thing"

"Boiling" Tensions Led To Explosion Of Ideals and Values

Some Visitors May Have Own Agendas

Virginia Beach's Michael Hucles, an Old Dominion University Afro-American history professor, said 1989's Greekfest uproar resulted from "a clash of ideals and values that exploded."

Virginia Beach, said Hucles, "wants to portray the image of being a nice, white middle class city."

"Large numbers of incoming blacks threatened this last year," Hucles added, and, reciprocally, "the blacks were threatened by the city's feeling threatened."

The resulting clash, said Hucles, "has been repeated over an over in this country's history. These outbreaks occur in cycles. People feel terrorized, threatened. Events become larger that life."

Hucles used the analogy of the country being like a huge tea kettle, which lets off steam. But in this city, the steam comes in the form of racial confrontations and riots. "We are seeing more boiling (latently)," said Hucles, "such as the riots in Miami."

Hucles said this "boiling" is resulting from a "kind of malaise. Given the mood of the country, events such as last year's Greekfest are not atypical."

This "mood" is one of (racial) "confusion, anger, anxiety and fear," Hucles said, and it is compounded by the last few national political administrations' neglect of racial issues, he said.

Further, said Hucles, "more emphasis is being placed on the economy, world events and state events these days. We are not focusing on city problems."

Hucles said that with both racial and city problems being ignored, "it is no wonder that what happened here did."

Virginia Beach wants to portray the image of being a white, middle class city, said Afro-American history professor, Michael Hucles. The increasing number of blacks visiting the city, such as these young people who came down for 1989's Greekfest, make the city feel anxious, Hucles said.

He said he is not surprised that the outbreaks occurred in this particular city, either.

"Virginia Beach has had its share of racial problems historically," he said. "Blacks have, over the years, been losing property here. With the zoning that occurs, often blacks do not have the necessary capital to hold onto their land."

"I know blacks who feel hostility from the city," he said.

"I will say, however," Hucles continued, "that the planning the city has been doing for Laborfest could certainly help reverse some of this racial unrest . . . The city is taking proper steps . . . It may go on to set some precedents for remedying this national racial problem."

New Police Planning Unit To Help Manage Crowd Control

Planning Efforts May Diffuse Tensions

"We fully realize that among the crowd that comes to Laborfest, some might have their own personal agendas," said Virginia Beach Police Lieutenant John Bell, Jr., one of the city's Police Strategic Planning Unit members. "And, we are prepared to handle any kind of incident that could arise."

The four-man unit, comprised of three lieutenants and a sergeant, was created in January to devise strategies for crowd management and to help see that these strategies are implemented, said Bell, "but only under the guidance of the Police Department and the city's Community Coordination Committee (a group of residents planning for Laborfest)."

"Laborfest is our first assignment, but we were not formed only to deal with this," Bell said. "In the future we will work with the city toward more effectively managing any crowds that form here," Bell said.

This year, though, the unit has focused purely on Laborfest, Bell said, and its planning has been extensive.

Among other endeavors, the unit members, under Police Chief Charles Wall's guidance, visited 24 colleges in Virginia, North Carolina, Maryland, Delaware and the District of Columbia to discuss plans for the approaching Laborfest with students, said Bell, most of whom were black.

In scheduled 60- to 90-minute meetings, the unit members also "touched on 1989's Greekfest," said Bell. "We wanted to let the students ventilate, get whatever thoughts they had about Virginia Beach off their chests, but we made this year, not last year, the focus," said Bell. "Last year is over."

Bell said that these college visits were intended "to clear the air of misconceptions and open up communication lines.

"Communication works better than anything for understanding and managing situations involving people," Bell continued.

Bell and other unit members, Lieutenant James Howland,

Lieutenant James Cervera and Sergeant Sandra Baum, began calling colleges to set up appointments in January, said Bell, and by February, they were driving to the schools.

Handling Laborfest Stress: Rest Well, Eat Right, Exercise, Avoid Caffeine

Full-time Counselors Will Be At Pavilion

Due to the stress of planning for Laborfest, the city's mental health department has been offering city employees stress reduction courses, said Dr. Dennis I. Woll, executive director of the city's mental health-mental retardation-substance abuse Communication's Board.

"We tell them to rest, to eat properly, to avoid caffeine and sugar," said Woll.

"We also teach them techniques, such as deep breathing, progressive muscle relaxation, removing oneself from a (stressful) situation, drinking a tall glass of cold water, anything that will help stimulate a positive thought process," he said.

Many city employees have been working overtime, said reference library coordinator Kathy Hevey, who has been working in the city's Labor Day Task Force office. "We stay at work late, go to meetings in the evenings. It feels like we haven't stopped."

Woll said that people under such stress "should prepare for the anticipated stress. They should exercise, eat reasonable

Council Voted To Trim $1.4 Million From Its Budget

By Lee Cahill
City Council Reporter

City Manager Aubrey V. Watts Jr. Tuesday announced sharp cutbacks in the current city budget in anticipation of the loss of millions of dollars in state aid.

Delivering a somber message at a city council work session, Watts said that $1.4 million in spending in this year's city budget will be eliminated through deferrals and deletions, and school officials also have agreed to cut $600,000 out of its budget.

The freeze on hiring, started earlier this year, will be continued. That means that 285 jobs will be frozen - and the school system will impose a similar freeze in non-classroom positions.

The squeeze reached even into art. Watts said the $100,000 sculpture "Homage to the Sun" by Israel Hadany, selected by the Arts and Humanities Commission for the Virginia Beach Center for the Arts, has been put on hold.

Watts said that he could not justify that art expenditure in view of the impact of the cuts on other services. He has also asked the commission to return any funds received by the commission, because of cancelled performances and other reasons, be returned to the city's general fund. Total funding for the grant program is expected to be reduced for 1991-92.

Watts said that other items of expenditures need to be looked into. All capital purchases of new and replacement equipment have been put on hold for the next 45 days to allow for an evaluation of what is absolutely necessary.

Although Governor L. Douglas L. Wilder has indicated that the greatest impact of the state budget cuts will be felt in the 1991-92 budget, Watts said that trimming the budget this year will allow for greater flexibility next year.

On Aug. 17, Wilder publicly discussed the $1.4 billion shortfall in the state budget. The shortfall, said Watts, is a combination of unrealized anticipated revenue for the fiscal year that ended June 30, 1989, and the next biennium.

The staff has accumulated all the information available on the problem and bound it in a red cover. The red, said Watts, was an not accident.

Watts said that he the staff does not know when the state cuts will be made, or whether constitutional offices or categorical grants will be affected.

The city ordinarily would be reimbursed 30 to 80 percent by the state for some of the equipment

Annual United Way Campaign Volunteers Off And Running

Volunteers Plan To Raise $2,155,600 To Benefit More Than 60 Community Agencies

By Karen Dalrymple
Staff Writer

Virginia Beach United Way of South Hampton Roads volunteers are off and running as its annual fund raising drive gets underway.

The campaign's goal is to raise $2,155,600 for the more than 60 agencies dealing with the hungry, disabled, abused children, needy families, and others in the community.

"There is no better way to support health and human service agencies and our community than United Way," said Virginia Beach campaign chairman, Dan Arris, president, The BAL Group.

Last year, the United Way's goal was $2,126,887. Only $2,046,081 was raised, although numbers did increase from the year before. Arris said last year's goal was not met because the goal was too ambitious and the economy was beginning to slump.

"We might have done the same thing this year. I'm optimistic we can make it. It's going to be difficult on us," he said.

The campaign officially begins on Sept. 13. It is scheduled to end on Nov. 1, but if the goal is not reached it may be extended, said United Way spokesperson, Laura Sanford.

The United Way supports more than 60 agencies and 180 services, including the YMCA, YWCA, Red Cross, Goodwill, Salvation Army, Boy and Girl Scouts, day care centers, and emergency assistance.

"It's an organization of highly trained professionals supplemented by a large amount of volunteers to solicit funds," said Arris.

There are currently 25,000 volunteers covering the five-city area (Virginia Beach, Chesapeake, Portsmouth, Norfolk and Suffolk). There are more than 450 volunteers dedicating countless hours to this year's campaign alone, Arris said.

Arris, who has been involved with the United Way for more than 10 years, said the amount of time each volunteer puts in varies with their level of commitment. He currently dedicates three to five hours a

Laborfest Staff Needs More Help

By Lee Cahill
City Council Reporter

More than 700 volunteers are undergoing training for the Laborfest weekend, Andrew Fine, co-chairman of the Labor Day Community Coordination Committee, told city council Tuesday.

He said that while the committee is gratified by the response, there's room for more help. He said that the committee can use 200 additional volunteers.

Laborfest Comments by Kerry Lyndsay Hofheimer

The City Is Prepared . . .

Virginia Beach municipal employees are working hard to prepare for Laborfest, while many residents sit on their haunches and complain about the forthcoming event.

Many people are upset that Laborfest has to happen, said Labor Day Task Force worker Kathy Hevey. "People are also upset because of the costs involved," she said.

What some people don't seem to realize is that money is being spent to try and salvage the city's reputation, which is invaluable.

And more human energy is being expended than is money, said Hevey. "People are working overtime, with Laborfest plans, without being paid . . . Many (city employees and residents) are volunteering their time and energy . . . People are making sacrifices."

Hevey said the money and energy being put toward Laborfest planning has been "well channeled."

"We, as a city, are well-prepared. In fact, if anything, we are over-prepared," said Hevey.

. . . But, Media Must Be Fair . . .

The media took advantage of its creative license last year at Greekfest, said Kathy Hevey.

"The city felt that coverage last year wasn't completely fair," she said. "Emphasis was put on the violence that occurred within several hours."

This negative coverage has really hurt the city, Hevey said. "People all over the world saw our city on TV, with racial outbreaks," she said.

"We are working so that this will not happen again," Hevey said.

The city has met with news people, has kept them up-to-date with Laborfest plans, and "has even talked heart-to-heart" with them about how their coverage affects the city, Hevey said.

"We're not trying to control the media," she said. "We just want the media to be extra careful, to check out rumors before printing them or accepting them as truth."

Hevey has a good point. Reporters owe it to the public to present the truth, but not in a one-sided manner.

. . . And Less Alcohol Is Needed . . .

"I'd like to see a whole lot more lemonade consumed at Laborfest than alcoholic beverages," Dr. Dennis I. Woll, executive director of the city's mental health - mental retardation - substance abuse Communication's Board.

Wouldn't that be a sight! College students out on Saturday, drinking lemonade?

Right. Sure. Young people are going to be drinking alcohol, in some form or other, and this will play into accentuated moods, said Woll.

"Alcohol can stir people up," he said.

Kathy Hevey said she also thinks alcohol might set the stage for some Laborfest trouble.

"Someone will probably have too much to drink and cause a scene, make trouble," she said.

"We expect this. To adequately plan for something, you have to consider all variables," she said.

. . . As We Look At Ourselves

"We are doing so much to resolve one negative racial situation," said Kathy Hevey, of 1989's Greekfest.

Others, such as Michael Hucles, an Old Dominion University Afro-American history professor, do not view Greekfest as a one-time, isolated occasion.

"Greekfest was just a surfacing of tensions which have been underlying many cities for ages," Hucles said.

Hevey said she does not think such tensions are prevalent in Virginia Beach.

"You hear about racial problems every day in some cities," she said. "Virginia Beach doesn't have these problems, yet, after Greekfest, which surprised us all, people perceive the city as a place of racial unrest."

Hucles, on the other hand, said he thinks Virginia Beach "has a great deal of underlying racial tension."

Virginia Beach wants to portray the image of being a white, middle-class city, he said.

This Girl Is Waiting For Wedding Bells To Ring

Marriage. That one word can make a woman's heart soar. But, it could cause her "significant other" to run the other way!

In this day and age, there are many women who choose to pursue their careers, climb the corporate ladder, and make their mark on the world.

Marriage is the farthest thing from their minds. This is a very acceptable way of life for some women. But not this one. I think I'm one of the few females left who has her heart set on getting married and raising babies!

Growing up, my family always thought my younger sister would turn out to be the domestic one. I, on the other hand, had no interest in being a wife or mother. But, sis and I surprised them all. Now it is she who wants to be thrown into the working world, and I who want to change diapers and do laundry. I guess there is just some strange satisfaction you get out of making sure that the house is clean, the kids are fed, the dog is walked and your husband's shirts are ironed.

I can talk marriage until I'm blue in the face, but that doesn't necessarily mean it's going to be banging down my door. In fact, my boyfriend is one of the many guys who are heading in the opposite direction. I'm ready; he's not. We've already established that we will get married some day, but the waiting is just killing me!

Why is it that men can be totally content in a relationship for years and years, without making any kind of serious commitment? Are they afraid they're not with the right girl? Well, after a few years, I would think that would be plain to see. Why hang on to something that will never amount to anything at all? It just makes it harder on the unknowing girl.

For those guys who are interested in marriage, by all means, let your girlfriends know. That doesn't mean propose, but give her some hints. At least she'll feel safe and secure in knowing that your relationship isn't just a way to pass the time.

Many couples, including my boyfriend and I, agree on the act of marriage, but there's just one thing standing in the way. Money. It makes no sense to enter a marriage that will not be financially stable, especially when it comes time to have kids. Before taking the big step, save some money, change jobs, ask for a promotion, whatever, but do it all beforehand. There's nothing worse than struggling to feed one mouth, then suddenly having two.

I'm sure there are many aspects of marriage that I'm overlooking, many of which will probably be disappointing. No one ever said it would be easy, but it's worth a try.

For those women out there who feel the same way I do about getting hitched, hang in there. Your day will come. The longer you wait, the more time you'll have to prepare to be the best wife and mother you can be!

The Future Of Virginia Beach Is In Doubt

The Citizens Action Coalition is a six-year-old, non-partisan, 300-member civic activist group which monitors city government.

At this moment, the future of Virginia Beach is very much in doubt. What the city and its delegates to the General Assembly in Richmond do in the next year or two may very well decide what the city will be like for decades to come.

The events of the last year have and will continue to have a tremendous impact on the city's economy; mostly adverse. With the end of the cold war there is little doubt, even with the recent crisis in the middle east, that the buildup of the Navy and its presence in the Tidewater area will cease, and given Congress' present state of mind, may well decrease measurably. The unprecedented collapse of the home building industry and declining land values throughout the nation are also leaving their marks in our city, as evidenced by the number of homes being repossessed and sold at auction. This is also reflected in reduced revenue to the city as a result of reduced assessments on home and business properties.

The overall slowdown in the country's economy, coupled with the prospect of ever rising fuel prices, will greatly reduce the number of people able to afford vacations at our beachfront and we can expect that the competition from other resort areas will become even more aggressive. Unless something is done promptly to protect it, we also can see the demise of the farming industry in the city before too long.

In a nutshell, the three major entities that have traditionally brought money into the city's economy are now faltering and declining: the military, tourism and agriculture. Like manufacturing, these entities should be considered export industries as they bring money into the economy from other areas. A new store or shopping mall may be a business and for city revenue purposes will improve the ratio of business to housing real estate, but they will not bring more money into the economy. Offices of large corporations that do business state- and nation-wide, or of multinational concerns, would be a form of export industry, much to be sought by the city. The Lillian Vernon mail order business and some of our local manufacturers are also excellent examples of what the city needs.

Some areas of the country have found that thriving retirement communities are a tremendous source of money for their economies and have done much to encourage their establishment and growth. There are many, many, other possibilities, to numerous to enumerate here, that need to be explored and exploited before it is too late.

One thing, however, that is essential is to promote any new enterprise or to bolster the existing assets to the city and to promote a climate that makes our city attractive to those who would consider establishing here. Fortunately, the last four years have seen a tremendous effort by the city to improve its image, to reduce the enormous backlog of infrastructure needs and at the same time to hold the line on city borrowing. This was accomplished with referendum-approved tax increases for specific projects and the increased use of pay-as-you-go projects. As a result, our tax rate is still bearable and the city is in a good position, if it acts sensibly, to weather the economic storm that looms on the horizon.

Four years ago, the Virginia Beach Tomorrow study group rendered its August 1986 report to the mayor of Virginia Beach. Its projections were intended to carry the city on through to the year 2000. We believe that as a result of the dramatic changes which have occurred during the past year, that there is urgent need for a reevaluation of the recommendations included in this study. There is need to establish new scenarios for the city's future and to come up with new and innovative ideas to reestablish the city on a sound economic basis, dependent more on private enterprise than on government spending. We expect the Russians to do it; why can't we?

Ministers, Police Work Together

The Mayor's Report

Virginia Beach Mayor
The Honorable
Meyera Oberndorf

For several years, certified police chaplains have ridden with the Virginia Beach Police Department on routine patrol. The involvement of the clergy has been of great benefit to the Police Department and the community. In June of this year, the decision was made to expand the chaplain program and form a group of clergy members to work in conjunction with police officers in improving community relations. It was hoped that, by working together, some of the city's human relations problems could be solved and, possibly, prevented, and bring all citizens closer together.

From June 25 through June 29, Reverend Larry Edwards, coordinator of the Daytona Beach Police Department Community Relations Program, traveled to Virginia Beach to train interested clergy in the techniques used in riding with officers on routine patrol as well as large disturbance calls. As a result of the workshop the Virginia Beach Ministers' and Police Association was formed to promote better communication between communities and the Police Department. Sixteen clergy, black and white,

Job-Sharing Has Advantages

This article is written by job-share teachers Isabelle Wilkinson at Kempsville Meadows and Judy Osmar at Windsor Woods.

On August 2, we presented a description of job-sharing and its advantages for the public schools of Virginia to the Virginia Retirement System's Committee. The study committee was formed as a result of Delegate Glenn McClanahan's introduction of House Joint Resolution 182 to the 1990 General Assembly, to look at the appropriateness of including job-sharing teachers in the Virginia Retirement System.

Job-sharing is where two teachers share the position that is usually held by one full-time teacher. Each teacher teaches for one-half of a school day, five days a week. Example: In Virginia Beach, kindergarten has two daily sessions. Each session is taught by one of the job-sharing teachers. Job-sharing on other grade levels differs in that two teachers have the same students during the day - one teaches during the morning and the other teaches during the afternoon. Other combinations of sharing the same students during the five-day work week can also exist.

By allowing job-sharing, the system is getting highly motivated teachers who look forward to teaching their students each day.

There are many advantages of job-sharing. By allowing job sharing, the system is getting highly motivated teachers who look forward to teaching their students each day. With only half of the teaching load, the teachers have more energy to put into the job. The system is likely to be getting more enthusiastic and energetic teaching from two job-sharing teachers than they might get from one full-time teacher. Job-sharing teachers also have a very low absentee rate and most often, substitute for each other so there is no interruption in student learning.

At present, Virginia Beach is undertaking major curriculum changes. By

Virginia Beach Needs A "Fix"

More than 200 years ago, the effort to resolve the problem of representation almost dissolved the Constitutional Convention. During the long, hot summer of 1787, the question that simmered was how America should be represented in Congress - by population or equally, state by state. Many heated debates resulted in deadlock after deadlock. But the delegates ultimately agreed to the "Great Compromise."

Our nation's Founding Fathers had studied many forms of government, from ancient regimes to the 18th century European states. They concluded there were two kinds of governments - one which did too much and oppressed, and one which did too little and was weak. Eventually, they developed a third kind - a totally "new" form of government, half-federal and half-national, yet wholly republican.

During the long, hot summer of 1990, the City of Virginia Beach, the largest city in the Commonwealth, is faced with a similar challenge to that faced by Virginia, then the largest state in the Union.

Although I can see certain advantages to a smaller council, I am not so concerned with the size of the council as with the election process itself.

which has been put on hold, making it even more important to delay purchases.

Watts said that his greatest concern is the 1991-92 budget, because he believed that many cuts will be constructed to have minimal impact on the current budget but will impact the 1992 budget severely.

The governor plans to cut aid to localities by approximately $334 million over the current biennium and to reduce funds to state agencies by $872 million.

According to Watts:

✓ The city will lose the recordation tax that the city was to receive in the current fiscal year and for the next four years. The loss comes to $1.25 million in the current fiscal year which was to be used for transportation and educational purposes, and a shortfall in anticipated revenue of $2.5 million in the next fiscal year.

✓ The sales tax revenue for the biennium is down approximately 1.4 percent, so that a reduction in that amount in the local share for educational purposes can be anticipated.

✓ There will be a reduction from the Commonwealth in anticipated revenue for pay increases for constitutional officers and others.

✓ State funding for standards of quality will be reduced by $30 million state-wide in the current fiscal year and by $123 million the second year of the biennium.

✓ State-funded road projects will be delayed an average of six months and urban street maintenance will be frozen at FY 1990 levels.

To soften the blow on local government, the Commonwealth will increase its anticipation return on investment to the Virginia Supplemental Retirement System (VRS) from 6.5 percent to a more realistic 8 percent. Therefore, the city's contribution to VRS will be reduced for the remainder of the fiscal year and also next fiscal year.

The governor has given his staff until mid-September to come up with specific plans, so Watts expects early October will be the earliest that the exact dollar amounts and cuts to the city will be known.

"The governor's cutbacks, coupled with a slowdown in the local economy will ultimately lead to many difficult and painful choices," Watts said.

Watts said that the city is doing everything it can to keep its present employees on the payroll. He said that he did not know what the State is going to do with its mandates. The city will be in a greater bind if the state leaves the mandates as they are, but doesn't send any money to support them.

Councilman Paul Lantaigne said that next Tuesday he will present a resolution to establish a committee of civic leaders to help the staff find ways to save money.

Councilman William D. Sessoms Jr. said that the was happy that the city was addressing the problem now.

Watts said that he was meeting with as many offices that will be impacted that he can, but has not talked with all constitutional officers.

Councilman Harold Heischobor

asked whether the staff had taken into consideration the fact that things may get worse.

Watts said that he wanted to take the best case scenario first. He added that the state and federal cutbacks have tended to force local governments to pick up the slack.

Dangerous McClanahan Curve On Sandbridge Road Still Receiving Council's Attention; Spot Checks Coming

Virginia Beach police have established a selective enforcement program, with special emphasis on weekends, along Sandbridge Road during the remainder of the summer season.

That means that motorists headed to or from the beach may be stopped for spot checks of possible violations, such as driving while intoxicated.

Like The Unyielding Tide,
Labor Day Weekend Is Coming

It seems that every day that goes by, this whole Laborfest thing seems less uncertain.

In spite of the well-intentioned planning the city and community has done in preparing for the impending unknown, now it looks like many of the students which we planned to receive may not be coming. But who knows? Many of them may wait until the last minute to decide where to go.

Good. Let them wait. Let them think long and hard. Let them consider well before deciding on coming to Virginia Beach for the wrong reasons, one of which would be just to see what happens. That is what the national media that comes here that weekend will be doing. Just waiting for something bad to happen. They wouldn't be coming if they could be assured that there would be nothing but peace and harmony. But the ugly fact is that there are no guarantees of what will happen, one way or another.

Commentary

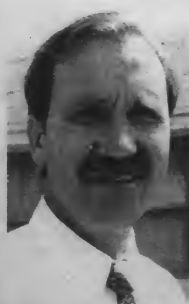

It is hard to understand individual or group motivations for doing anything, nowadays. Some people want to invade countries and conquer the world. Others want to protect old forest trees. Others want peace and happiness.

Let's say this Labor Day weekend goes and comes without incident. That would be great. But at the same time, believe it or not, there would be certain people in certain corners who would be disappointed. Don't ask why, but in a way it's like when the city boards up and holds fast in preparation of an oncoming killer hurricane. Tell me that when it misses us some people aren't let down. They are. But, let's be honest. The ones who will really be upset if nothing happens over the Labor Day weekend are the media types who depend heavily on confrontation and visuals to attract viewers and readers. And, some ultra-left and right-wing fanatics who only see the world in shades of black and white.

But no matter what your feeling is on the upcoming Labor Day weekend, like the unyielding tide, it is coming and until it gets here, washes over us, and recedes, only then will we realize what happened.

Engineering Firm Cleans Roadsides

For the second year, staffers in Parsons Brinckerhoff Quade & Douglas, Inc.'s Hampton Roads office have taken the challenge to improve the environment by participating in the Virginia Department of Transportation's (VDOT) "Adopt a Highway" program, which is helping to keep the roadsides around Virginia Beach free of trash.

Fifteen employees of Parsons Brinckerhoff have "adopted" the cloverleaf Wicthuck Interchange on Interstate Highway 64, pledging to pick up litter from all exit ramps four times a year, or more if needed.

The group participated in the first trash cleanups last October and again in April of this year, according to a press release, to coincide with the statewide cleanups for Historic Gardens Week and Recycling Month, respectively. They are expected to return again in October of this year, and several times in 1991. Under the program's guidelines, each group is asked to keep approximately two miles of selected highway cleared of litter for a two-year period.

A sign bearing Parsons Brinckerhoff's name is posted at the beginning of its adopted section of Interstate 64. Parsons Brinckerhoff's effort is being coordinated by Celeste Jesse of its Hampton Roads office with P.D. Gribok, resident engineer, and C.C. Mollen of the VDOT.

Kids Art Exhibit On View

The Virginia Beach Center for the Arts will display an exhibition of more than 100 art works by children ages four to 16 in the Student Gallery.

The exhibit, Prisms VI, is free and open to the public from Sept. 6 through Oct. 14.

An opening reception will be held at the center on Thursday, Sept. 6 from 5:30 to 7 p.m. The young artists, their families, instructors and the public are invited to attend.

Prisms VI is a collection of work created during the center's annual ArtCamp, a program of nearly 60 weeklong courses in drawing, painting, printmaking, photography, pottery, jewelry-making, batik, video and more.

ArtCamp courses are adventures in perception, and the results of such an education are equally inspired. Examples from the exhibition include tempera paintings based on masterpieces by Van Gogh and Picasso; an entire set of clay sculptures depicting Noah's Ark; jewelry made from neon-colored clay and rubber; and huge wall murals describing the evolution of planet Earth.

Classes for ages four to 16 attracted over 350 children from Virginia Beach, Norfolk and Chesapeake this summer. ArtCamp, held for the tenth year, is the center's largest and most successful program for young people, incorporating the visual and performing arts.

The Student Gallery is open Tuesday through Saturday, 10 a.m. to 5 p.m., and Sunday, 1 to 5 p.m. The Virginia Beach Center for the Arts is located at 22nd Street and Park Avenue, across from the Pavilion Convention Center, at the west-bound entrance to the Virginia Beach-Norfolk expressway.

Vo-Tech, NADEP Form Partnership

Administrators of the Virginia Beach Vocational-Technical Educational Center and the Naval Air Depot (NADEP) will sign a partnership agreement on Thursday, August 30, establishing a one-year pilot curriculum in aviation fundamentals.

Virginia Beach City Public Schools Superintendent E. Carlton Bowyer and Naval Aviation Deton Commanding Officer Captain T.W. Hancock will sign the official partnership contract at 11 a.m. during the ceremony at the depot, which is located at Norfolk Naval Air Station. A tour of the NADEP facility, beginning at 9:30 a.m., will precede the ceremony.

The aviation course is designed to teach basic technical skills such as safety training and tool processes. Skills acquired in the course would be readily transferable to an apprenticeship.

The Cooperative Apprenticeship Training (CAT) Program, operated by NADEP, is expected to employ a significant number of students from the pilot course.

The two organizations worked together before the official partnership was formed. During the 1989-90 school year, NADEP personnel tutored Vo-Tech students in technical math, served as judges in vocational contests, conducted tours of the naval facility, and identified and prepared graduating students for the CAT program.

Road

Sgt. Steve Smith, who is also a member of the Transportation Safety Commission, told city council that although Sandbridge Road is not among the city's most accident prone streets, the winding country road justifies more attention because of the impact of summer beachgoers.

Just recently, three persons were killed in a two-car wreck at McClanahan's curve, one of the road's worst bends. Another accident occurred at the curve last weekend, but with no serious injuries.

Smith said that it was unusual for three people to be killed in one accident - the last he recalled was at the intersection of Indian River Road and North Landing Road in 1986.

He said that the Sandbridge accident was alcohol-related and the death car was a Ford Fiesta. The Fiesta collided with a 1971 Buick, which was three times the weight of the Fiesta. The Fiesta also was not designed to have three people riding in the back seat. He said that the woman killed was not wearing a seat belt, nor was the boy who was killed believed to have been wearing a seat belt. A five-year-old who was killed was wearing a seat belt, he said, but was not in a survivable position for that type of crash.

Mayor Meyera Oberndorf said that the residents have requested that a sign be posted with flashing lights for people not familiar with the curve.

Smith said that the driver of the Fiesta was familiar with Sandbridge Road.

Smith told council that the city, in general, is making progress against drunk driving. Since a selective enforcement team was formed in 1987, funded by various grants and matching local funds, he said that alcohol related traffic deaths have decreased.

Each year since 1987, the police department has increased DUI arrests, and the total number of crashes has been reduced. The total number of alcohol-related accidents also has been reduced, Smith said.

Life-Saving Museum Receives "Harriet Lane" Painting

The Life-Saving Museum of Virginia was recently presented the painting, The Cutter Harriet Lane Fires Across the Bow of the Nashville, by the commanding officer of the U.S. Coast Guard Cutter Harriet Lane.

The first Harriet Lane was commissioned on Feb. 25, 1858. She was named for the niece of President James Buchanan, an official White House hostess. The onset of southern rebellion and threats of secession found the Union Navy short of vessels. The Navy asked for the Coast Guard's services. In April 1861, President Abraham Lincoln's Secretary of the Navy, Gideon Wells, dispatched the Harriet Lane to rendezvous off Charleston with a squadron to relieve the growing Confederate pressure on Fort Sumter. The squadron arrived too late to get supplies to the garrison. The Civil War had begun.

Harriet Lane patrolled off the bar at the entrance to Charleston Harbor. During the bombardment, Harriet Lane challenged the reluctant steamer Nashville to show her colors, and fired a shot across the Nashville's bow. The Nashville quickly ran up the Union flag. The Harriet Lane is credited with firing the first shot from any naval unit in the long and terrible war to preserve the Union. The painting presented depicts the shot at the Nashville.

The Life-Saving Museum is the former Virginia Beach Coast Guard Station and is located on the Boardwalk at 24th Street. It is a National Historical Landmark and tells the story of heroic shipwreck rescues and also Coast Guard activities throughout its illustrious history. The Upper Gallery features a new War Years exhibit chronicling German U-boat activity off the Virginia Coast, with audio visual presentations included.

City Rejects Agricultural Land Use Values

Stories By Lee Cahill
City Council Reporter

The city is rejecting land use values suggested by a state agency for agricultural property and substituting lower values which are considered locally as more realistic.

As a result, city revenues from the December 1990 and June 1991 real estate tax collections will be $39,205 less under the city's formula than it would have been under the values suggested by the State Land Evaluation Advisory Council (SLEAC), or $299,627 compared to $338,832.

The landowner's participating in the land use plan, which encourages agricultural uses by allowing taxation according to use rather than market value, will experience savings of from three percent to 30 percent, according to J.D. Banagan, city real estate assessor.

Most typical in Virginia Beach, he said, would be a savings of three percent on an $80,000 house and site and 25 acres of farm land and ten acres of forest on which the farmer would pay $1,029 in taxes. That amount still represents a 12 percent increase over the 1989-90 payment of $919.84.

Months ago, Councilman John A. Baum, a Blackwater farmer, asked for some accommodation for the farmer when he noticed a sharp increase in the per-acre use value set by SLEAC of $770 compared to $430 at present, an increase of 79 percent.

Part of the problem, Baum said, is that SLEAC uses criteria based on statistics through 1988, so that more current and lower values are not reflected in the figures.

Baum Makes Joke At Meeting

Councilman John A. Baum, who would sometimes rather get off a one-liner than talk about how little city folks know about farming, couldn't resist when his colleague Louis R. Jones presented an opening at a recent council meeting.

The subject was taxes and how land use assessments had increased. In Suffolk, the increase is from $280 to $460, for a 64 percent increase; in Isle of Wight, from $210 to $400, for a 90 percent increase; in Hampton, from $220 to $390, for a 77 percent increase, and the same in Newport News.

Unfortunately, said Baum, the matter has become political. He said, for instance, that the landowner's occupation is being asked although that has nothing to do with the use of the land.

Banagan said that the suggested land use values for Virginia Beach for class III agricultural land (land that has to be drained) for fiscal year 1991 is $770 an acre, a 79 percent increase over the fiscal year 1990 use value of $430. Traditionally, he said, Virginia Beach had utilized the values suggested by SLEAC as have the other jurisdictions in the state, but the jurisdictions are not required to use them.

At council's request, Banagan developed an alternative, concluding that the typical rent of $65 per acre at 10 percent produced a value of $650 an acre. At a recent work session, council found this alternative acceptable.

Councilman Louis R. Jones pointed out, however, that other property owners are experiencing large increases. He said his assessments have increased 44 percent or more.

Although the suggested land use value in Virginia Beach is the state's highest, other jurisdictions are experiencing an even greater percentage increase. Land use values suggested in Chesapeake are $600 an acre, up from $310 for a 94 percent increase. In Suffolk, the increase is from $280 to $460, for a 64 percent increase; in Isle of Wight, from $210 to $400, for a 90 percent increase; in Hampton, from $220 to $390, for a 77 percent increase, and the same in Newport News.

City Approves Sewer Rates

City council recently approved water and sewer rate increases for the current and the next two years, but Public Utilities Director Clarence Warnstaff said that he could make no projections beyond those years.

He told council that his department will continue to make forecasts, but that he did not know whether further increases will be needed in 1993. He added, however, that his department would do everything to operate in a cost-effective manner.

Water rates will increase from $2.69 per 1,000 gallons to $2.77 on Oct. 1; to $2.91 on July 1, 1991; and to $3.01 on July 1, 1992.

Sewer rates will increase (for the first time since 1983) for single-family residents from $9.46 a month to $9.65 on Oct. 1; to $10.58 on July 1, 1991; and to $11.38 on July 1, 1992.

Sewer rates in other categories will experience corresponding increases.

The average residential customer will find his monthly water and sewer bill increasing from $28.95 to $29.27 on Oct. 1; to $31.44 on July 1, 1991; and $32.84 on July 1, 1992.

At the same time, the wheeling rate for water delivered to the U.S. government will be increased from 31 cents per 1,000 gallons (a 1988 increase from its 1973 level of five cents) to 35 cents, effective Oct. 1.

Also, a $3.40 monthly service fee will be imposed for reading and maintaining meters and inspecting systems in place of a $3.35 cent charge for extinguishing fires.

Warnstaff said that the money generated from the increases is needed to pay for the extension of water and sewer services in neighborhoods petitioning for service.

He said that in 1987, when five-year projections were made, $2 million of a $12 million capital budget for water and sewer project was added from the Public Utilities Department's operating budget. He said that pay-as-you-go financing was added so that the city would not be completely dependent on bonds to finance projects. However, neighborhoods later petitioned for service, adding another $4 million to the capital program.

For the first couple of years of the program, projected in 1987, the program did not impact the water and sewer rates. The addition of more neighborhoods to the program changed that, however, Warnstaff said.

Since most of the program is financed by bonds, Warnstaff said, the city must demonstrate that it has sufficient revenues associated with the new debts. The new rates are related directly to the capital citizen-serving program. He said that two-thirds of the program consists of extending water and sewer to Virginia Beach neighborhoods where wells and septic tank are being used. Fire protection facilities also will be enhanced.

The remaining funds are needed to coordinate water and sewer projects, with highway projects, which, in the long term, will save money for the city; and, to build systems to insure sufficient water and sewer projects. Warnstaff said that the $16 million will finance 1989, 1990 and 1991 programs and a portion of the 1992 programs.

In reply to questions from Councilwoman Reba McClanahan about the department's efficiency, he said that the department employs fewer persons per water customers than it did six or seven years ago, resulting in a cash savings of $2 million a year.

McClanahan was not satisfied, however, pointing out that the figures do not include the cost of consultants. "Are we saving on employees or giving more work to consultants?" she asked.

Councilman William D. Sessions Jr. said that although nobody likes increasing water and sewer rates, a number of people had called in favor of the increase because "it has to be done." He said that he lives in a neighborhood desperately in need of sewer. Raw sewage sometimes comes out of the ground, he said.

Portsmouth Economy Looking For New Light

Officials Say New Business Is Vital; New Road System Will Help Business

By Kerry Lyndsay Hofheimer
Staff Writer

"Portsmouth is sharing in the economic slump everyone's going through," said Portsmouth's economic development director, Gerald A. Burgess. "The point people are missing, however, is that this is a national problem. To highlight Portsmouth's poor economy does not make any sense."

But does ignoring the city's recent economic decline make any more sense?

In the past four years, one-third more businesses have closed down in Portsmouth than have opened up. Taxable building and investment permit sums have declined. The number of new jobs and new housing units built per year is also down. Fewer visitors have come to see the Portsmouth Museums and to shop at Portside.

The city's commissioner of the revenue, A. James Fillion, said these statistics are good indices of a serious problem.

"I hate to be a prophet of doom," he said, "but business is on a downward spiral . . . I mean nationally, I mean in Hampton Roads, and I mean in Portsmouth."

William F. Mezger, a Virginia Employment Commission economist in Richmond, said Portsmouth might be in for more economic trouble than other local cities.

"It would be natural that Portsmouth would not grow as much as other cities would," he said, "during a time of decline. Portsmouth is a developed inner-city, and growth during bad times tends to occur in developing outer-cities."

Mezger said he would classify Portsmouth and Norfolk as developed inner-cities and Chesapeake and Suffolk as developing outer cities.

"Inner-cities, such as Portsmouth, don't have as much growth, generally speaking, as other cities do, but they tend to be particularly hit by times of decline," he said.

What can Portsmouth do to keep its economy from being hit any harder than it already has been?

"There is no magic cure . . . Portsmouth's signs of decline are all signs of regional and statewide recession," Burgess said. Until the nation turns around its economic problem, Portsmouth is going to have the same problem."

Fillion said Portsmouth needs to attract more large-scale corporations to boost its economy.

"We need more corporate entity, such as Cogentrix, Wheelabrator, Hoechst-Celanese," he said. "We need large, well-established businesses. Most of the businesses that start up here every year are little-'n-om and pop' business, many of which end up going out of business fairly quickly."

In the past four years, an average of 700 businesses have closed down in Portsmouth each year, while only 460 new businesses, on average, have opened up, city statistics show.

"The economy just can't absorb new businesses right now," said Fillion. "The economy is very, very soft."

Muriel Zober, assistant economic development director, said the city is working hard to boost its economy, not withstanding some failures and some successes.

"We (the city) have written to approximately 70 department stores," Zober said, "to try to bring them into the downtown area, but we haven't been able to stimulate any interest . . . We have been seeing some larger companies looking at other Portsmouth sites, though."

Greg Wingfield, president of Forward Hampton Roads, the Hampton Roads Chamber of Commerce's economic development arm, said he foresees considerable business interest in Portsmouth in the next couple of years.

"When Interstate 664 is complete in Portsmouth, in the next year-and-a-half, we're going to see a lot more interest in certain sites, such as Riverfront (a 55-acre lot on West Norfolk road, which will probably be used for business offices).

"The reason companies are not coming to Portsmouth now is that they say they are not pioneers. They say they don't want to come here yet, since we are not fully served by the roadway system."

Mary Francis Newsome, the Virginia job service supervisor based in Portsmouth, said that Chesapeake is currently drawing in much of Hampton Roads' new business, but, she said, "We're not getting much new business response from within this region overall, particularly for Portsmouth."

In 1989 the city had some major business developments, such as the $10 million Sea-Land-Services, Inc. Port expansion, the $3 million Centel Cellular mobile telephone switchboard office, the $1 million Commodore Theatre renovation and opening, and the $1 million Windows of the World opening, and others.

Overall, though, said Fillion, "Portsmouth is not doing well business-wise. In the mid-80s we had a peak, and now we are hitting a valley. People are not buying new cars. People are not buying houses."

People are also not paying their taxes on time, said the city treasurer, Charles Whitehurst.

"Recently, people are deferring paying their taxes, which ends up costing them more money," Whitehurst said. "When the economy is not on the decline, people usually pay their taxes more quickly . . . the late payment of taxes could be considered a sign of an economic slow-down."

Such signs are everywhere, said Fillion.

"Look at downtown, for instance," he said. "When Leggett left, they left a big hole downtown . . . Merchants are hurting. Retail business is down."

Elizabeth Psimas, the Olde Towne Portsmouth Association's president who also co-owns Travel Designers, Inc. on High Street, said she has seen businesses open and close downtown since 1988.

"A coffee shop (on High Street) recently closed; Bob's newsstand, which had been downtown for 20 years, closed; Barbara Vincent sold the Olde Towne Gallery. Cash flow's bad, the economy's bad."

Psimas added one bright remark: "My business (a travel agency) has gone incredibly well recently. Business related to travel is prospering right now."

Other Portsmouth businesses which are not feeling the economic lull, said Burgess, are restaurants.

"Portsmouth is doing particularly well in this area," he said.

Wingfield said he does not see any reason for the city not to do well in all economic areas.

"To see Portsmouth's strength, look on a map," he said. "Portsmouth is smack dab in the middle of Hampton Roads, in the middle of 1.4 million people . . . What better a business location?"

Mezger said that no matter what the location, all cities in the nation are suffering right now.

"Some say we are already in recession. Others say the Persian Gulf events will lead us into a recession," he said. "Others say we will avoid one."

High Street is nearly empty on a recent weekday around noon. It is scenes such as these that are giving merchants cause for concern.

"If we are in one or one is approaching, though, Hampton Roads' cities will probably not sink quite as far as other cities do, because of the stabilization influence of the federal government and the military. This area can sink, but only so far."

Burgess said he thinks the country is definitely already in recession.

"Look about the major retailers," he said. "Neiman Marcus' bankruptcy, Miller & Rhodes' closing, Savings and Loans' closing. Look at Donald Trump . . . this is not a Portsmouth problem. It's a national one. The national economy has got to change."

Zober said she agrees that this recent economic slump goes far beyond Portsmouth's boundaries "but I know that does not lessen how Portsmouth residents are affected," she said.

Taking personal action sometimes helps, she said. "Tell them (residents) to go up to store managers in other cities' stores and tell them they'd like to see one of their shops in Portsmouth. Tell them to do all their shopping in Portsmouth."

Police Association Of Virginia To Hold Annual Country Music Concert At Chrysler Hall In Dec.

By Elisa Kay
Staff Writer

In some regions of the country it is referred to as the "policeman's ball," but in Chesapeake the "ball" is a Country Music Concert sponsored by the Police Association of Virginia.

Tickets are now on sale for the annual concert set for Monday, Dec. 10 at Chrysler Hall.

J. Herbert Simpson, the association's executive director and former Portsmouth city councilman, said that the concert is how the organization makes its money. "We bring in some of the leading performers in Nashville. It's just like a show."

This year's event will feature music by Scott McQuigg, a honky-tonk performer who was recently listed in Country Music magazine as an up and coming star. Tidewater's own Flatland Cloggers will also perform, according to Simpson.

All of the concert's profits will be placed into the association's general fund. This fund is used to "help policemen who may be down and out for some reason and are in need of money (like hospitalization, etc.). We also have a widow's fund," said Simpson.

"Every member of the association fills out a beneficiary card. If he dies, then the beneficiary listed receives $3,500. If the officer dies in the line of duty, the beneficiary receives an extra $500, making it $4,000," he said. The profits are also spent on quarterly luncheons, where members get together to discuss police business.

The Police Association of Virginia has approximately 1,500 members from around the state, according to Simpson. ("Portsmouth) Sheriff Gary Waters is a member and there is a board made up of people throughout the state." Anyone with the authority to make an official arrest in the state of Virginia is eligible to become an organization member.

"An application may be filled out and sent to me. I, in turn, hand it over to the board of directors and if it is approved, it must be voted on at the next general meeting. If all of the requirements are met, it usually gets approved at the general meeting. The age requirement is that you may not be any older than 50 years of age," said Simpson.

There is an $8 application fee and $5 dues are collected from the members each year.

Community Benefits, a Portsmouth fundraising agency for local firefighters and police officers, selected and scheduled the entertainment for the concert. Ticket sales will also be handled by that organization, Simpson said.

"We change the performers every year, but we always have a country music concert. People come from all over the state to see the show," Simpson said.

Although Norfolk's Chrysler Hall can only accommodate approximately 2,500 people, Simpson said that the concert is expected to attract nearly 3,500.

"When we fill up we have to have another show," he said. "In the past we have had to have a 10 p.m. show in addition to the one that begins at 7:30 p.m." That is what happened last year, according to Simpson.

The tickets are on sale now because Simpson said that he wants to get a head start and does not want the ticket selling to burden any of the merchants or residents during the Christmas season when "so many other things come up." The September selling date will enable Community Benefits to sell more tickets to the performance.

"We have quite a few people who don't attend who buy tickets," Simpson said. "A lot of merchants will buy ten tickets and give them out to their employees, who do not attend the event. They are buying the tickets as a supportive gesture, as a donation. We are not after the money, however. We are after the comradeship and the friendship."

Tickets will be sold over the phone to businesses during the day and to residents in the evening.

Checks for the tickets should be made out to the Police Association of Virginia. Checks and money from businesses for ticket sales will be picked up by drivers who will have identification for the Association.

Residents' tickets will be delivered through the mail. Visa and MasterCard may be used as a method of payment.

For the purchase of tickets call the ticket office at 483-3678. For information on the association or on the concert call Simpson at 393-8031.

Tides Not Likely To Come To Chesapeake, Official Says

By Elisa Kay
Staff Writer

Chesapeake businessmen are eager to pounce on the possibility that the City of Norfolk may not build a new stadium in order to keep the Tidewater Tides baseball team in its city, a mandate issued by the Mets officials, the Tides parent team in New York.

Councilman R.G. Bagley, at a recent city council meeting, suggested that the new Oscar Smith High School be built big enough to accommodate the AAA baseball organization, although no official proposal has been made to the council.

Tides' officials said that the Chesapeake community should not get excited, however. Michael Holmes, Tidewater Tides' director of sales, said, "My gut feeling is there is no possibility that Norfolk will let the Tides go."

"I think people are reading into things quite a bit. We have not even put in a bid to Chesapeake," he said. He said that someone in Chesapeake became "overzealous . . . and said 'hey, let's go for it and try to get the Tides in Chesapeake.'"

Holmes did say however, that if Norfolk does not agree to keep the Tides, "The Mets made it very clear that they want to stay in the area. They will give Norfolk every possibility of figuring it out."

Virginia Beach is the second choice of Mets' officials, according to Holmes. "Virginia Beach has the population center more toward the Tides would be interested in. If they relocate the team, it would be the best access to everybody."

"We're here to serve all the community. We are the Tidewater Tides, not the Norfolk Tides," Holmes said.

The Mets organization recently gave the City of Norfolk notice that if Met Park, where the team plays, is not improved, the team may relocate.

Fine Arts Commission Gets Two Grants

The Chesapeake Fine Arts Commission has been awarded two grants from the Virginia Commission for the Arts.

The first award of $4,250 in Government Challenge Grant funds will be used to make sub-grants to local arts organizations.

The second grant of $500 will partially pay the expenses of one commissioner who attended the National Assembly of Local Arts Agencies Annual Conference in San Diego in June. Matching funds of $1,250 were provided by the Commission.

Striders' To Hold 5K Race In Downtown Area

By Karen Dalrymple
Staff Writer

The City Center YMCA's Labor Day 5K Race, organizers say, is one of the few of its length in Portsmouth.

But, race coordinators think there will be a large turnout mainly because the race is sanctioned by the Tidewater Striders. Or, because many out-of-towners have forgotten what downtown Portsmouth looks like.

"I think it'll bring in a lot of business. People will familiarize themselves with Portsmouth. They'll find out what nice things there are," said Jane Bashara, race director.

Bashara said she expects about 300 people to turn out for the first-time race. Many of those runners, she said, will come from Portsmouth's surrounding cities.

"We have the prettiest downtown anywhere in Tidewater," said Karen Crawford, a YMCA board member. "I think it'll be a nice event, especially with the course we have laid out."

The 3.1-mile course begins at the corner of County and Crawford Streets, travels past Portside and around Crawford Parkway to Effingham Street. There, runners will make a left and head towards the Naval Hospital gate. They make a turn around Hospital Point and head back to where they began.

"It's standardized. It's a Tidewater Striders' race. We're following their guidelines and regulations," said Bashara.

The race, sponsored by Cogentrix and Procter and Gamble, will benefit YMCA youth programs, according to Bashara. The YMCA is currently working on building a Council Not Ready To Slash Budget; More Info. Needed

"There's No Magic Here," Rein Said

By Elisa Kay
Staff Writer

The budget reduction report was presented to Chesapeake City Councilmembers by City Manager James W. Rein during a recent council work session.

The issue was not voted on, but it was a time for council members to question the report and for Rein to provide answers.

The budget cuts were researched by Rein, assistant city managers, the budget director and a budget analyst and was compiled from information provided by each department on identifiable ways to reduce expenditures by five percent with "discretion and a sincere effort to minimize reductions in direct service to the citizens," according to Rein's memorandum to council members.

"These are just some suggestions," Rein said, "some ideas on the table. There's no magic here."

The work session was a question-and-answer period for council members. Another work session was scheduled for Tuesday, Sept. 5 where Rein may bring in the council members' requested information and clarifications from the session.

The largest portion of the budget reduction may affect the transfers of funds. Rein came up with $1.166 million in transfers that could feasibly be reduced. That makes up 32 percent of the total reduction. The transfers include the deletion of five new full-time positions intended to help with the Social Services caseload, the deletion of a new Home Visiting Teacher position in Community Services and a transfer from the citywide debt which reflected higher than anticipated interest earnings in the citywide debt fund in the approved 1990-91 budget.

A reduction of $1.092 million may be expected in service contracts throughout most of the city's departments. Thirty percent of the $3.6 million cutback will be in this area. Rein's report reflected that the major impact of that reduction may be the possible slowdown of certain projects.

If this reduction is approved by council without alteration, there will be a 24 percent reduction in salary and fringes in each department. Throughout the city it was determined that $849,000 could be shaved off of this category. There will be no position dismissals, however, if a position becomes vacant it may not be immediately filled. Also, new positions that were already approved in the 1990 budget may not be filled as a result of the cut.

Each department has determined that it can cut back on equipment costs throughout the year, according to the report. Nine percent of the total reduction may be in the equipment area, saving the city $314,000.

Materials and supplies will be affected as well. Thirty percent of the total reduction may be taken in materials and supplies. The city could save $91,000 throughout the city departments.

The final reduction was in city contributions. This makes up two percent of the total proposal, but will save the city $87,000. Contributions to the Chamber of Commerce, the Industrial Development Authority, Tidewater Community College, Local Access CATV and Eastern Virginia Medical College were reduced by an estimated one-fourth, according to Rein.

The above reductions were broken down a bit further in the report. A list of departments and total cutbacks follow:

Legislative - $9,720.
Executive - $58,842.
Law - $16,437.
Finance - $126,670.
Personnel - $8,899.
Judicial - $169,713.
Public Safety - $310,953.
Public Works - $796,717.
Administration and Engineering - $375,835.
Traffic Engineering - $3,913.

Street Maintenance - $20,750.
Resurfacing - $75,000.
Bridges and Structures - $10,700.
Street Lighting - $259,719.
Drainage - $2,200.
Refuse Collection - $48,600.
Parks and Recreation - $115,922.
Grounds and Maintenance - $31,000.
Recreation Program - $45,532.
Senior Citizens - $27,390.
Beautification and Special Programs - $12,000.
Public Library - $272,527.
Boards and Commissions - $3,644.
Agriculture - $6,682.
Non-Departmental - $542,507.
City Contributions - $89,419.
Fine Arts Commission - $5,910.
Intern Program - $5,451.
Building Maintenance - $422,211.
Housekeeping - $19,516.
Transfer Citywide Debt - $1,009,514.
Transfer Social Services - $127,573.
Transfer Community Services - $29,130.

The school board's budget has not been included as of yet on the budget reduction plan. Governor L. Douglas Wilder will be giving a speech on Thursday evening about the state's budget cutbacks, and the council and the school board members are waiting to see how much Wilder is going to take away from them before they address the local cutbacks.

Councilman Lionel P. Spruill called upon Dr. Fred Bateman, the public school system superintendent, for his comments. Bateman told council that "it would not be fair for the burden to be felt on a citywide basis without affecting the school system. We want to do our part," he said.

Spruill, who is against the budget reduction process especially in regards to the education system, told Bateman, "Don't be too kind, too soon."

Councilman Robert G. Bagley was concerned with the amount of funds being cutback in the Public Safety and the Public Works department. He also addressed the issue of city contributions, as did several other councilmembers. Bagley questioned many of the cutbacks' impact on the citizens of Chesapeake. He pointed out that much of the money taken from the Industrial Development Authority was out of the travel expense, which enables the department to do better business with prospective industries. He wanted council to be aware of the importance of the shortfall in that department.

Bagley also suggested that the boat launch fees in Great Bridge may be raised in an attempt to make up some of the money in the budget regarding the rebuilding of the bulkhead at Lock's Point.

Councilman Peter Duda pointed out that there was a time limit on that repair, and it had been dropped as a priority in the budget reduction report.

On several of the cutbacks, Rein said that they were short-term reductions because the construction delay of some of the buildings would have to be included in the budget next year. For instance, the detention home that was approved in the budget has been deleted, but next year it will need to be included, so it is a short-term cut. There are several of those in the report, according to Rein.

Duda requested that Rein notify the organizations who benefit from city contributions that "they might be a little slimmer in the future depending on our economy. We've got to tighten up our belts and suck in a little bit."

Rein continually reminded council members that the report was not final, but that "the opportunities for council to go whatever way they want is vital."

Police Seek Bank Robber

Story by Elisa Kay
Staff Writer

On Monday, August 6, 1990 at 2 p.m. an armed robbery occurred at the Investors Savings Bank on North Battlefield Boulevard.

The suspect walked into the bank, brandishing a blue steel revolver at the teller. He is described as a 5'11" black male with a medium build. He wore a black stocking over his head, according to Sergeant William Harrison of the Chesapeake Police Department Detective Bureau.

This is the second armed robbery in Chesapeake since January 1990, said Harrison. "The first one was cleared by arrest," he said.

The case was turned over to FBI officials in Norfolk, a routine procedure in armed robbery cases. FBI officials would not comment on the case other than to say that recently there have been a lot of bank robberies in the Hampton Roads area.

The Investors Savings Bank manager declined to comment on the robbery as well. "We have been advised not to give out any information about the robbery to the media," she said.

Police vehicles and detectives swarmed Investors Savings Bank on Battlefield Boulevard following a 2 p.m. bank robbery on August 6.

said.

The robber escaped from the scene with an undivulged amount of money. He is still free.

Several policemen and detectives arrived at the scene shortly after the robbery occurred and remained at the scene for several hours.

The bank closed for the day immediately following the incident.

"I May Win The Lottery!"

Western Branch Resident Eddie Speers Has Enjoyed Life To Its Fullest; Still Active In The Community

By Karen Delrymple
Staff Writer

Eddie Speers may be 72 years young, but he has no intentions of slowing down yet.

The former Chesapeake City Councilman and Western Branch resident said he has lived his life to the fullest.

"I'd like to keep going. I want to stay active as long as I can. Man's got a lot to do on earth," he said.

Speers, a Norfolk County native, began his quest to "do it all," while he was in high school. He attended both Churchland and Wilson High Schools, but didn't graduate. Instead, he enlisted in the Navy, where he received his GED.

Speers spent 24 years serving his country, the majority of those years spent on destroyers and cruisers.

"I liked it. I wanted to go and see the world," he said. "I was a chief gunner's mate and I served in the military advisor group for two and one-half years and as a recruiter for two and one-half years."

When Speers retired from the Navy in 1961, he moved back to his old neighborhood. A year later, he and his wife of 48 years, Audrey, opened Churchland's Speers' Restaurant. The couple ran the family restaurant for 18 years.

In 1974, Speers decided to become more involved with the city in which he lived. So, he ran for city council and was elected. He ran again in 1978, but was defeated, and was reelected for a second term in 1980.

"I thought I could do some good and I was active in the Democratic party," he said.

Speers said the city had the same concerns then as it does now: growth and management.

"We had some very good councilmen to work with. We worked together. We didn't always vote together but we always left in peace and harmony," he said.

While Speers served on council, Marion Whitehurst and Sid Oman served as mayors, respectively.

"I tried to get other people interested in politics, but it ended up being that it got me interested," Speers said.

In 1984, after he decided not to run for council again, Speers went to work for the Western Branch Mosquito Control Commission as its superintendent. The commission is controlled by the city.

"We take care of the mosquito population so people can enjoy outdoor recreation. We have to keep roadside ditches clean and spray in the mosquito season to kill the adult mosquitoes," he said.

The commission's top priority is to control the drainage ditches and get rid of standing water. Speers' crew also answers neighborhood mosquito complaints, which it tries to answer that same day.

Speers said his workload has been heavier lately because of all the new development in Chesapeake. Almost all the construction sites have a mosquito problem, he said.

"It's a full-time job just keeping the ditches clean," he said.

Although he holds down a full-time job, Speers still tries to stay

Western Branch's Eddie Speers is an ex-Chesapeake City Councilman. He still tries to remain active in his community.

Speers, who is the grandfather of three, enjoys bird hunting, fishing and an occasional golf game in his spare time. He also belongs to the Churchland Masonic Lodge, the Fleet Reserve Association, the Isaac Walton League and Churchland Baptist Church.

"I've enjoyed my life very much. I don't know whether or not I'd change anything," Speers on top of goings on in the city.

"I'm involved and I'm not involved. I'm still concerned. I think we all should be," he said. "I think we've got some honorable people down there (at City Hall). It's damned if you do and damned if you don't."

said. "I just want to see the next sunrise, see what's on the other side of the hill. I may win the lottery!"

new facility and expanding its youth programs, including summer day camp.

Bashara said the YMCA is seeking additional donations because the race's cost, including T-shirts and insurance, will off-set the donations it has already received. The cost to enter the race is $8 before August 7 and $10 thereafter.

The race will begin at 8:30 a.m., although the city's traffic engineers and police will have the Old Towne streets blocked off at 7 a.m. "I've run in quite a few of these races myself. Old Towne is such a beautiful area and I thought, 'what a nice run this would be,'" Bashara said.

The race will be divided into men's and women's categories. The age groups for both are: 19 and under; 20 to 24; 25 to 29; 30 to 34; 35 to 39; 40 to 44; 45 to 49; 50 to 59; and 60 and over. Trophies and prizes, such as discounts to local restaurants and merchants, will be given to the three top finishers in each category.

"Hopefully, it will be a big event," said Bashara. "That means people who compete can attend this race and compete again in another race for their personal best."

Crawford, who is coordinating the board member volunteers, said the YMCA sent out race flyers to the Virginia Beach Laborfest committee. The flyers invited Laborfest participants to enter the race and visit downtown Portsmouth.

"I hope it's a very positive activity that can be incorporated with Laborfest," Crawford said.

Bashara said the race will be held, rain or shine, because runners are actually cooler running in the rain.

So far, the race committee has rounded up 30 volunteers to help execute the race, but Bashara said she needs more. Anyone interested, including children, she said, is welcome to help hand out water cups or wave flags. Crawford said she will be assisting with registration and chopping oranges for the runners.

"When it's a Striders' event, they sort of bring out their own," she said, but, "I really can see this as being a positive image for the Y."

Public Notice

NOTICE OF INVITATION

TO BID

Notice is hereby given pursuant to Section 15.1-308 of the Code of Virginia of 1950, as amended (the "Code"), that the Mayor of the City of Virginia Beach (the "City"), will accept written bids at 2:00 p.m. on Sept. 18, 1990, at the City Council Chambers, Municipal Center, Virginia Beach, Virginia for service as lessee under a lease amendment to effect the financing described below. The City Council shall appoint such lessee pursuant to an ordinance scheduled to be adopted at the 2:00 p.m. meeting of the City Council on Sept. 18, 1990, in the City Council Chambers.

The City has leased certain parcels of property adjacent to the Municipal Center (the "Property") to First Union Leasing Corporation ("First Union") for a period of forty (40) years from October 13, 1987, pursuant to a Prime Lease. First Union leased the Property back to the City pursuant to a Real Property Lease. The acquisition of the Property was financed by the public issuance of certificates of participation (the "Certificates") representing direct and proportionate interests in lease payments under the Real Property Lease pursuant to a Trust Agreement. The Trust Agreement provides that additional certificates ("Additional Certificates") may be issued on a parity with the Certificates to finance the construction of improvements on the Property.

Other leasing companies or other entities may be added as additional parties to the Prime Lease and Real Property Lease for the purpose of the issuance of Additional Certificates. The City is constructing a new judicial center complex and intends to finance the construction through the issuance of Additional Certificates. The complex will be located on the Property and other real property owned by the City adjacent to the Property (the "Adjacent Property"). The lessee for the Adjacent Property (the "Company") will agree to lease the Adjacent Property from the City pursuant to the terms of an amendment to the Prime Lease. The Company will agree to lease the Adjacent Property and all improvements thereon to the City pursuant to an amendment to the Real Property Lease. All rights of the Company under the Real Property Lease, as amended, will be assigned by the Company to the Trustee under the Assignment Agreement, as amended, and the Trust Agreement, as amended, for the benefit of the holders of the Certificates and the Additional Certificates. The lease payments of the City under the Real Property Lease, as amended, will be subject to annual appropriations by the City Council. The lease term of the Real Property Lease, as amended, will be equal to the last maturity of the Additional Certificates, presently expected to be twenty (20) years. The Certificates will be underwritten by Lehman Brothers, Craigie Incorporated, Legg Mason Wood Walker, Inc. and Wheat, First Securities, Inc.

Copies of the Prime Lease, the Real Property Lease, the Trust Agreement, the Assignment Agreement and drafts of the proposed amendments thereto and other related financing documents are on file at the City Clerk's Office, Municipal Center, Virginia Beach, Virginia. Interested bidders may contact Giles G. Dodd, Assistant City Manager, Municipal Center, Virginia Beach, Virginia, for further information. After review of all bids received at the meeting as set forth above, the City Council shall have the right to reject any and all bids, or approve the bid which it determines to be in the best interest of the City. If any bid is accepted, the City shall adopt an ordinance in substantially the form as is on file at the City Clerk's Office. In accordance with Section 15.1-309 of the Virginia Code, the successful bidder will be expected to reimburse the City for the cost of this advertisement. Pursuant to Section 15.1-312 of the Virginia Code, the person or corporation to whom the award is made shall be required to execute a bond, with good and sufficient security, in favor of the City, in the amount of $100,000 conditioned upon the satisfactory completion of construction of the judicial center complex.

Shane Charles Genopolos, Defendant.

Docket #CH90-1586
ORDER OF PUBLICATION

The object of this suit is for the said plaintiff to obtain a divorce a vinculo matrimonii from the said defendant, upon the grounds of separation for a period in excess of twelve (12) months.

And an affidavit having been made and filed that the defendant is not a resident of the State of Virginia, the last known post office address being 2037 E. Ocean View Ave., Norfolk, VA 23505 and that due diligence has been used by and on behalf of the plaintiff to ascertain in what county or corporation the said defendant is, without effect.

It is ordered that Shane Charles Genopolos do appear on or before the 17th of September, 1990, and do what may be necessary to protect his interest in this suit. It is further Ordered that a copy of this Order be published once each week for four successive weeks in the Virginia Beach Sun, a newspaper of general circulation in this city.

PUBLIC NOTICE

The Federal Communications Commission has designated for hearing the following applications for a construction permit to operate a new FM radio station on FM Channel 271C2 in Virginia Beach, Virginia: New Song Communications, Inc.; HS Communications, Inc.; Ewell Media Company Limited Partnership; The Chesapeake Bay FM Broadcasters Limited Partnership; Virginia Beach FM Radio Limited Partnership; Stacy C. Brody; Pamela R. Jones; VPC, Ltd.; First Century Broadcasting of Virginia, Inc.; Chesapeake Media Communications Corp.; Regional Broadcasting Limited Partnership; Sandfiddler Spectrum Corp.; Craig L. Siebert; and Intracoastal Airwaves Limited Partnership.

The hearing is scheduled to occur at a time and place to be determined. The issues to be determined in the hearing are:

(1) To determine whether the proposals of the applicants would provide coverage of the city sought to be served, as required by Section 73.315(a) of the Communications Rules, and, if not, whether circumstances exist which warrant waiver of that section.

(2) To determine whether Sonrise Management Services, Inc. is an undisclosed party to Song's application.

(3) To determine whether Song's organizational structure is a sham.

(4) To determine whether Song violated Section 1.65 of the Commission's Rules, and/or lacked candor, by failing to amend its application to notify the Commission of the dismissal with prejudice of an application in which one of its principals had an ownership interest.

(5) To determine, from the evidence adduced pursuant to Issues 2 through 4 above, whether Song possesses the basic qualifications to be a licensee of the facilities sought herein.

(6) To determine whether Bay violated Section 1.65 of the Commission's Rules by failing to amend its application to notify the Commission of the dismissal with prejudice of an application in which one of its principals had an ownership interest and by failing to provide current information regarding other broadcast interests.

(7) To determine with respect to Century and Siebert, whether the applicants are financially qualified.

(8) To determine whether there is a reasonable possibility that the lower heights and locations proposed by Song, Bay Limited, Jones, Century, Media and Intracoastal would constitute a hazard to air navigation.

(9) To determine which of the proposals would, on a comparative basis, best serve the public interest.

(10) To determine, in light of the evidence adduced pursuant to the specified issues, which of the applications should be granted, if any.

PUBLIC NOTICE

On July 5, 1990, the Federal Communications Commission, Washington, D.C., designated for hearing the applications of New Song Communications, Inc.; HS Communications, Inc.; Ewell Media Company Limited Partnership; The Chesapeake Bay FM Broadcasters Limited Partnership; Virginia Beach FM Radio Limited Partnership; Stacy C. Brody; Pamela R. Jones; VPC, Ltd.; First Century Broadcasting of Virginia, Inc.; Chesapeake Media Communications Corp.; Regional Broadcasting Limited Partnership; Sandfiddler Spectrum Corp.; Craig L. Siebert; and Intracoastal Airwaves Limited Partnership, all for a construction permit for a new FM broadcast station to operate on Channel 271A at Virginia Beach, Virginia.

The issues to be heard are as follows:

(1) To determine whether the proposals of the applicants would provide coverage of the city sought to be served, as required by Section 73.315(a) of the Communications Rules, and, if not, whether circumstances exist which warrant waiver of that section.

(2) To determine whether Sonrise Management Services, Inc. is an undisclosed party to Song's application.

(5) To determine, from the evidence adduced pursuant to Issues 2 through 4 above, whether Song possesses the basic qualifications to be a licensee of the facilities sought herein.

(6) To determine whether Bay violated Section 1.65 of the Commission's Rules by failing to amend its application to notify the Commission of the dismissal with prejudice of an application in which one of its principals had an ownership interest and by failing to provide current information regarding other broadcast interests.

(7) To determine with respect to Century and Siebert, whether the applicants are financially qualified.

(8) To determine whether there is a reasonable possibility that the lower heights and locations proposed by Song, Bay Limited, Jones, Century, Media and Intracoastal would constitute a hazard to air navigation.

(9) To determine which of the proposals would, on a comparative basis, best serve the public interest.

(10) To determine, in light of the evidence adduced pursuant to the specified issues, which of the applications should be granted, if any.

A prehearing is scheduled to be held before Administrative Law Judge Edward Kuhlmann on September 10, 1990 at the offices of the Federal Communications Commission, 2000 L Street, N.W., Washington, D.C. The hearing is scheduled for October 10, 1990.

A copy of the application of Stacy C. Brody and all related materials is on file and available for public inspection, Monday through Friday, during normal business hours at the Virginia Beach Municipal Center, Reference Library, City of Virginia Beach Offices, Virginia Beach, Virginia.

DRIVER - OVERQUALIFIED? BULL - Let's be honest. We know we have a reputation for hiring the best driving school graduates. This has made drivers with several years in the business think we have no interest in talking to them. WRONG. That's why we're working hard to get the message out there - blowing your horn so speak. J.B. HUNT NOW PAYS DRIVERS FOR THEIR EXPERIENCE

Years Exp.	Pay Per Mile
1	$0.23
2	$0.24
4+	$0.26

A great rate - and more good news. Studies prove our solo drivers average more miles per week than those who work for the competition. And we have 2,100 mile per week minimum guarantee. It all adds up to the best deal on wheels. If you think it's about time you were paid what your skills are worth, take the bull by the horns and contact us: 1-800-218-HUNT. J.B. having the opportunity to job-share rather than taking off a year or more for maternity leave, a teacher can remain current and up-to-date on all changes within the system.

Job-sharing keeps teachers in the classroom. The school division experiences a lower turnover rate because job-sharing teachers are usually current employees teaching less than a full day.

One of the biggest advantages to the school system is that happy teachers make for happy students. By having a fresh and rested teacher for each session, the students are more likely to be motivated and interested in their learning. A kindergarten teacher who has to repeat the same lessons for the afternoon class that she taught to the morning class is more likely to be less enthusiastic with her teaching style. In other grade levels, students benefit because they have an opportunity to deal with two different teachers. If a student has a personality conflict with one of the two teachers, it is reassuring to the child to know that the other teacher is available to him. If the child has a bad morning, there is always a chance for a new start in the afternoon. Children seem to enjoy the variety that having two different teachers brings to their school day.

Teachers also benefit because while earning that second income, they get to spend more time with their families. Teachers also are afforded the opportunity to take advantage of earning advanced degrees in education as well as participating in workshops and seminars.

Without job-sharing opportunities, some teachers may feel compelled to resign from the teaching profession because of the demands required of a full-time teacher. With job-sharing, they can continue to be career teachers who can return to full-time employment without interrupting their career status.

Job-sharing teachers build on each other's strengths as well as having a larger pool of teaching resources and materials. They also can devote more time to well prepared lessons.

We are fully convinced that job-sharing benefits children, the school system and teachers.

Correction

The Virginia Beach Education Association regrets that a chart in the August 8, 1990, Virginia Beach Education Association report in The Virginia Beach Sun was in error. Expected rate increases for the school board employees who select the Optima HMO plan are as follows: subscriber, $12.55 to $23.85 (87.9 percent increase); subscriber and one minor $40.81 to $59.06 (44.7 percent increase); family $110.94 to $147.03 (32.5 percent increase). These premiums could be lowered if the budgeted $1,200 school board/city council contributions were increased.

Robb Visits Virginia Beach

U.S. Senator Charles Robb recently visited ECPI Computer Institute on Greenwicht Road to address the issue of whether trade and technical schools should continue participating in federal financial aid programs.

Members of the newly established Virginia Skills 2000 staff, a committee of elected officials who are working together to raise congressional and public awareness of the importance of trade and technical schools, had representatives present to confer with Robb.

While at the institute, Robb was taken on a tour of the school, and was available to the media and school officials for questions.

Richard Cockrell, Ph.D., city's former agriculture director; Professor Timothy O'Rourke, Ph.D., Center for Public Service, University of Virginia; Professor Ronald E. Proctor, Ph.D., Urban Studies, Norfolk State; Crisanto D. Romero, president, Samahang Pagalog; William A. Schilling, Talbot and Associates; and Herbert Taylor, president, Virginia Beach Council of Civic Organizations.

Dr. O'Rourke was an excellent choice to serve as a commission member. His dissertation for the Ph.D. in political science from Duke University was, "A Comparative Analysis of the Impact of Reapportionment on Six State Legislatures." He was the author of The Impact of Reapportionment, named by CHOICE as one of the outstanding academic books of 1980, and, recently he co-authored with Richard H. Leach, State and Local Government: The Third Century of Federalism, published by Prentice-Hall. His articles on voting rights and election reform have appeared in the Virginia Law Review, the University of Richmond Law Review and the Alabama Law Review.

His 14-page study, "Options for Electing the Virginia Beach City Council," prepared July 13, 1990 for the Mayor's Committee on Reapportionment, has reportedly been the basis for the commission's discussions. It is a scholarly presentation of the various options open for the election of city council members.

After studying the election process used by other Virginia cities and considering various options presented in this working paper, the local government commission may devise a system uniquely suited to our city.

Our City Needs A "Fix"

There is the old maxim: "If it ain't broke, don't fix it!" Surely, the converse is true. "If it's broke, fix it!" In my opinion, the present system of electing council members in Virginia Beach does not meet the test of "one person, one vote," and needs to be "fixed." It is confusing to the public and this may be one reason for low participation in elections. There are many other flaws and, with the shifts in demographics, the system needs a thorough overhaul.

Defining A Borough

The present system was, of necessity, a compromise between Princess Anne County and Virginia Beach when they merged in 1963 to form a city of the first class. Our boroughs are nothing more than the boundaries of the original city and the county's six magisterial districts. These denominated "boroughs" were not equal, in population or size, from their inception!

Technically, according to Webster, "apportionment" means to divide and assign in just proportion. Thus, it is apparent that there never was an apportionment in our city in a meaningful sense.

Conclusions

Semantics aside, it is time to establish 10 fairly-divided voting districts (not wards, please) with residency requirements. Forget about redrawing the boundaries of the existing boroughs. Eliminate all at-large seats except for that of mayor, which would have no residency requirement.

A candidate would run in his/her own voting district and be accountable to the citizens of that area. Citizens would vote for a representative from their voting district only, except when there is a mayoral election. This system would result in fairer representation and with 10 districts, should reflect our diverse population.

The fear of parochialism should not be a concern. In fact, parochialism could exist even when a council member is elected at-large. However, one would hope that every dedicated member of council would think first in terms of what is best for the entire city.

The plan of directly electing one's representative will actually solve many flaws in the present system. The current at-large voting system does not guarantee that a current borough will be able to elect its own representative. This is patently unfair. Besides, this new plan will be better comprehended by the average citizen, who was overwhelmed in the past year election with the task of learning about 24 candidates and in which borough they were running.

With fewer candidates running for single districts, the expense of running for an election would be lowered. Thus, good candidates, who otherwise might not be able to finance a campaign, might be willing to run. Citizens might take more interest in attending forums where there would be time for the candidates to address concerns and make meaningful presentations.

Another result might be overcoming voter apathy or the feeling of alienation. Citizens might be more interested in participating in the process when one of their own neighbors is running as their true representative.

Although I can see certain advantages to a smaller council, I am not so concerned with the size of the council as with the election process itself. With the city's estimated population of 400,000, under the plan of retaining 10 seats, a council member would have a constituency of around 40,000 and that is not unreasonable.

Finally, if the system is changed as proposed here, it will be necessary to review and possibly change the size of voting districts every ten years following a census. But, that is a small price to pay to assure effective representation and effective government of the people, but the people and for the people.

ers attended a meeting, said Bell, and "the meetings or 'rap sessions' were sometimes, well usually, intense. Some students had a lot on their minds and they said it meant a lot to them that we came to their turf to talk to them."

Bell said the unit "was able to clear up some misconceptions and to share information about the planning that's going into Laborfest... Some were unaware of this planning, and thought the city was going in the same direction as last year. Some were unaware about all the city is doing."

Bell said he thinks these meetings were very important, in that they will improve Laborfest visitors' incoming attitudes.

"The students needed someone to address their concerns. We were able to do that," said Bell. "We didn't go anywhere that we thought was a waste of time."

Between these weekly or bi-weekly trips, the unit did not waste time either, Bell said.

"We got ourselves organized. We attended community coordination committee meetings," said Bell. "We met and talked with city police officers about what we intended to do, and we asked them for suggestions. We also talked with other police forces coming down for the (Labor Day) weekend."

"Basically, we've worked with other people and groups," Bell added. "We've made suggestions... we've done research."

One of the ways the unit researched crowd control techniques was to fly to different "crowded events," said Bell. "We flew to Mardi Gras, to Daytona Beach, to Jones Beach... we got some pointers. Some things work well and some things don't."

Bell said that though visiting these crowds provided the unit with some insight, Virginia Beach's Laborfest will be unique, and not everything that works to manage one crowd will work for another crowd.

The unit members feel, however, that "appropriate" strategies for crowd management and manpower allocation will be put into play for Laborfest, said Bell.

"We feel well-prepared for Laborfest," said Bell.

In less than two weeks, the Labor Day weekend, for which the city has been preparing for a year, will be here.

Much has been written about the tangible factors contributing to last year's disturbance, and what positive elements are necessary to ensure this year's success.

Missing, however, in much of the news coverage, is a documented, psychological view of why certain people act in certain ways under certain circumstances.

week to preparing for the campaign, he said.

"As the campaign progresses and it gets down to kick off, you're on the phone calling people," he said.

Money for the campaign is raised through the workplace. Arris said most of the money comes from employee campaigns where United Way volunteers work with company coordinators to collect pledges. Many of the same businesses participate in the campaign each year, Arris said, but the United Way is always trying to bring new businesses on board.

"Believe it or not, there's a whole host of businesses out there who've never participated before. We're working hard to try to identify them," he said.

This year's theme is "Team United Way." The campaign's three spokespersons, local television news anchors Ed Hughes, Alvin Ewell and Barbara Clara, thought of the theme as they worked together, although they're from different stations, to reach this year's goal.

"This year's theme depicts what United Way stands for - team work and caring. It's people working together for the common good," said Arris, whose oldest son was adopted through a United Way agency 29 years ago.

"It's an extremely well-organized campaign. Eight-seven cents out of every $1 raised goes to one of the participating agencies," Arris said.

The overall United Way goal is $10,808,362. In addition, the Combined Federal Campaign, which gives federal and military personnel the chance to support local, national and international charities, has set a goal of $5,923,065.

The Combined Virginia Campaign, which also supports charities here and around the world, is working towards a $274,824 goal.

"The needs are so great in our five-city area," said United Way's president and general campaign chairman, Gary Strickfaden. "So many people are counting on us to be successful and exceed our goals."

"I wouldn't be involved in it if it didn't give me a good feeling. Everybody gets with the spirit. I feel really good about it. If I don't make my goal I'll be mad!" said Arris.

with its elaborate Laborfest planning.

Poor crowd management and unstructured time helped cause 1989's Greekfest fiasco, she said, and "the city has worked hard to make sure these factors will not play into Laborfest."

Sanchez said she thinks one of the reasons cities, such as Virginia Beach, have had racial outbreaks recently and will have to work hard to "not let these occur" is that racism comes up more frequently during economic recessions, "as this country is currently experiencing."

"People become conservative, protective during economically hard times," she said. "They don't want to lose ground, and they see minorities as threats to their own livelihood."

And white people "cannot just escape, like they used to," she said. "In the past, people just moved away when they felt uncomfortable. Now it's very difficult to move away... Minorities are out there receiving good educations and moving into respectable professions. This will continue and (white) people will have to become accustomed to it."

Sanchez said she does not "blame" whites for their territoriality.

She said white people's challenge is to "value diversity, not pretend it does not exist."

She said the city seems to be taking steps to do this.

Virginia Beach's 1989 Labor Day was marred by violence and looting, precipitated some observers say, by the mass infusion of predominantly black college students. Subsequently, "Greekfest" was named "Laborfest."

meals, mentally ready themselves for the stress they anticipate, beforehand."

Woll and others at the mental health department are also preparing city employees for the much anticipated Laborfest weekend.

"This will be a time of situational stress," said Woll. "We're telling people to wear comfortable clothing and to prepare for Laborfest stress."

Two to three people from the mental health department will be on hand at the Pavilion to help "anyone who needs to work through stress," said Woll. "Whether it be a city employee, a volunteer, or anyone else."

Chances For Smooth Labor Day Weekend Are "Infinitely Better" Than They Were Before

ODU Race Relations Specialist Says Young People Will Appreciate City's Efforts

Stories by Kerry L. Hofheimer
Staff Writer

"Chances for a smooth Laborfest are infinitely better this year than they were for Greekfest last year," said Dr. Jerry Carr, an Old Dominion University associate sociology and criminal justice professor, whose specialty is black/white relations.

Last year's Greekfest, an annual Greek party attracting mostly black college students from all over the nation, resulted in looting and riots. The incoming students were held responsibly. Virginia Beach's mostly white police force was charged with cruelty. City officials were blamed for making the visitors feel unwelcome. This year the Labor Day weekend party is called "Laborfest."

Carr said he does not anticipate

Laborfest trouble, because "it seems that the underlying basis for last year's conflict isn't there this year."

This "underlying basis," said Carr, was "the great insensitivity of the city last year in denying black people free access to a public place."

"Last year the city did not 'do the right thing' he said, making a pun on Spike Lee's movie, Do the Right Thing, which some say attributed to 1989's Greekfest uproar, with its song Fight The Power. Some say "the power" means the white power structure.

"Statements coming out of Virginia Beach conveyed an attitude of hostility to the students," said Carr. "The city's police presence during the weekend confirmed this... the city presented an unwelcome and antagonistic appearance to the visitors."

Chances for a positive, peaceful Laborfest this year are good, said ODU race relations specialist, Jerry Carr. Here young people at Laborfest '89 are pictured, apparently having a good time, despite the fact that riots broke out during the weekend.

Carr said the city did not present such an appearance "on purpose," but that rather, "they did it out of blindness... they didn't know better. They didn't think."

Carr said that public access to accommodation is a civil rights issue, which blacks felt the city violated during 1989's Greekfest and "this conjured up memories of 'white only' signs, reminders

Labor Day Task Force Optimistic About Weekend; Task Force Members Confident Hard Work Will Pay Off

Task Force Office Has Answered Phone Calls, Letters; Responsible For Media Coordination

When confronted with a monumental task, such as organizing Laborfest, the challenge is not just to plan well. The best-laid plans are of little worth unless they are well-coordinated.

That's why the city created a Labor Day task force in February, borrowing seven full-time staff members from other city departments and setting up a City Hall office with extra phones and computers.

"Our job is to communicate Laborfest plans with anyone and everyone," said Kathy Hevey, a reference library coordinator on the task force.

"One of our biggest jobs has been fielding citizens' questions," she said. "The phones ring non-stop. We've had over 700 detailed phone calls and letters since February; not routine questions and concerns which can be responded to quickly, but detailed inquiries."

Hevey said the nature of the phone calls and letters has changed since February.

"At first people asked, 'why are we doing this?'" she said. "When plans started to take shape, we got a lot of angry calls about the Red Wing Park plans. Once city council approved these plans, people started asking about the details of the plans, and we've also responded to many reactions to newspaper articles on Laborfest."

Hevey said now people are calling to ask about the access passes.

The city has issued passes which will allow certain cars to use the resort area roads, which will be closed to general traffic during Laborfest. Oceanfront residents, business employees working in the resort area, hotel and motel guests, Laborfest parade participants, Laborfest workers and the media have or will be granted these passes.

Hevey said that due to overwhelming number of phone calls, callers have been put on hold lately.

"We spend a lot of time telling people the rumors they hear about Greekfest and Laborfest aren't true," said Hevey. "It's funny how these rumors spread."

Last year's annual Greek letter/student party in Virginia Beach was called Greekfest. But,

Sun Telephone Survey Indicates That Most Oceanfront Residents Are Uncertain Over This Holiday Weekend

Of The 20 Households Contacted, Most People Will Be At Home, But Not On The Boardwalk

Last year's Greekfest was a terrifying experience for many oceanfront residents, some of whom said they plan to stay home and "protect" their property during this year's Laborfest.

In a random Virginia Beach Sun telephone survey of 20 houses near the Oceanfront, conducted late last week, many residents said they do not expect Laborfest trouble, but they can't help but feel some apprehension about the upcoming weekend.

"I'm going to stay home for (Labor Day) weekend, in case I need to protect my house," said Walter Maloney, a 46-year-old retailer who lives on Baltic Avenue. "Last year was a scare."

Last year during Greekfest, an annual fraternity and sorority party attracting mostly black college students from across the nation, riots broke out and masses of black youth were blamed. The city's predominantly white police was charged with brutality, and city officials were accused of poor planning. Beach merchants lost goods and dollars to repair their damaged store fronts. Many residents were stunned at being called racist."

"And what did we do to deserve all that trouble?" asked N. Adams, a 62-year-old housewife who lives on 21st Street.

Some Oceanfront residents said that they were bothered by noise and traffic trouble during Greekfest last year, but that the worst part of the chaotic fest was that

Psychologist, Race Relations Specialists, Say Goodwill Can't Be Faked

Experts Suggest Residents Stay At Home Unless They Feel Good About Going Out

"Residents shouldn't go out and participate in Laborfest activities unless they sincerely want to," said clinical psychologist and Black Psychologist's Association member Darlene Colson.

Colson said she does not entirely agree with the suggestion made by some city officials and Laborfest planners that residents go out and welcome Laborfest visitors.

"People shouldn't go out and try to show their goodwill to the visitors unless they really mean it," she said. "You can't fake a welcoming attitude when what you really mean is, 'please just don't tear up our place.'"

Last year during Greekfest, an annual Greek gathering in Virginia Beach of mostly black students, riots broke out, because students felt unwelcomed in the city, said Colson.

Some residents feel nervous that this year's college student gathering, called Laborfest, might erupt in more looting and frenzy, said Colson, and these nervous residents ought to avoid participating in Laborfest activities.

"An uneasy attitude shows through," she said. "These people

Council's Last Briefing Before Weekend

Laborfest Weekend Expected To Come Off Without A Hitch

By Lee Cahill
City Council Reporter

Two police officers, who are also city councilmen, have suggested that their colleagues on council think about skipping Laborfest this weekend.

Councilman James W. Brazier, Jr., a captain in the police force, said their presence might create problems for law enforcement personnel.

Holding up his Laborfest ID at a council workshop Tuesday, Brazier said that the ID will permit the wearer to go anywhere, but when council members appear on the scene they create problems.

Added Councilman Paul

Lanteigne, a police sergeant, "When a higher authority is on the scene it gives the impression of looking over your shoulder."

Councilman Harold Heischouer said that he did not have the experience the police officers had, but that he didn't like "anyone looking over my shoulder." He said, however, that he was not going to be at the command post, in any event.

Brazier's and Lanteigne's advice fell on mostly deaf ears, especially since the council members have been invited to be part of the Laborfest activities. Norfolk State University has invited them to view the Saturday parade, and even Brazier, who, since he has been assigned to the Commonwealth's Attorney's office, will not be on police duty at Laborfest, said he would accept the invitation.

3,500 Leukemia Society Volunteers Collect Residential Campaign Funds

By Karen Dalrymple
Staff Writer

Beginning in September, Leukemia Society of America volunteers will be marching across Virginia Beach in a drive to collect funds for the society's annual residential campaign.

Since 1969, Virginia Beach volunteers have been recruited to go door to door, in their assigned neighborhoods, seeking contributions. There are currently 3,500 marchers in the Virginia Beach/Norfolk area, according to Rosalee Baker, state campaign coordinator.

Since its founding, the society has allocated more than $100 million statewide in research grants and service programs. The society supports a patient aid program and assists 425 patients in the state. There are 18 leukemia patients, each of whom will receive a maximum of $750 from the society, in Virginia Beach, Baker said.

This year's statewide campaign goal is $200,000. Baker said approximately $7,500 will be raised in Virginia Beach/Norfolk. Although the Virginia chapter is the third most successful fund-raiser in the country, Virginia Beach is one of the weakest donating cities in the state, said John Heavener, the Virginia chapter's executive director.

"It's improving year after year, with more people becoming aware of the society and its programs," said Baker. "The majority of the people do give. It helps, especially if a person has learned that a member of his family has been diagnosed with leukemia. Sometimes people are so busy, they don't stop to think until it actually hits home, or nearby." Every week, said Heavener, there are 1,500 new cases of leukemia or related diseases diagnosed in the United States. In 1990, 82,600 new leukemia patients will be diagnosed; 46,800 of them will most likely die, he said.

The Leukemia Society deals with four different types of diseases: leukemia, multiple myeloma, lymphoma, and Hodgkin's disease. All four have one common characteristic: the abnormal production of white blood cells.

"They're all forms of malignancies or cancers that have origins in the blood or blood tissue," said Heavener.

The abnormal blood cells serve no purpose, therefore other parts of the body do not form well and the body is left open for infection.

"It's the number one disease killer of children and it's the number one killer of women under 30 and men under 35," Heavener said. "Every 12 minutes, someone dies of leukemia or a related disease."

Heavener said the cause of leukemia has yet to be clearly identified. Researchers have found, though, that some occupational exposures to radiation or chemicals can cause susceptibility to the diseases.

"That's why it's such a devastating disease. It just happens," he

Laborfest Comments by Kerry Lyndsay Hofheimer

Racism Is Passé

In the wake of Saddam Hussein's Middle East power-grab and American hostage collection, Virginia Beach's Laborfest racial concerns seem somewhat petty.

Here is a city, hoping and, in some cases, praying that the blacks and whites who gather here for a weekend can get along. Here is a city going out of its way to try to make sure the students are not the least bit offended. Here is a city analyzing and worrying.

Yet, all the while, here is a country where blacks, whites and all races are uniting as Americans to stand firm against Saddam's power lust.

Virginia Beach, because of Greekfest 1989, has been forced to attempt a generation of changing, in just twelve months, which is pretty remarkable. But look at the country, the world. Who would have thought East and West Germany would be beginning to reunite? Or that Soviets and Americans would be allies against Iraq and young Americans, black and white, would be standing ready to fight on Saudi's border? Who would have thought?

While Virginia Beach has been undergoing a small scale revolution, the world has been transforming before people's eyes.

Let's not lose sight of the fact that if somebody starts throwing chemical bombs this way, no one will have time to worry about racial nuances. Doing the right thing will mean uniting, not rioting and looting and not trying to up keep a white, middle-class city image. "Fight the power" may mean knocking Saddam off his high horse.

If we're going to get petty, let's at least be a little more creative about it. Racism is passé. - K.L.H.

An Ex-Police Chief Predicts

Former Virginia Beach Police Chief W.W. Davis said that if trouble occurs at Laborfest, and hopefully, it will not, it will not happen at the oceanfront resort area or at Red Wing Park, but rather, predicted Davis, it would start at a shopping center or a city park, other than Red Wing Park, where outdoor concerts are scheduled.

Almost everyone is praying that this Labor Day weekend will be violence-free. Let's hope particularly that Davis' prediction is far off base, because if trouble were to break out in these places, police officers would not necessarily be close at hand.

Davis, a 64-year-old Alantown resident, served on the city's police force for 31 years, 13 of which as chief. This service certainly must have provided him with some insight about violence and criminal motivations, so his words have a bit of a bite.

He said young people are not going to want to hang out and party in regimented areas.

"They are going to do this their own way," he said. "These pre-planned bases - they just aren't going to fly."

Let's hope Davis is wrong, because the city is putting a lot on the line for making this weekend fun and entertaining for young people.

Davis' words arouse a bit of worry, however, but let's look on the bright side. If Davis thought of this, surely the current police chief, Charles Wall, has too, and is prepared! - K.L.H.

Congratulations, Task Force

Who could imagine a tougher job than working in the city's Labor Day task force office!

Who would want to, in some cases, be accountable for the city's actions, in regard to Greekfest '89 and Laborfest '90?

Fielding citizens' questions and complaints cannot possibly be fun. "Why'd the city do this? When are we getting our passes?" One can just imagine the headaches.

And yet, some brave and patient souls spent most of this last year focusing on details and being constantly on-call to discuss Laborfest, and occasionally Greekfest.

Let's just be glad there was someone else available and willing to do this.

Hats off to the Labor Day Task Force Office, for its relentless efforts to help ease the city into a smooth and well-orchestrated Laborfest. - K.L.H.

In Search Of Heroes

The Virginia Beach Sun tried to contact Muhammad Ali, Arsenio Hall, Jesse Jackson and other black leaders and celebrities, in search of a public statement calling for peace during Laborfest.

In most cases, the failure to connect with these 20th century heroes may have resulted from press secretaries not following-up as they said they would. We don't know.

But, this is a shame, because Ali, Hall, Jackson or even Spike Lee, Bill Cosby, or the city's own J.R. Reid could have shared some inspiration, could have had an impact. - K.L.H.

Twins Are Twice As Fun

Having a baby is supposed to be a joyous time for most couples. There is a lot of planning and preparations that need to be made before that little bundle of joy comes home. That alone is hard work; the baby just adds to the workload.

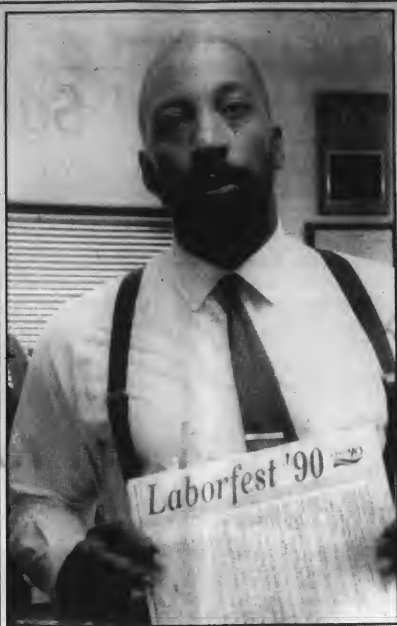

The workload becomes heavier, though, when two babies are involved.

Many couples are shocked to find out that they will soon be giving birth to twins. For some, they are overjoyed. For others, they feel like their world has come to an end. But, eventually, things work out and both babies are loved as much as if they were one.

Mothers and fathers of twins, and even triplets, should be congratulated for their patience. It must be very stressful for a mother to take care of two young children all day while her husband is at work, or vice versa. There are two mouths to feed, two diapers to change, two baths to give, two of everything! With the cost of day care these days, most mothers just have to grin and bear it alone.

Many couples probably aren't financially ready to take on two children at once. Raising a child, not to mention the hospital

Will The Roads Break Hampton Roads Economic Back?

The Citizens Action Coalition is a six-year-old, non-partisan, 300-member civic activist group which monitors city government.

It looks like Hampton Roads will be hit with a $250,000,000-a-year tax increase before too long and it looks like a lion's share of it will come from Virginia Beach.

You many not have heard much about it because not much has been in the newspapers or on TV. It's a little plan being cooked up by your state senators, in a low key manner, to help the Virginia Department of Transportation (VDOT) out of a reported $160,000,000 shortfall of transportation funds for the Hampton Roads area.

Apparently endorsed by the Hampton Roads Chamber of Commerce and the Southeastern Planning District, it will not be called a tax; it will be called user fees and tolls. These tolls and fees can and will be imposed without any fear of adverse voter reaction since they will be imposed by appointed, not elected, members of a transportation authority. Our appointed school boards are excellent examples of the responsiveness of appointed bodies to the wishes of the public. Some might well call this "Taxation Without Representation."

The projects on which the shortfall needs are based are the Southeastern Expressway, $500 million; I-64 Hampton Roads Bridge Tunnel, $1 billion; York River Crossing, $200 million; Midtown tunnel, $150 million; Route 168, $120 million and several others of $35 to $75 million.

It might be of interest to note that some of these projects are the same ones upon which former governor Gerald Baliles used to justify his massive tax increases for transportation four years ago. Why, then, are these projects still not funded? Are they going to be used again and again to raise revenues from the already heavily tax burdened public for projects that will never ever get built?

The estimated total cost of these projects is close to $2.25 billion. With escalating costs, cost overruns, toll collection costs, and maintenance and interest on the bonds, the payback cost will be not less than $5 billion. Over the 20-year life of the bonds, the projects will cost at least $250 million a year. Virginia Beach can well look forward to a dollar or more toll on its existing toll road forever more.

And this may just be the start! Who knows what other projects the authority might decide to build. Once they have the authority they may decide to build sports arenas, museums, a Taj Mahal or anything else they felt like, and at your expense. Once a city agrees to join such an authority they will never be able to get out.

We think this is a bad idea. There is no way that any city, or, for that matter, any group of cities can possibly fund the construction programs that have forced the federal government and the state governments, in the face of increasing debts and revenue shortfalls, to severely curtail expenditures. Tolls and user fees are regressive taxes which will further exacerbate the present economic depression already being felt in the area. Governor L. Douglas Wilder is correct; if revenues are reduced, then cut spending. We certainly do not need yet another level of uncontrolled bureaucracy, with its attendant waste of taxpayers' money.

The Joint Subcommittee Studying Transportation Needs of the Hampton Roads Area, established by Senate Joint Resolution 94, consists of the following members:

Robert C. Scott, Sen. Newport News, chairman; Thomas W. Moss, Del., Norfolk, vice chairman; William Fears, Sen. Accomac; George W. Grayson, Del. Williamsburg; Clarence A. Holland Sen. Virginia Beach; Johnny S. Joannou, Sen. Portsmouth; J.W. O'Brien, Jr., Del. Virginia Beach; S. Wallace Stiefen, Del. Hampton; J. Randy Forbes, Del. Chesapeake; Melvin Butler; Nancy Creech; Ray D. Pethel; Ray A. Conner; and John G. Milliken.

The only public hearing scheduled by the committee will be held on Wednesday, Sept. 5 at 7 p.m. in Room 195 of the Administration Building of Christopher Newport College, 50 Shoe Lane, off Warwick Boulevard in Newport News.

If you feel like we do about this new form of taxation, we sincerely hope that you will attend this hearing and express your views. To have your name added to the speakers list call Senator Scott's office at (1) 380-1000. Even if you do not wish to speak, please attend in order to be counted in opposition.

We do not know the motive behind not having scheduled a public hearing on such an important matter in Virginia Beach, but we have sent a letter to Senator Scott requesting that a hearing be held here. Since we cannot be sure that our request will be honored, please attend the hearing in Newport News. If one is scheduled for Virginia Beach later, plan to attend that one, also.

We also suggest that you call your senators and delegates to the Virginia General Assembly, as well as the members of the Virginia Beach City Council, and voice your opposition. Without their support for the authority, it will probably not be approved. We will keep an eye on this repressive piece of proposed legislation and keep you informed. With your support, we can look forward to a future happy day without tolls.

Race Relations And Laborfest

During the past year, the citizens of our city have tried to sort out the causes and cures for the racial overtones which surfaced during the Labor Day weekend last year. There has been enough blame to go around, but the city and a multi-racial committee have worked to avoid a repeat of 1989's unfortunate incidents.

Some say the city did too little last year. Others say the city has done too much this year. Young blacks indicate they do not want "their party" orchestrated by adults. They prefer a "happening." White residents believe that is what they witnessed last year, in the form of rioting and looting, and they don't want to see it again.

Although a few blacks have spoken out against such lawlessness, blacks in general have tended to blame such behavior on racism. While many black college students have worked with the city to address the problems, others plan to boycott Laborfest '90. In spite of the city's efforts to offer hospitality, some black fraternity and sorority members have stated that they plan to take their business elsewhere this weekend.

Although the Berlin wall has tumbled down and democracy is spreading around the globe, age-old problems remain. The walls of prejudice, bigotry and misunderstanding are still up. In many of our larger cities, racial tensions are high and divisions run deep. Virginia Beach has not been spared.

Promoting better race relations has had a top priority here since last

Shore Drive Residents Protest Pool Hall At Panama Hattie's

It could be that after living with Panama Hattie's for years, even a pool hall looked good to Lynnhaven residents.

Al Stravullo, chairman of the Lynnhaven Civic League, and Les Fenlon, chairman of the Great Neck Association, both gave their blessings to the use permit application of Battlefield Associates to locate a billiard hall in the former location of Panama Hattie's at 2941 Shore Drive.

Councilman James W. Brazier, Jr., who happens to be a police captain, noted that Panama Hattie's is what the community wants to get away from. He recalled that the establishment, made extinct by Internal Revenue Service problems, was the only place where an entire platoon of policemen was assigned to work on a weekend.

Alexander Platt, however, is a neighbor who is skeptical about a new facility, which would include a deli, beer and wine along with the billiard tables. He predicted that after a few weeks "they will move the billiard tables out and start a bar and dancing. Don't let us suffer again," he pleaded.

Howard Sykes, representing the applicant, promised no dancing and no pinball machines. He said that his client was purchasing the building for $700,000.

Anyone who sees another Panama Hattie's there, said Brazier, will object to anything short of a church.

Council approved the application unanimously.

Another application, submitted by "Rack-Em" Family Billiards, did not fare so well.

The application for a use permit was denied by a vote of 9-1, with Councilman William D. Sessoms, Jr., dissenting.

The applicant wanted a conditional use permit for a commercial billiard parlor at 4640 Shore Drive. The facility was described as a family billiards and entertainment center, but Bayside Borough Councilman Louis R. Jones said that it did not sound like a family center to him.

The establishment planned to serve mixed drinks as well as beer and wine and would remain open until 2 a.m. Jones said that the use would back up to condos, and, if nothing else, would be a noise problem. He said that the establishment would not be for families, but for the military.

the North Beach Condominium /Homeowners Association, opposed the application. He said that he could not find another use of this type that close to a residential neighborhood.

Regional Transportation Authority Up To Residents

The proposal to establish a regional transportation authority centers on whether localities want the General Assembly to address its transportation short-fall problems, or whether the localities in Hampton Roads want to address their own problems.

Dwight Farmer, chief transportation engineer for the Hampton Roads Planning District Commission, told Virginia Beach City Council at a recent work session that the commission has not endorsed the authority, but, rather, studying the proposal.

As a result, the Senate Joint Resolution 94 Study Committee has looked at the proposal presented as an alternative to part of the state's transportation program.

New approaches have been investigated by the State's annual shortfall, for Hampton Roads transportation needs of $160 million and the absence of federal funds for transportation for the next four to six years.

The proposed federal policy calls for a "partnership with state and local governments," which Farmer said means more local funding.

The authority as now envisioned would be composed of the Hampton Roads jurisdictions, with each jurisdiction having two members on the governing body. The authority would be empowered to fix charges, collect tolls, borrow money and to build roads, although it would also have the authority develop mass transit.

Projects would require a two-thirds majority vote for approval, and also the approval of the locality in which a project will be located will be necessary, to bring the project on line.

Farmer said that no locality would have a project forced on them.

Farmer said that eminent domain is not addressed in the enabling legislation, but that he did not suppose the authority would have it.

Authority members would be designated by the respective councils, Farmer said.

Councilwoman Nancy Parker asked what the authority could do that the Virginia Department of Transportation can't do. She said that it would just create another level of bureaucracy. She also does not like the idea of every locality, no matter the size, getting two votes.

Farmer said that the authority's advantage would be that it would address the area's specific needs, while VDOT's approach would be state-wide.

Sen. Robert C. Scott is the joint study committee chairman. Virginia Beach members serving on the committee are Nancy Creech, Sen. Clarence A. Holland and Del. J.W. O'Brien, Jr. Chesapeake members are Ray A. Conner, commissioner of the revenue; and Del. J. Randy Forbes.

City Personnel Take Over Highway Functions

City personnel will take over highway administration and construction inspection functions now performed by the Sverdrup Corporation, a construction management engineering firm.

City council, however, renewed the Sverdrup Corporation's contract for 90 more days to allow for the transition. The cost, said City Engineer A. R. Shaw, should be no more than $300,000.

City staff reports indicating that $20 million had been saved in road projects by employing the firm were questioned by Councilman James W. Brazier Jr., who pointed out that according to the company's own graphs, the projects supervised by the contractor are consistently behind, while the staff-administered projects are consistently ahead.

"I think savings is not real unless you don't have to spend money out of the budget," said

Councilman Paul Lanteigne.

City Manager Aubrey V. Watts Jr. said that there is no question that some of the savings were a direct result of the market conditions, but some were also a result of better efficiency and the ability to track bids. He said that the city has received a direct benefit by bringing in outside expertise.

Watts also said that the efficiency of the city's operations has dramatically improved because of the outside expertise. He said that four years ago (the city hired the contractor in July of 1987), he could not say that the city has the same efficiency level.

"Now we can move in an orderly manner. We can take over the responsibility . . . but, it's because of where we are now," Watts said.

Watts said that a decline in the tempo of subdivision and individual site construction activity will make available personnel which can be moved to Public Works projects. A total of 15 positions are needed. He said that no additional personnel will be hired unless someone is needed with specific expertise.

Lanteigne suggested that if the city personnel had been doing the job all along, more money would have been saved. He tried to reduce the contract extension to 30 days, but his motion failed by a vote of 8-2, with only Brazier and Lanteigne voting in favor. Councilwoman Reba McClanahan was absent.

Councilman Harold Heischob said that the contractor originally brought a degree of expertise when the city needed it very badly.

"They have performed a service to the city," Heischob said. "The city manager responded to what this council

Mothers Of Twins Share Their Thoughts On The Ups And Downs Of Raising Twins; Moms Often Lean On Each Other For Support

By Karen Dalrymple
Staff Writer

Jan Kelley's day begins early. When she doesn't have an exercise class, she spends her mornings at the zoo, visiting friends or running errands.

Sounds like an average morning, doesn't it? But, Kelley's are a little more hectic than most mothers' because her children are with her every step of the way.

And Kelley has twins. "I find it hard to stay home with them all day," said Kelley, a College Park resident.

Once the morning rituals are over, Kelley prepares lunch, which she said she has to wolf down in order to assist Daniel and Lauren, her almost two-year-old twins. Next comes play time and then it's down for a much needed nap.

When Kelley's husband arrives home at 6 p.m., he takes over the workload and lets his wife relax.

"It's a busy day. We just collapse on the couch at 9 p.m. when they go to bed," she said.

The Kelleys are just one of many couples who are blessed with two babies instead of one. Virginia Beach General Hospital, for example, reports that 33 sets of twins were delivered last year, averaging two to three sets per month, except in July, which produced seven sets of twins.

Some couples learn ahead of time that they're having twins. Some choose not to know. And sometimes the doctors just can't tell, as was the case with Kathy Girdler, Tidewater Mothers of Twins Club president, and her husband, Jeffrey.

The club's annual picnic will be held on Sunday, Sept. 9 at 3:30 p.m. at Princess Anne Park. "We didn't know until after the first one was born. Handling one baby is bad enough. It's a shock. It's a little more than what you anticipate," said Girdler, mother of three-year-old twins, Joshua and Benjamin.

Kelley, who is expecting another child in October, knew early on that she would give birth to twins. She said she was "terrified."

"I found out at 12 weeks. They did an ultrasound on me and 'surprise!' she said. "I cried. You think, 'how can I handle two babies at once?' After that, we got realistic. But, it's scary."

Girdler, a Salem Village resident, said she found that the first year with twins is the most difficult. Feeding time wasn't easy, said Girdler, who nursed her babies. Carrying two of everything was also no bowl of cherries, she said.

"It's double everything," she said.

Girdler, who has a total of five children, four of them boys, said once the twins began walking, it became easier to care for them. The tow-headed toddlers, who look identical, are growing and learning at the same rate, she said.

"We think they're identical. They have their own bond, their own language. They communicate with each other," said Girdler, who has no history of twins in her family.

Kelley's twins, on the other hand, are fraternal. She said her son looks like her husband and her daughter resembles her.

"They act alike, but sometimes I wonder if it's only because they're 20 month old twins," said Kelley, who added that the twins' behavior changes often.

The Girdler twins are close, but often they have different personalities. Ben has more of a temper and flies off the handle easily, and Josh is more easy-going, the "baby" of the family, said their mother.

"They don't like to be separated. They like to stay together," she said. "They have to be able to get along with each other."

Kelley said her twins may have a certain bond, but she doesn't know because she has no other children to compare them to. The Kelleys often spend time with the children separately, so they're not always together.

"They'll have each other when the baby comes," said Kelley.

Although Kelley and Girdler have experienced some difficulties in raising the twins, both have had a shoulder to lean on when the going got tough. Kelley is also a member of the Tidewater Mothers of Twins Club, a national organization that has served the area for 22 years.

Girdler, club president, said the 76-member club was started as a philanthropic organization as well as for research and support.

"Our purpose is to broaden the understanding of those aspects of child development and rearing, which relate especially to multiples, through the interchange of information between parents, educators, doctors and others with direct interest and appropriate experience," she said.

The club, which consists of members from Virginia Beach, Norfolk and Chesapeake, meets at Humana BaySide Hospital once a month. Many of the club's members are in the military, like

"We open it up, too, to parents with more than twins. One girl has triplets," said Girdler. "There's still more out there to reach."

Kelley, who has lived in the area for about 18 months, said the group has helped her immensely. She said she has made many close friends whose children are the same age as her own.

Club members give each other advice and helpful tips, talk about problems and plan parties and picnics.

"The City's Been Very Good To Me"

Pavilion's Assistant Convention Center Manager Courtney Dyer Began Booking Special Events As A Teen; Ten Years Later, He's Still At It

By Karen Dalrymple
Staff Writer

Courtney Dyer had no idea as a teenager that his part-time job at the Virginia Beach Dome would be the start of a promising career.

Dyer, assistant convention center manager at the Pavilion, began his tenure with the city in 1972 at the Dome snack bar. He was promoted to events supervisor during his senior year at First Colonial High School.

While attending Old Dominion University, Dyer worked nights and weekends at the Dome until he graduated in 1980. That same year, the Department of Convention and Visitor Development, then part of the Department of Economic Development, moved into the Pavilion.

"I was doing this on a flexible schedule. I just kind of stuck with this. The city's been very good to me," the Red Mill Farms resident said.

In the early '80s, Dyer was still events supervisor, acting as a liaison between the groups that rented the facility for special events.

"Now, I handle a lot of bookings for the building. Most of my job is setting up and coordinating most of the events here," he said.

Dyer said he handled about 697 events last year at both the Pavilion and the Dome, including the annual Hit or Miss Tent Sale, the Custom Auto Show, the Mid-Atlantic Sports and Boat Show and various parties and meetings. He is also in charge of the city's three parking lots.

"This is all I've ever known," he said. "There's a big variety of events here. You deal with a variety of people from all walks of life. People put a lot on the line when they hold an event here. I don't like to let people down."

When Dyer's not planning a Pavilion event, he is also a Virginia Beach Rescue Squad volunteer. He joined in 1981, he said, as "my return to the community." He said he spends about 16 hours a week with the squad. He is currently an emergency medical technician, which involves work in a field that he would like to pursue further, he said.

One - On - One Interview

Dyer is married to Linda, former director of the Eastern Seals Society and author of the book, Pretty Me.

The couple teaches a six-week classes at Leggett Department stores for young girls on etiquette, charm, good grooming, table manners, poise and posture. "She's (Linda) the creative one, I'm just the business manager," said Dyer, who has a six-year-old daughter and one on the way.

Dyer also belongs to the International Association of Auditorium Managers, the Monarch Business Society.

Dyer said his strong work ethic and sense of responsibility to his job and staff are what make him tick. He has no immediate plans for the future, but he does know he's staying right where he is.

"I'm happy here. I see so many people who struggle through life changing jobs. I don't have the desire to risk going somewhere and not enjoying it," he said. "I may get old and gray here. I never would have thought ten years ago that I'd still be here."

Virginia Beach Center For Arts Premieres Film Series

The Virginia Beach Center for the Arts will premiere the film series, Film As Art/The Art of Film, beginning in October and continuing through April of 1991.

Comprising 33 feature-length and short films in 10 evening programs, Film As Art/The Art of Film is designed to showcase a variety of cinematic genre, according to Lynn Somers, the center's director of education.

Documentaries, artist-made films, foreign films, film noir, as well as American and European independent releases, are included. Titles were chosen for their critical acclaim, audience appeal and unusual aesthetics.

Some examples include two 1960s French New Wave cinema-cop films, Pierrot le Fou and A Woman is a Woman, by the renowned and controversial director Jean-Luc Godard; Japanese Experimental Film 1960-1980, a curated program of 20 short works by Japanese artists and photographers on loan from the American Federation of Arts, New York City; and Speaking Parts, a feature film by Canadian director Atom Egoyan that premiered in 1989 alongside sex, lies and videotape at the Cannes Film Festival and New York Film Festival.

Film As Art/The Art of Film includes the following titles and dates:

October 19 - 21, Friday, 7 p.m.: Saturday and Sunday, 2 p.m.: Wuthering Heights, United States, 1939.

November 13, Tuesday, 7 p.m.: Pierrot le Fou France 1965; and A Woman is a Woman, France, 1960. November 29, Thursday, 7 p.m.: Let's Get Lost, United States, 1989; and Minnie the Moocher and Many, Many More, United States, 1983.

January 10, Thursday, 8 p.m.: Investigators of a Citizen Above Suspicion, Italy, 1970.

January 22, Tuesday, 8 p.m.: L'Avventura, Italy, 1960.

February 5, Tuesday, 8 p.m.: Japanese Experimental Film 1960 - 1980, Part I.

February 12, Tuesday, 8 p.m.: Japanese Experimental Film 1960 - 1980, Part II.

February 21, Thursday, 7 p.m.: Speaking Parts, Canada, 1989; and Burden of Dreams, United States, 1983.

March 14, Thursday, 7 p.m.: Mr. Hulot's Holiday, France, 1953; and Mon Oncle (My Uncle), France, 1958.

April 18, Thursday, 7 p.m.: Genevieve, Great Britain, 1953; and Yellow Rolls Royce, Great Britain.

Several of the programs will feature guest speakers, both regional and national experts in the field of art and film, who will provide an educational and entertaining dimension to the viewings. Speakers will be announced at a later date.

A series subscription ticket, including admission to all 10 programs, is available for $34 for Virginia Beach Center for the Arts members; and $37 for non-members. Admission for individual screenings is $4 for single features; $5 for double features. Films will be screened in the Center for the Arts' Price Auditorium. Refreshments will be available.

A brochure with more details and film descriptions is available by calling the Center for the Arts at 425-0000.

VBCA Hosts Modern Dance Group

The Virginia Beach Center for the Arts will present "Chris Burnside and Dancers" in an evening of contemporary dance on Oct. 12 at 8 p.m.

Burnside and his company are currently based in Richmond. A nationally known dancer, choreographer, and teacher, Burnside began dancing in Richmond, and after a performing career in Los Angeles and New York, he returned to Virginia in 1985.

His work has a broad appeal, ranging from performance art to storytelling to dance. This concert will contain works from his repertory, as well as the premiere of a new work, I'll Return and Show You the Way. The music for the new work is by composer Jo Tornabene. Also on the program is The Jump, a story about Burnside's "what I did for love" life as a performer while living in New York.

The concert will also include: The Chair, a dance/theater piece featuring Richmond actor Jay Lund (music by Martin McCavit); Sixx, a solo for dancer Daria Heim (music by Jonathan Romeo and Mark Langeleier); and Oh Lucy, a second monologue by Burnside concerning the odd jobs he had to do along the way to support a "passion for performing."

Interweaving dialogue and dramatic elements with lyrical, sensuous movement, Burnside's choreography draws on classical and modern traditions, as well as on new movement techniques and improvisation. Through both comedy and poignant satire, he addresses universal themes such as sexuality, rites of passage, the dynamics of aggression and passivity, and conflict in the Nuclear Age.

In 1987, Burnside opened the Virginia Museum of Fine Arts' "Fast/Forward" performing arts series.

Besides Richmond and New York, Burnside's work has also been seen and critically acclaimed in Philadelphia and Washington, D.C. While living in Los Angeles, he danced with Bella Lewitzky and taught at the University of California, Los Angeles. In New York, he has performed with John Bernd, Jane Comfort and Tim Miller, among other professional troupes. Currently he is an associate professor in the department of dance and choreography at Virginia Commonwealth University in Richmond.

"Chris Burnside and Dancers" is partially funded with a grant from the Virginia Commission for the Arts. Tickets for the concert are $5 for Virginia Beach Center for the Arts members; $7.50 for non-members. For reservations, telephone 425-0000.

The Center for the Arts is located at 22nd Street and Park Avenue, across from the Pavilion Convention Center, at the west-bound entrance to the Virginia Beach-Norfolk expressway.

Biology Teachers Receive Awards

A Virginia committee of the National Association of Biology Teachers (NABT) has selected Kellam High School teacher Mary Chappell to be Virginia's recipient of a merit award.

Chappell was awarded the 1990 Outstanding Biology Teacher Award for her excellence in teaching biology in the state of Virginia. She was recognized for her contributions and leadership as a biology teacher in the state.

Chappell's selection brings to seven the number of Virginia Beach teachers selected during the 1980-90 school year who have been recognized as tops in the state in their profession.

The other honored teachers were, Marie Larsen, American history; Daughters of the American Revolution; Doris Reidel, athletic director, Virginia Athletic Directors Association; Mary Sue Crommelin, speech, Virginia Speech Communication Association; Jean Gordon, business education, Virginia Business Educators Association; Leslie Quinlan, reading resource, Virginia Reading Council; and Neola Waller, math and science, National Science Foundation.

DMV Closed Labor Day

All Department of Motor Vehicles offices will be closed Monday, September 3 in observance of Labor Day.

Anyone traveling over the holiday weekend should consider the following tips:

✓ Get plenty of rest before the trip and take frequent breaks.

✓ Be alert for pedestrians crossing roadways.

✓ Don't mix alcohol, drugs and driving.

Remember, the best time to renew driver's licenses and license plate decals is the middle of the month. Avoid the first and last few days of the month and the day after a holiday.

Watch Out For Me

I'm Richard Hoffer, a Virginia Department of Transportation construction inspector on the Princess Anne Road widening project in Virginia Beach. When you're driving through this area, keep an eye out for my co-workers and me. We're working to keep your roads safe, so please slow down and stay alert.

tal bills, is very expensive. Families on a budget must be extra conservative once the twins come along.

On the brighter side, there can also be benefits to having twins. There's always a playmate available for either of them, so mom doesn't always have to play with toy trucks or Barbie dolls. Most twins also have a special bond which means they would probably get along much better than most siblings.

Twins can be great fun, so couples who find out they're carrying twins, should be happy. They have double the amount of good times to look forward to - K.L.D.

Kathy Hevey, a municipal reference specialist who has been working in the Labor Day Task Force office since February, said her desk has been "filled with things to do" all year.

Kathy Hevey and Robin Kellogg, Labor Day task force members, sort through Laborfest access passes.

Task Force

after rioting and looting marred last year's weekend, its name was changed to Laborfest.

"We've also had some amusing calls," said Hevey. "Some oceanfront residents are actually planning on moving during Labor Day weekend. They call up wanting to know if they'll be able to do this."

For the most part, though, the task force is engaged in very important work. It is responsible for seeing that city departments take outlined plans given to them by the city's Laborfest Community Coordinating Committee, and create actual plans for action from these outlines, Hevey said.

"We make sure traffic management, emergency medical crews, police and fire departments come up with operational plans," she said.

The Labor Day Coordinating Committee, the 90-member citizens group doing the actual Labor Day planning, doesn't interact directly with city departments on a consistent basis, said Hevey.

"It is our job to do that, to see that the committee's plans are understood and applied," she said.

The task force has also kept busy organizing and distributing Laborfest passes, readying color-coded T-shirts for volunteers who will be working during the weekend, coordinating Laborfest newsletters and communicating with the media.

Hevey said the city has worked extra hard to let the media know what an impact Laborfest coverage will have on Virginia Beach.

"We feel, overall, that the media gave a false perception of Labor Day weekend last year," she said. "We've been telling the media this year how important it is for the city that their coverage accurately reflect what goes on during Laborfest. We don't want to control them, but we would hope that they would be especially careful to be fair and accurate this year."

Hevey said that she thinks, if anything, "the media will be bored this year."

She said she also thinks, "if anything, the city is overprepared for Laborfest."

"Anyone who has not been involved can't conceive of the amount of forethought and planning that has gone into this," she said.

And it all started immediately after last year's Greekfest, she said.

"The Labor Day Review Commission, comprised of about 12 black and white Virginia Beach leaders, formed on its own to review 1989's Greekfest," she said. "From that commission, the community coordinating committee was formed. It's a city-appointed group of diverse citizens, from college students to businessmen to politically active residents. At first there were 36 members. Now there are 73."

"This committee came up with the idea for a task force," she said.

The American Heritage Dictionary defines "task force" as a "temporary grouping of forces and resources organized for achieving a specific goal."

"The task force was designed to coordinate the various (sub-) committees' plans and communicate with the city," Hevey said.

"Originally there were just four on our staff, but in about two weeks, we realized that wouldn't be enough.

"We're doing something that has never been done before," she said. "The whole city is. We're treading out into new territory and it's exciting and exhausting."

Hevey said she has enjoyed being part of the city's Laborfest planning effort, because "it's invigorating to be working with diverse people toward a common goal... I've learned a lot."

Hevey said she also has worked harder "than possibly ever before in my life." She said she and other city employees, despite receiving their usual salaries, have put in many overtime hours.

"We attend night meetings, we work late. We do whatever extra needs to be done," said Hevey.

But, Hevey said, she and others are not complaining.

"We're trying to bolster the city. It needs it. People realize that effort put in now is very crucial," she said.

Hevey said that on September 15, she and others on the task force will go back "to business as usual."

Efforts of racism throughout history.

"The city did not even realize it was violating this," he said. "The black students felt outraged and the city could not fully grasp why."

This year, however, the city is "not acting with such ignorance," said Carr. "It is trying to do the right thing."

Virginia Beach has "come around 180 degrees," Carr said. "It is trying to make the students feel welcome here."

Carr said he thinks visiting students, knowing the effort the city has put into planning for their arrival, "will not have reason to feel antagonized... There are, of course, some unknown factors. I don't know for sure if the Virginia Beach police will behave."

"I don't expect problems, though," he said.

Carr said there is a lesson to be learned from 1989's Greekfest.

"For many reasons there is tension between blacks and whites," he said, "and because of that, it's incumbent for people to do the right things at all times."

In order to do "the right things," which Carr said means acting in a conscientious manner, "black and white people need to learn about each other and be aware of each other's feelings and wishes."

Slice, who records on the Creative Funk records label, out of Washington, D.C., said he has known since July that he would be playing during Laborfest.

He also said he heard about 1989's Greekfest trouble, "but that does not bother me. I don't think there will be trouble this year," he said.

"I'm just hoping that everyone who comes out for Laborfest has one thing on their minds," he said. "I hope they're all out to have a great time."

said.

Leukemia patients are prone to colds, bruising, recurring infections, swelling of the lymph glands, weight loss, anemia, night sweats and overall weakness. A blood test will indicate whether leukemia is present in the body, Heavener said.

There are several forms of treatment for leukemia and related diseases, including bone marrow transplants, radiation or chemotherapy. The bone marrow transplants, Heavener said, are successful, but a person's body may reject the transplant. Most leukemia patients, he said, undergo chemotherapy or radiation treatments, sometimes both.

"If we could increase our research funding, we could possibly find a cure," he said. "We think it's a good chance that by the year 2000, we'll be able to cure leukemia of all types."

Leukemia is not always fatal, Heavener said, as it was 20 years ago. Today, there is a 90 percent cure rate for Hodgkin's disease, and the country's 220 leukemia-related disease researchers are making improvements every day, he said.

"Today, because of our research and the doctors were turning out of med school, were saving 60 to 70 percent of the children," said Heavener.

If a child is diagnosed as having the disease at an early age, Heavener said he may go through three years of chemotherapy and be "cured," which means there are no longer any signs of leukemia in his body. But, unfortunately, the chance of a relapse, although it is slim, is still present.

"We were afraid to use the word 'cured' until two years ago," Heavener said.

The residential campaign is just one of many fund drives that the society holds each year. With those funds, more research can be done to find a cure sooner, Heavener said.

"We hope people will open their hearts and really participate in the campaign," he said.

wants... the Sverdrup Organization are good people and will be available to train the (city) people. The thing we do not want to forget (is that), once trained, the people will be an asset to the city for evermore."

Heischberger added that a 90-day training period would be better than 30 days.

In using in-house personnel for the job, the city is continuing its efforts to trim expenses. Recently council decided against hiring an outside firm to handle the title searches and other services needed in connection with the Sandbridge beach replenishment program. The city attorney and city manager's offices will do the work instead.

Rae LeSene, Citizens Action Coalition chairman, questioned paying city employees who will be performing the inspections jobs from project funds. He said that the city, in effect, would be balancing budget with borrowed (road bonds) money.

"It was out of control and nobody knew to what extremes the rioters would go," as a 40-year-old insurance salesman, who lives on 20th Street and wished to remain anonymous, put it. "I'm seriously hoping that that will never, ever happen again."

Most of the people interviewed said they will be in town during Laborfest, but that they do not plan to go out to any of the fest's concerts or participate in other weekend events.

"You gotta be crazy if you think I'd get involved in that," said 27-year-old Patu Martin, a housewife who lives on Regency Drive. "I wish they wouldn't have it."

Lillian Gualeni, a 59-year-old homemaker who lives near the beach and who didn't want her street identified, has similar remarks. "No way would I participate," she said.

Jeanne Jarnagin, a 28-year-old school teacher, said that she does plan "to go out and check things out," during Laborfest despite the fact that last year, "there was all kinds of trouble down here - noise, traffic, etc."

The following are other responses and comments residents had:

A 66th Street resident said she was home for Greekfest last year, and "partly because of that, I'll be going out to town for Laborfest."

Kathy Roberts, a 28-year-old landscaper who lives on 81st Street, said she was home for Greekfest last year, "and I had traffic trouble." She said she will be in town for Laborfest, but will not participate.

Jana S. LeCompte, a 58-year-old Bruton Lane resident, said she was away, "by chance," during last year's Greekfest, but she will be here for Laborfest. "I won't participate in those parties, but not because of last year's trouble. I wouldn't anyway."

Dave Osborne, a 44-year-old medical transcriptionist who lives on Holly Road, said he was in town for 1989's Greekfest and did not experience trouble. He said he will be around for Laborfest, "but I won't participate, because I'll be working. Otherwise I might check it out," he said.

Mary Gonzales, a 37-year-old teacher who lives on Atlantic Avenue, said she was in town for Greekfest last year. "I worked on the beach that weekend," she said. She said she will be in town for Laborfest, but won't participate.

A Wye Lane resident who wished to remain anonymous said he will stay home during Laborfest "to protect what I've got."

A Longstreet Avenue resident said he was home for Greekfest last year and that he will be in town for Laborfest. "I might go out for the parade," he said.

J. Moore, a 24-year-old carpenter who lives on Chapel Lake Drive, said he was home for Greekfest, and "I had all kinds of trouble." He said he will be in town for Laborfest, but won't participate.

"I was here for Greekfest and I can't tell you how bothersome it was," Moore said. "A car load of those kids almost ran me off the road. I probably would have participated more last year, but I would have had a run-in with some of them."

M. Abrams, a 64-year-old housewife who resides on Fighter Drive, said she was here for Greekfest last year and did not have any trouble that weekend. She said she will not participate.

M. Carter, a 32-year-old woman on disability who lives on Shoreham Court, said she was here for Greekfest and experienced no trouble, but that she knows others who did. She said she will be in town for Laborfest, but that she probably won't participate.

Leonard Ruchelman, an Old Dominion University urban studies and public administrator professor who specializes in race relations, said he agrees with Colson.

"If people are nervous or skeptical about Laborfest, they probably shouldn't attend," he said.

If, on the other hand, residents feel comfortable about the visitors coming for the weekend, Ruchelman said, "I'd say by all means go out and participate. If residents possess upbeat attitudes toward the occasion, it will make for a more positive weekend."

Scenes like this one, from 1989's Greekfest, plus noise and traffic problems experienced that Labor Day weekend, have oceanfront residents feeling uncertain about the approaching Laborfest.

J. Addington, an Oceanfront resident who did not want to give his street, age, or occupation, said he was here for Greekfest last year and that he'll be here for Laborfest, but won't participate.

An 89-year-old female, who resides on Millers Lane but wished to remain anonymous, said she was home for Greekfest last year and will be here for Laborfest, but will not participate.

Lavora Gregowski, a 77-year-old retired Chapel Lake resident, said she was not in town for Greekfest, but will be here for Laborfest. She said that she will not participate.

J.V. Grimstead, a retired senior citizen who lives on Norfolk Avenue, said he was home for Greekfest and did not experience trouble. He said he will be in town for Laborfest, but will not participate.

James Jones, a retired 66-year-old 72nd Street resident, said he was in town for Greekfest and "had no trouble at my house." He said he will be here for Laborfest, but will not participate.

how to do the right things, if they are going to act out of ignorance and not be sensible to racial issues, then they ought not attend," he said.

Ruchelman said it's a matter of "understanding other people" and that to acquire this understanding, people of different races should interact with each other.

"If you don't interact with people of different races, you perceive them the way you want to perceive them," he said. "People are not so different just because they are of different races."

"These differences, or perceived differences, are magnified by ignorance," Carr said.

Every season, the community looks forward to the annual events that have become such an integral part of our summers at the beach! The Boardwalk Art Show is held each June along the boardwalk, from 18th to 30th Streets. There, you can find anything from oil paintings to the most modern pieces of sculpture. This event just completed its 35th year, with more than 350 artists exhibiting from the United States, England and Australia. If you did not have the opportunity to attend this summer, plan now not to miss June 13 through 16, 1991!

Another annual event, which has helped to promote Virginia Beach up and down the East Coast for 28 years, is the East Coast Surfing Championships, planned and hosted by the Virginia Beach Jaycees. Always held the end of August, this year on August 24 through 26, it features amateur and professional surfing, skateboarding, wind-surfing, volleyball and lots of good food and entertainment. All of the activities are held right on the beach, between the jetty and 6th Street.

The summer would not be completed without our anchor event, the Neptune Festival. In its 17th year, the festival consists of a variety of smaller events that lead up to the boardwalk celebration weekend which features food, entertainment, the grand parade and, of course, King Neptune himself! This year's festival is scheduled for September 15 through 30.

In addition to the annual events, there are many others that occur throughout the summer months. This summer we were fortunate to attract some new major sporting events. The Eastern Virginia Off-Shore Racing Association's Power Boat Race and the International Jet Ski Boaters Association's World Tour were held in May and July, respectively, and we hope they will become annual events to the oceanfront as well.

Fireworks light up the resort sky all summer, from May to August. Some fireworks shows are held to commemorate the summer holidays and others just help us to celebrate summer in Virginia Beach! Five to six shows are scheduled each summer and believe me, they help to excite the child in all of us. If you have missed the fireworks so far this summer, you still have one more chance to see them on Thursday, Sept. 6 at 10 p.m. from the Virginia Beach Fishing Pier at 14th Street.

All of the programs and activities held in the resort area are designed to make the oceanfront a fun and festive place to be. I have highlighted just a few of the many activities available for you to take advantage of during the summer. Please be my guest and come enjoy the sunational Virginia Beach oceanfront!

September. The city has long proclaimed that its programs, activities and employment opportunities are available to all people regardless of race, color, religion, sex, age, national origin, handicapped status or political affiliation. It appears that the city has made a good faith endeavor to carry out this policy, not only in its hiring practices, but also in its dedication to correct past problems.

Labor Day weekend 1990 will determine whether these efforts have been effective and whether the extensive planning, along with the expenditure of time, energy and money, has addressed the vital problems. The city and its special committee have made an extraordinary effort to restore the city's good image. People of good will - blacks and whites - have come together to resolve a problem that is not confined to our city.

Earlier this month, our newspapers reported two cases involving race relations. One was the Marion Barry trial, which has left a bitter after-taste. Some contend Barry would not have been on trial had he been white. In a recent Newsweek article, Roger Simon of The Baltimore Sun wrote, "Marion Barry figured out early that his trial wasn't about drugs. It was about race."

Black columnist William Raspberry agreed and called on Barry to apologize for the shame he has caused the city and the nation. He continued, "It pains me to hear black youngsters say with such obvious conviction that he was prosecuted only because he was black. ... They believe, because Barry has encouraged them to believe, that the prosecution of any black official is per se, racial persecution."

On the verdict in the Barry trial, which has become almost as controversial as the trial itself, Patrick Buchanan wrote, "Loyalty to race supersedes any commitment to right and wrong, truth or justice. ... Racial entitlements - black set-asides in contracts, affirmative action and quotas - has only deepened racial hostility and moved us further from the ideal of color-blind justice, where men are judged not on the color of their skin, but the content of their character."

The other controversial case has been called "hypocritical reverse racism," which would not have happened had the actor not been white! This was the decision by Actors' Equity to deny the actor the right to play a lead in the hit musical Miss Saigon, a show which ironically deals with racial prejudice.

Black columnist Clarence Page wrote, "Because theater is an art of illusion, all performers should be judged by no standard other than by how well they can create and preserve the illusion." Although the Union's decision was reversed, after 600 members of the show had been done.

No matter how Laborfest 90 turns out, the citizens of our city and of the Hampton Roads area have recognized that racism is an evil against any race. Perhaps they have formed a basis for better race relations in the future.

As Roger Simon concluded, "Today one hopes that those . . . who are so passionately divided might some day dream together of an America where skin color does not make one a target, but neither does it shield one from judgment."

... if you got involved in shaping the school's programs,

... if you let your elected representatives know where you stand on the subject of education.

Have you ever noticed how people rate public schools higher when their own children are attending? The reason is, they're familiar with what goes on in those schools. They're not operating on preconceived notions or second-hand reports.

We invite you into your schools to find out for yourself what is happening and to share your views about what you want to happen.

If more people operated on firsthand experience with today's schools and made their views known, our schools would fare better. Our children would respect their education more.

Imagine What Virginia Could Become . . .

... if the work force were endowed with critical thinking skills and the ability to learn and retain as needs change, ... if a people with vision and a state with commitment made education their top priority.

How well our children can adapt their skills to meet new demands will determine how well we as a state can prosper. How they view life will determine Virginia's quality of life in the 21st century. As communities, we can set higher expectations for our schools and the students we educate. We must want more for them, and we must act on that basis.

If we truly want our children to reach for the stars, our schools to strive for excellence, our work force to adapt to new challenges, our state to pursue prosperity, then, we must be the ones to make it happen!

"Imagine - Make It Happen" is our public relations theme this school year. We are buying television and printed media ads as well as distributing community brochures extolling excellence in education.

Public Notice

NOTICE OF INTENTION TO BID

Notice is hereby given pursuant to Section 15.1-308 of the Code of Virginia of 1950, as amended (the "Code"), that the Mayor of the City of Virginia Beach (the "City"), will accept written bids at 2:00 p.m. on Sept. 18, 1990, at the City Council Chambers, Municipal Center, Virginia Beach, Virginia for service as lessee under a lease amendment to effect the financing described below. The City Council shall appoint such lessee pursuant to an ordinance scheduled to be adopted at the 2:00 p.m. meeting of the City Council on Sept. 18, 1990, in the City Council Chambers.

The City has leased certain parcels of property adjacent to the Municipal Center (the "Property") to First Union Leasing Corporation ("First Union") for a period of forty (40) years from October 13, 1987, pursuant to a Prime Lease. First Union leased the Property back to the City pursuant to a Real Property Lease. The acquisition of the Property was financed by the public issuance of certificates of participation (the "Certificates") representing interests in lease payments under a Trust Agreement. The Trust Agreement provides that additional certificates ("Additional Certificates") may be issued on a parity with the Certificates to finance the construction of improvements on the Property.

Other leasing companies or other entities may be added as additional parties to the Prime Lease and Real Property Lease for the purpose of the issuance of Additional Certificates. The City is constructing a new judicial center complex and intends to finance the construction through the issuance of Additional Certificates. The complex will be located on the Property and other real property owned by the City adjacent to the Property (the "Adjacent Property"). The lessee for the Adjacent Property (the "Company") will agree to lease the Adjacent Property from the City pursuant to the terms of an amendment to the Prime Lease. The Company will agree to lease the Adjacent Property and all improvements thereon to the City pursuant to the Real Property Lease. All rights of the Company under the Real Property Lease, as amended, will be assigned by the Company to the Trustee under the Assignment Agreement, as amended, and the Trust Agreement, as amended, for the benefit of the holders of the Certificates and the Additional Certificates. The lease payments of the City under the Real Property Lease, as amended, will be subject to annual appropriations by the City Council. The lease term of the Real Property Lease, as amended, will be equal to the last maturity of the Additional Certificates, presently expected to be twenty (20) years. The Certificates will be underwritten by Lehman Brothers, Craigie Incorporated, Legg Mason Wood Walker, Inc. and Wheat, First Securities, Inc. Copies of the Prime Lease, the Real Property Lease, the Trust Agreement, the Assignment Agreement and drafts of the proposed amendments thereto and other related financing documents are on file at the City Clerk's Office, Municipal Center, Virginia Beach, Virginia. Interested bidders may contact Giles G. Dodd, Assistant City Manager, Municipal Center, Virginia Beach, Virginia, for further information. After review of all bids received at the meeting as set forth above, the City Council shall have the right to reject any and all bids; or approve the bid which it determines to be in the best interest of the City. If any bid is accepted, the City shall adopt an ordinance in substantially the form as is on file at the City Clerk's Office. In accordance with Section 15.1-309 of the Virginia Code, the successful bidder will be expected to reimburse the City for the cost of this advertisement. Pursuant to Section 15.1-312 of the Virginia Code, the person or corporation to whom the award is made shall be required to execute a bond, with good and sufficient security, in favor of the City, in the amount of $100,000 conditioned upon the satisfactory completion of construction of the judicial center complex.

Public Notice

PUBLIC NOTICE
The Federal Communications Commission has designated for hearing the following applications for a construction permit to operate a new FM radio station on FM Channel 271C2 in Virginia Beach, Virginia: New Song Communications, Inc.; HS Communications, Inc.; Ewell Media Company Limited Partnership; The Chesapeake Bay FM Broadcasters Limited Partnership; Virginia Beach FM Radio Limited Partnership; Stacy C. Brody; Pamela R. Jones; VPC, Ltd.; First Century Broadcasting of Virginia, Inc.; Chesapeake Media Communications Corp.; Regional Broadcasting Limited Partnership; Sandiford Spectrum Corp.; Craig L. Siebert; and Intracoastal Airways Limited Partnership.

The hearing is scheduled to occur at a time and place to be determined. The issues to be determined in the hearing are:
(1) To determine whether the proposals of the applicants would provide coverage of the city sought to be served, as required by Section 73.315(a) of the Communications Rules, and if not, whether circumstances exist which warrant waiver of that section.

(2) To determine whether Sonrise Management Services, Inc. is an undisclosed party to Song's application.

(3) To determine whether Song's organizational structure is a sham.

(4) To determine whether Song violated Section 1.65 of the Commission's Rules, and/or lacked candor, by failing to amend its application to notify the Commission of the dismissal with prejudice of an application in which one of its principals had an ownership interest.

(5) To determine, from the evidence adduced pursuant to Issues 2 through 4 above, whether Song possesses the basic qualifications to be a licensee of the facilities sought herein.

(6) To determine whether Bay violated Section 1.65 of the Commission's Rules by failing to amend its application to notify the Commission of the dismissal with prejudice of an application in which one of its principals had an ownership interest and by failing to provide current information regarding other broadcast interests.

(7) To determine with respect to Century and Siebert, whether the applicants are financially qualified.

(8) To determine whether there is a reasonable possibility that the tower heights and locations proposed by Song, Bay Limited, Jones, Century, Media and Intracoastal would constitute a hazard to air navigation.

(9) To determine which of the proposals would, on a comparative basis, best serve the public interest.

(10) To determine, in light of the evidence adduced pursuant to the specified issues, which of the applications should be granted, if any.

A copy of the application of Ewell Media Company Limited Partnership, together with amendments thereto and related material, is on file for public inspection at the public library in Virginia Be

This map shows the designated traffic area for this weekend.

Portions Of Resort Area Closed To Vehicular Traffic

Everyone is welcome at Laborfest, but to manage traffic and avoid congestion, a portion of the resort area has been designated as traffic controlled (see area within bold lines on map). From 7 p.m. Friday, Aug. 31 to 6 a.m. Tuesday, Sept. 4, vehicle access into this area will require the display of a windshield pass. Vehicles without passes will be diverted to satellite parking areas where TRT Shuttle transportation will be available to the oceanfront and Red Wing Park. Within this traffic controlled area, vehicular traffic will be restricted on Atlantic Avenue from Rudee Inlet to 42nd Street and on Pacific Avenue from 9th Street to 31st Street (Laskin Road). Laskin Road, Birdneck Road, and Pacific Avenue north from 31st Street, and Atlantic Avenue north from 42nd Street will be open to traffic.

Residences within the traffic controlled area will be mailed two passes per household. Passes for apartments and condos will be distributed through the residence management. Passes not received in the mail by Aug. 17, additional passes and guest passes may be obtained at the City Treasurer's Office, 19th and Arctic Avenue, Monday through Friday from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Any proof of residence in the control area will be accepted.

Passes for employees businesses will be distributed at the Ocean Occasions' Office, 19th and Pacific, adjacent to the Dome, Monday through Friday from 1 to 4 p.m. Business will be required to bring a list of employees and proper identification. Short-term parking available in the Dome parking lot. For additional information, contact the Resort Programs Office at 422-1000.

Registered hotel/motel guests with paid deposits will receive vehicle passes from the hotel/motel in a confirmation package. Visitors arriving without confirmed hotel reservations will be diverted to the Visitor Information Center to make hotel arrangements and receive passes.

soms, Jr., said he would be "Joe Citizen," not a councilman. Sessoms, who lives at the beach, said he always enjoys running on the boardwalk on weekends, and this weekend, that's what he plans to do.

In the information she received from Laborfest planners, said Mayor Meyera Oberndorf, didn't see anything about command posts and decision-making. Lantegne said that it is difficult for the staff to say it does not want council members around.

Councilwoman Nancy Parker, who lives in one of the areas where residents will need passes to come and go, said that she was there last year and intended to be there this year. "I wouldn't put my nose in police business," she said. "I intend to work down there."

Brazier said that he was merely considering the safety factor. "It might be wise to not even wear my badge," remarked Heischhofer.

And, a number of council members indicated that while they may be at Laborfest part of the time, they weren't about to keep the same late hours as the young people who are expected to holiday in the city over the weekend.

As "L." Day approached, spirits were high that the weekend will go off smoothly.

Andrew Fine, a co-chairman of the Labor Day Community Coordination Committee, told council that he was giving his farewell address. He and Dr. Harrison B. Wilson, also a co-chairman of the committee, have been reporting to council weekly for several months on plans for the event.

Fine asked for the prayer and good wishes of fellow citizens, and said that all races and religions will be treated equally. He said that when decisions had to be made, the committee chose public safety over convenience. "See you on the boardwalk," he said. Fine said he would be there "absolutely."

The Rev. Larry Edwards, chaplain of the Daytona Beach Police Department, who has been assisting the committee, offered further prayers for a successful Laborfest when he gave the invocation at the council meeting.

Oberndorf said that she would watch the parade on Saturday morning, and while she is at Laborfest, she said, she would not make any administrative or strategic decisions.

Councilman Robert W. Clyburn said that he had to work this weekend, but "I don't want people to get the impression I'm leaving town... I would like to see the parade," he added.

Office Of Environmental Management Is Far-Reaching

Stories By Lee Cahill
City Council Reporter

The Office of Environmental Management is the new kid on the block among city agencies, but it already gives indications of becoming one of the most far-reaching in the city.

So far, said director H. Clayton Bernick III, 90 percent of the office's efforts have been poured into the city's Chesapeake Bay Preservation Program.

Mary Morris, environmental programs coordinator, has chaired a 20-member committee of city staff members in a ten-month effort to meet state regulations. After that, Bernick told city council at a work session, the office plans to expand into other environmental areas.

What will be needed are more personnel - the office has only three members - and more money. Bernick said that additional funds would have to come from grants and perhaps the redirection of city resources.

Among the $135,000 in grants secured so far by the office is a $25,000 grant from the State to hire a full-time staff person to help administer the Chesapeake Bay Preservation Program. The city will have to match the grant with another $25,000, but not all in cash. Some of the matching funds will be made up by other city services.

The employee, who will be an environmental information coordinator, is expected to be on board in November. The duties of the new member, in time, will extend to other environmental issues.

The complexity of environmental regulations will raise questions among citizens, which the office plans to answer with an environmental hotline. The service proposed by Bernick would be available on a 24-hour, seven days a week basis, using the office's voice mail telephone number, which has received little use since it was installed in April.

The phone line would be unmanned and allow citizens to leave recorded messages for office staff or other city staff members to follow-up during normal working hours.

Plans are for the service to go into effect in October.

Council will vote on the Chesapeake Bay Preservation Program ordinance on Sept. 18 when a budget also will be proposed to implement the regulations. Other than the $25,000 grant award, the State has not come up with funding for the state-mandated program.

The local program, Bernick said, will meet minimum state requirements and leaves little room for flexibility. The law and regulations require local governments in Tidewater to regulate development on lands important to protecting water quality. Sept. 20 is the deadline for adoption of the local programs.

State regulations call for a 75 percent sediment reduction and a 40 percent nutrient reduction for each lot, through the establishment of buffer areas and the submittal of detailed site plans for development review approval.

An appeal process is provided. The local ordinance proposes that council appoint a five-member appellate board to hear such appeal requests.

In reply to a question from Councilman James W. Brazier Jr., Bernick said that one of the significant costs will be legal costs which the State has not offered to offset.

City Financial Review Committee Proposed

Councilman Paul J. Lantegne has proposed the establishment of a financial review committee of 13 people to review and make recommendations on all aspects of city finances.

The committee, which would be appointed by city council, would be composed of two council members; a member from each of the seven boroughs and four members at large. Under the resolution submitted by Lantegne, the committee would be abolished after the adoption of the 1991-92 Operating Budget.

The committee would provide a way to get citizen input for the budget process, which will be affected by the federal deficit, the State budget shortfall and a general slowdown in the economy.
